Anarchist-Murders Two Comrades

The auto and motor car makers are making intense efforts to suppress the Miners' and Oil Workers' strike. In Milwaukee, the strike committee announced that it had received a telegram from Comrade Harkoff, one of the three men who were murdered in that city. It was said that he had been shot outside the Rockford Cabinet Company by eight men, who were under arrest for the murder of Comrade Harkoff.

The automotive industry has been one of the most active in the strike movement in the U.S. since the war. Indeed, it seems to be the only industry where the workers have been able to make any real progress. The companies have been forced to adopt new methods of production, and the workers have been able to organize effectively.

High Profit For bosses

The auto bosses have long enjoyed increasing profits. For instance, in 1925, the profits of General Motors were $35,000,000. In 1926, they were $50,000,000. In 1927, they were $75,000,000. In 1928, they were $100,000,000. In 1929, they were $125,000,000. In 1930, they were $150,000,000. In 1931, they were $175,000,000.

Workers' Organization

The workers have been组织 the United Auto Workers in an attempt to organize all the workers in the industry. They have been able to secure some gains, but they have also encountered a lot of resistance from the companies.

"Peace Guaranteed"

In the battle of the auto workers, the bosses have been constantly fighting for peace. They have promised to give in to the workers if they will stop the strike. The workers have refused to give in, and the strike continues.

The following is an excerpt from a letter written by the Workers' Commissar of the U.S.S.R., to the workers of the world:

"The struggle of the auto industry is the struggle of all the working class of the world. It is a struggle for the rights of the working class, for the right to organize, for the right to strike, for the right to a decent living."
