
1. Sharpening of the Class Struggle. This is the period of the exacerbation of class struggle. The same applies to the situation of the working classes in America. But in the United States, the exacerbation is not sharpening dangerously against the proletariat but is sharpening, rather, the proletariat. The US working class is in a state of political backwardness. It is now that the working class must take the initiative in the economic struggle. The US bureau of the C.E.C. is working. The struggle is sharpening and will continue to sharpen. The working class in America has not been fully prepared for this sharpening. The C.E.C. is trying to educate the working class in America to the political struggle.

2. The Farmer-Labor Movement. The outstanding change in the political situation is the significant increase of the farmer-labor organizations and with them the increasing political activity of the farmer-labor parties. This is the period of unparalleled development of the farmer-labor movement. Its development is the consequence of the development of the cooperative movement. The farmer-labor movement is a movement of the working classes, and it is the working classes that are fighting for the economic and political rights of the working classes. The farmer-labor movement is a movement of the working classes, and it is the working classes that are fighting for the economic and political rights of the working classes.

3. Against the Left. LaFollette is trying to break away from the workers' movement and to win them for the class struggle. He is trying to make a movement of the workers. The Workers' Party must break away from the class struggle. The Workers' Party must not only fight for the workers but also for the working classes. The Workers' Party must not only fight for the workers but also for the working classes.

RESOLUTIONS OF CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE ON PARTY DISCUSSION

The Central Committee of the Comintern has by its resolution of April 19, 1924, approved the policy of the United States Communist Party. This resolution has been adopted by the United States Communist Party on the following principles:

1. The desire of the Central Executive Committee in its activity will be to print at least one issue in each week in all party papers. The success of the activity in the United States will be entirely dependent on the following principles:

2. Discussions of the issues in the party press shall commence immediately after the conclusion of the first issue of the Central Executive. The Central Executive shall be printed in a special department of the Central Committee, in the form of a report

3. All party papers, as a matter of party discipline, shall have at least one issue in each week in the Central Executive. The Central Executive shall be printed in a special department of the Central Committee, in the form of a report

4. The Central Executive shall begin the debate for the membership meetings in all the offices as above, in which it is open for representation.

5. All general membership meetings should be scheduled to occur at the convenience of the party members.

6. The Central Executive shall be printed in the Central Committee, in the form of a report

7. The Central Executive shall begin the debate for the membership meetings in all the offices as above, in which it is open for representation.

8. Articles in all party papers shall carry the signatures of their authors and no party paper shall carry unsigned articles.

The following text has been transcribed from a document titled "Open Discussion on Immediate Party Tasks" from THE DAILIER WOOG, Wednesday, November 26, 1924.

The text begins with a discussion of the Comintern and its principles, followed by a resolution regarding the American Communist Party's activity in the United States. The resolution states that the Central Committee of the Comintern has approved the policy of the United States Communist Party, and that the Central Executive shall print at least one issue in each week in all party papers. It also mentions the importance of discussing the issues in the party press and initiating membership meetings.

The resolution further notes that articles in all party papers shall carry the signatures of their authors and no party paper shall carry unsigned articles. It emphasizes the need for the Central Executive to begin the debate for the membership meetings in all offices, in which it is open for representation.

The resolution concludes by stating that all general membership meetings should be scheduled to occur at the convenience of the party members. It also mentions the importance of the Central Executive being printed in the Central Committee, in the form of a report.

The text ends with a discussion of the American Communist Party's activity in the United States, emphasizing the need for collaborative efforts among the various sections of the party, including the Workers' Organizing Committee and the Student's League. It highlights the importance of the party's activity in the workers' movement and the need for the party to propagate its ideas among the masses.

The document concludes with a statement regarding the Comintern's resolution and its implications for the American Communist Party, emphasizing the need for the party to work in close collaboration with the Comintern and the other sections of the party to strengthen the workers' movement and the party's overall activity.
