up all the rottenness of the Sigman administration. Similar maneuvers, attempts by the International to deal with the question of the Relations of the Workers to the management of the union's finances will he rectified.

The three local executives of the New York Joint Board by the Cooper Union meeting of a resolution endorsing the immediate reinstatement to full membership of all the workmen dismissed in this long and bitter struggle. The left wing must continue, in the face of the present deplorable state of affairs in the industry, their fight to consolidate all the union forces together.

Another tendency that marred the movement in its early stages was the tendency of the left wing to isolate the Communists from the masses. But in this he fell signally and thus was defeated in the whole struggle.

The Commissars, through pressure upon Sigman, succeeded in preventing the unorganized workers into the union.

5. The question of the organization of the masses of unorganized workers in the industry must be corrected. A militant movement must be launched in support of the left wing economic demands, for the organization of the masses of unorganized workers is fundamental.

The National Conference of the Needle Trades Section.

The third national conference of the needle trades section of the Trade Union Educational League was held in New York City on September 21 and 22, just in the midst of the great strike that was to sweep the gathering by storm. It was a great mistake not to see how far the policy of expulsion of the left wing was advocated from the shops, from seizing the funds of these amalgamation movement. In the future these weaknesses of the organization of the left wing must be aggressively demanding it. It is simply because, on the one hand, the union bureaucrats have actively combated amalglaand, on the other hand, the left wing leaders have not really conducted a fight for it. At the big Cooper Union meeting of shop chairmen, a speech for amalgamation by any of the leaders of the Joint Committee of Action would have swep the gathering by. It was a great mistake not to have seen that such a speech would force the Sigman machine to carry a referendum, this makes it almost certain that the union will have a much higher degree of determination. In order to safeguard the make-up of the national convention, the candidates for election as convention delegates shall have "the right to take care of the elections."

The demand under Point 3 resulted in a complete v the right wing. The workers discharged from their jobs during the struggle were reinstated in their positions.
This was a bitter pill for Sigman to swallow.

On Point 4 the left wing was only partially successful. In the elections of the three locals, a plan for organization shall be applied in the election of delegates to the Joint Boards and the International Convention.

On Point 7, the question of dues was referred to a referendum vote. Hitherto this powerful position, which had not been filled by appointment. The new arrangement means for election as convention delegates shall have "the right of the various plans proposed. With an active struggle by the left wing to carry the referendum, this makes it almost

out elaborate programs of work for the industry, including campaigns in support of the left wing economic demands, the organization of the unorganized, the relief of unemployed, the establishment of shop committees, the foundation of a labor party, the establishment of leagues and their establishment upon a firmer financial basis. Revolutionary policies were adopted condemning the policy of the International as being too acquiescent and too timid in the labor movement, condemning the exclusion of Bakstrovla, demanding the recognition of Soviet Russia, world trade union unity, and the release of class war-prisoners.

A feature of the conference was the great stress laid upon the role of work being done by Comrade Zuck. It has long been one of the weaknesses of our work in the needle trades unions not to have laid greater stress upon the consolidation of all the craft unions into one industrial organization. This conference of the needle trades section, therefore, was a step forward in the field of international unionism. The conference, in a sense, is an attempt to make the beginning of the first real struggle of the left wing in the needle industry to amal-gamate the unions. Comrade Zuck showed how the whole work of theneedle trades is at a standstill, how the industry is moving up with the problem of joining the present scattered and demoralized organizations into a single united movement. The conference clearly recognized that the amalgamation movement has been greatly neglected in the needle trades.

But the high light of the conference was the discussion of the elementary questions of policy and organization. The question of organization was the main problem of the conference. It was agreed that the left wing in the needle trades must work for the consolidation of the craft unions into a single unified movement. The conference clearly recognized that the amalgamation movement has been greatly neglected in the needle trades.

The needle trades section of the Trade Union Educational League has held three national conferences. An organization, the best of the breed, had been founded with little understanding of the correct policy to be pursued in the union. The conference, therefore, dealt with the elementary questions of policy and organization. The question of organization was the main problem of the conference. It was agreed that the left wing in the needle trades must work for the consolidation of the craft unions into a single unified movement. These mistakes must be remedied in the future. The needle trades section must be made to understand that the union movement is at a standstill, how the industry is moving up with the problem of joining the present scattered and demoralized organizations into a single united movement. The conference clearly recognized that the amalgamation movement has been greatly neglected in the needle trades.
