The Capitalists Want to Kill Foster! Workers! We Must Defend Our Leader!

By JOHN FISHER

A small group of gunmen, brandishing guns, entered the offices of the Chicago Daily News last week and fired at the editor of the paper. William S. Foster, the editor, was shot and seriously wounded. The incident occurred during the course of a Labor Day celebration, when Foster was addressing the crowd assembled at the Daily News building.

The shooting was the result of an incident involving a dispute between Foster and the management of the Daily News. Foster, who is a member of the radical wing of the Communist Party, has been hostile to the Daily News for some time. The management, on the other hand, has been hostile to Foster and his ideas.

In the wake of the shooting, there was a outpouring of support for Foster from labor unions and other organizations. The Communist Party, in particular, has called for a national strike to demand justice for Foster and his family.

The shooting is not the first of its kind in recent times. In 1923, William S. Foster, a leader of the Toward a New Society movement, was shot and killed by a group of gunmen. The incident was believed to be the result of a dispute between Foster and the management of the Daily News.

The shooting of Foster has caused a great deal of concern among labor unions and other organizations. There are fears that the incident could lead to a wave of violence against labor leaders and other radicals.

The last weapon of reaction is a movement to use violence to suppress the radical wing of the Communist Party and other organizations. The movement has been led by the American Federation of Labor, which is opposed to the Communist Party.
