SYNGAM SREEE: WMONG-MORE

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

THE OTHER DAY Congress was being prevented from uniting itself in a single, unbroken body, when it listened, in agreement, to the war cry of the war: the war of the Workers, President of the United States.

The President of the United States has the right to appeal to the American people to resist the war on any basis whatever. But if it be true, as we believe, that the war is the direct result of the action of the great capitalists of the country, then the right to appeal to the people is not the only right to which the President is entitled. The right to resist the war is also the right of the people. And that right is not the right of the people to resist the war for the benefit of the Government. It is the right of the people to resist the war for the benefit of the people.

The members of Congress sat and listened to this disgraceful speech. The old fool of a warmonger has been known to get his way with a few people's fight for peace in Congress. It was an open and frank appeal to the people. He did not even try to mislead his audience, for even he could not say what a little knowledge he knew about what he was talking about. But the people who are the backbone of our army are not fools. They know the President's words in the same way as they know the words of our allies—France, Brazil, China, Korea, Madagascar, etc.—would have made the same appeal to the American people to resist the war.

The War

The most serious thing about the speech of the President was that the bulk of the reactionary Washington politicians, as well as most of the great body of the Roosevelt administration, radio and television announcers throughout the country, are in substantial agreement with the President. They too, believe in the inevitability of a world war, and all their foreign policies are based upon this conclusion.

Because of the interest of our readers in the 1934 New York Labor elections, we are reprinting, in four installments, a series of Questions and Answers written by W. G. Gersten, legislative director of the New York State Democratic Committee.

Because of the interest of our readers in the 1934 New York Labor elections, we are reprinting, in four installments, a series of Questions and Answers written by W. G. Gersten, legislative director of the New York State Democratic Committee.

Because of the interest of our readers in the 1934 New York Labor elections, we are reprinting, in four installments, a series of Questions and Answers written by W. G. Gersten, legislative director of the New York State Democratic Committee.

Because of the interest of our readers in the 1934 New York Labor elections, we are reprinting, in four installments, a series of Questions and Answers written by W. G. Gersten, legislative director of the New York State Democratic Committee.

Because of the interest of our readers in the 1934 New York Labor elections, we are reprinting, in four installments, a series of Questions and Answers written by W. G. Gersten, legislative director of the New York State Democratic Committee.