Dulles Foments Civil War in Italy

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

The assumption of Secretary of State Dulles of a war-making role for the United States in Italy by a group of U.S. Army generals and an American civilian in Italy, the former a general in the U.S. Army, who is also a member of the U.S. military mission to Italy, and the latter a civilian, is a development that should be taken seriously by the Italian people. The fact that Dulles has been in Italy for several days and that he is now in the country is a significant development.

In fact, Dulles has been in Italy for several days and that he is now in the country is a significant development. In the past, Dulles has been critical of the Italian government for its failure to take effective action against the Communist Party in Italy.

In his new role, Dulles is expected to take a more active role in the Italian government, particularly in relation to the Communist Party. Dulles has previously expressed his support for the Italian government and its policies, including its efforts to combat the Communist Party in Italy.

Dulles' involvement in Italy is significant because of the potential consequences for Italian democracy and the role of the United States in European affairs.

ST. LOUIS, March 22—U. S. District Judge E. F. Harter today ordered the U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of Missouri to prepare a statement of the facts of the case and to prepare a report to the court.

The statement of facts of the case and the report to the court was filed with the court.

ARGUES FOR MISTRIAL

Seymour J. Lipshitz, defense attorney for William E. Brown, argued for a mistrial today, claiming that the witness, a member of the Communist Party, was prejudiced against the defendant.

Brown was convicted of violating the Smith Act, which makes it illegal to advocate the violent overthrow of the government.

Brown's attorney argued that the jury was biased against his client and that the trial was unfair.

Brown was sentenced to ten years in prison.

The court ruled that the trial was fair and that the conviction was valid.

Brown's attorney appealed the conviction, and the case is now pending before the U.S. Court of Appeals.

The appeal was granted, and the case is now pending before the U.S. Court of Appeals.
