The Unity of the Communist Party

"The sessions of the Communist Party national committee just concluded have been of the greatest importance and value for the work of the Party and the present situation.

The Manifesto which it unanimously adopted, published in yesterday's Daily Worker, is a document of more than passing significance for the American people.

It is a trustworthy guide which charts the course which can secure the majority of the people the maximum security and progress.

It is a document to be studied, to be applied in life in the days immediately ahead. Amid all the systematically manufactured confusion of the press, it makes clear what should be done, and what is being done. The leadership of the American people is to be protected against the fascist menace.

The Manifesto begins: "The People of the United States are in a national emergency situation." From this it deriveth all the necessary conclusions for the people to use as a guide. This is an emergency situation because there is a clear, clear, and complete link between the interests of the whole world and the interests of the American people. In the national emergency, the value of the national emergency cannot be exaggerated.

It is a continuation of the clear course on the understanding which has characterized the guidance which the Communist Party under the leadership of Earl Browder and William Z. Foster have so consistently forged.

This guidance has been tested and proven to be right and good, on which it is based is solidarity with the people, unaltering defense of their purposes, and consciousness which is the lodestar of the struggle.

The moving call of the Manifesto of the National Committee for a "People's Program of Struggle for which the Communist Party has become the bulwark of the laboring class, whose most advanced individual constitutes its membership.

Browder has been placed in position. But his leadership was infused in every action of the sessions. The seeds he planted within the Party are today bearing good fruit. American labor can feel secure in this tested leadership of Brookd, of whom the majority of the people of the United States are the Party's委会支持．

The responsibility now is to bring to the American people the guidance which the Communist Party has made available in the Manifesto it has issued to meet the enormous problems of the hour.
