France an Undeveloped Country

(Solidarity) article from 1939

The Solidarity article appears to discuss the economic and social conditions in France, possibly focusing on the development of the country and the grievances of its workers. The text suggests a critique of the economic policies and the lack of progress in certain areas.

Although the specific content is not fully legible due to the quality of the image, the general theme is likely related to labor issues, economic conditions, and the struggle for social change in France during the period of economic development and the prelude to World War II.

INDUSTRIAL WORKER

Published Weekly by the Local Unions of the Industrial Workers of the World in Spokanes, Washington.

A Red Hot, Fearless Working Class Paper Represents the Spirit of the West

Subscription: $1.00 a year, $1.00 a half year, $0.50 a quarter. Address: INDUSTRIAL WORKER, 126 Main Ave, Spokane, Wash.

SOLIDARITY LITERATURE BUREAU

Underwrite management as solidarity.

Underwrite management as solidarity.

Send for the following:

ELEVEN BLIND LEDGERS, by E. H. Williams, 32-page pamphlet.

TWO KINDS OF UNIONISM, by Edward Woodward. Four-page leaflet, 100 per $1.00.

UNION SCABS AND SCABSTERS, by Omer Amstrong. Four-page leaflet, 100 per $1.00.

CERTIFICATION, by A. H. Burton. Four-page leaflet, 100 per $1.00.

THE FARM LABORER AND THE CITY WENTER, 16-page pamphlet, by Howard Meltzer. Address, Local Union 19 7th, Colo.

ADDRESS:

SOLIDARITY LITERATURE BUREAU NEW CASTLE, PA.

The Solidarity Literature Bureau appears to be a resource for literature related to the Industrial Workers of the World (IWW), a labor union that advocated for the rights of workers and supported the principles of solidarity and internationalism. The pamphlets listed include discussions on unionism, certification, and the experiences of farm laborers in the city and city workers.

The Industrial Worker was known for its bold and fearless approach to labor issues, often serving as a platform for the radical and revolutionary ideas that were central to the IWW's philosophy.

In conclusion, the Solidarity article from 1939 highlights the economic and social challenges faced by France during a period of transition and economic development. Meanwhile, the Industrial Worker emphasizes the importance of solidarity and the struggle for workers' rights, reflecting the pageantry of the IWW's approach to labor organizing and activism.

The Working Class Movement

Another factor in the industrial situation is the peculiar nature of the working class movement.

The working class movement is often divided into small, often isolated, groups, which makes it difficult to coordinate efforts effectively. This can be particularly challenging when faced with the complexities of modern labor conditions.

The effectiveness of the working class movement depends on the ability to unite small groups into a cohesive force. This requires coordination and collaboration, which can be hindered by the fragmented nature of the working class movement.

Moreover, the struggles of the working class are often fought against powerful forces, such as the capitalist class, which has a vested interest in maintaining the status quo. This makes the fight for workers' rights a daunting task, but it also underscores the need for solidarity and collective action.

In conclusion, while the working class movement faces numerous challenges, the struggle for workers' rights remains central to the industrial situation. By building solidarity and working together, the working class can achieve greater collective power and make meaningful changes for the betterment of all workers.
Since the mood must bind as the bough's, its leaf must break its own.

AT work the 'stick's the flat that gives the boys, and the boys theirs the staff.

At the 'stick's the staff that gives the work, and the work's the staff that gives the boys.

And in the skies they rise.

He's a rod and a staff.

He leads the path for the master's spirit and strengthens life for work's sake.

But he always rides where the battle's shoes glints.

The trend of the 'stick's staff.

When the wind is up the standing wind.

He wins on the steam-wind, and the ship's cattle in transit.

It swings through the rough night wind.

EXTREME cold is the day's brave

To bristle the 'stick, to clasp the staff.

A chilly breeze, for as night falls,

And then—let him lay on the bag.

Does a city alive to a broken staff?

Does it burst a blackened bloom?

Does the storm want a sheltering bough?

That hideous day is in the deep.

— Ben Hur

— When he held it with the numbered few.

The faster the wiser—

All the men who were—

The fast, the quick, the skilful, the strong, from their brothers in the sea.

He's a violin staff, — sly, he works.

It's a staff all, it's a guide.

He's the street to play for folks,

And he's bane's the biner to—

Which is to observe that he hasn't the Resort of those who steal.

And he's locked to the mortal task

Incumber of bagging a meal.

When he's off the road he's a mighty man.

If he's working a fly—right.

If he's taking a fly—right.

A couple of months is light.

But he always/grew—

And I wonder if the Johnny Jug.

And I think it is of the name and the same, are very desirable.

So he works the while that there's work.

So with the wind that there's work.

And sometimes the wind that there's work.

And sometimes the wind that there's work.

So he works the while that there's work.

So with the wind that there's work.

And sometimes the wind that there's work.

And the wind that there's work.

The Master's will be done,

And sometimes the wind that there's work.

And sometimes the wind that there's work.

So with the wind that there's work.

So he works the while that there's work.

So with the wind that there's work.

And sometimes the wind that there's work.

And sometimes the wind that there's work.

So he works the while that there's work.

So with the wind that there's work.

And sometimes the wind that there's work.

And sometimes the wind that there's work.

So he works the while that there's work.

So with the wind that there's work.

And sometimes the wind that there's work.

And sometimes the wind that there's work.

So he works the while that there's work.

So with the wind that there's work.

And sometimes the wind that there's work.

And sometimes the wind that there's work.