

FI, June 1940 , "Once Again, Lenin and Luxemburg" by Walter Held

" A Word about the Biographer"(This is a critique of Froelich's RL, the German edition published in France 1939. It is an attack on PF.)

"Is There a Decisive Contrast between VIL and RL" : There is a footnote which refers to VIL's "12 Years" and tries to play down any difference VIL introduced into his "What Is To Be Done".

"RL's Theory of Spontaneity", in which he claims that she ~~did~~ "did confine the tasks of the party to agitation and propaganda. The rest she left to the masses. As against the VIL formulation of the tasks — organize the revolution — she stands much closer to the Menshevik slogan (the slogan of the revolutionary Mensheviks of 1905, not that of the government Mensheviks of 1917) — Unless the revolution. "

"The Spartacus Uprising" : "Rosa's political mistake of Jan. 1919,] so catastrophic for the German Movement".

He blames her for the defeat even though when he quoted it Froelich not RL.

P. 50: "Spartacus, on the other hand, in accordance with its conception, disclaimed the task of controlling and leading the mass movement; fell victim to revolutionary dilettantism of the left GEPD leaders of the ~~EM~~ Ledebour type ..."

"RL's Theory of Acc. of Capital."

"Is RL's Theory of Acc. the Basis of her ^{Inadequate} ~~her~~ conception of the Party?"
