ILLINOIS AROUSED BY BROYLEys RALLY
SPRINGFIELD, III.—Influential downtown and Chicago business men and some leaders in the business community of Illinois are said to have met to discuss a plan to fight the increasing price of gasoline. The meeting was called by the sponsor of the bill, Senator Broyles, who is running for re-election.

The bills filed today will be among the first to be introduced in the state Senate. In addition to the existing Senate bill, another bill has been filed in the House.

The bills are designed to lower the cost of gasoline, which is currently at an all-time high. The sponsor of the bills, Senator Broyles, has been a vocal advocate for lower gas prices and has promised to introduce legislation to address the issue.

The bills will be considered by the appropriate committees in both chambers and will be debated on the floor once they are referred to the correct committees. The sponsor hopes to have the bills passed by the end of the session, but it remains to be seen whether they will receive the necessary support to become law.

The bills are expected to be met with resistance from those who benefit from the current high gas prices. The oil industry, in particular, has been a vocal opponent of efforts to lower gas prices, citing the need to maintain a stable price to ensure the profitability of their operations.

The sponsor of the bills has vowed to continue to push for legislation that will help consumers, but he acknowledges that it will not be an easy task. With elections on the horizon, the sponsor is aware that he will need to work closely with his colleagues to ensure that the bills are passed.

The sponsor has called for a meeting of key stakeholders to discuss the bills and to work towards a solution that will benefit all Illinoisans. He hopes that by working together, they can find a way to lower gas prices without compromising the long-term sustainability of the industry.

The bills are expected to generate a significant amount of debate, with both supporters and opponents making their voices heard. The sponsor is confident, however, that with careful consideration and compromise, a solution can be found that will lower gas prices without undermining the stability of the industry.

The sponsor has called for a meeting of key stakeholders to discuss the bills and to work towards a solution that will benefit all Illinoisans. He hopes that by working together, they can find a way to lower gas prices without compromising the long-term sustainability of the industry.

The bills are expected to generate a significant amount of debate, with both supporters and opponents making their voices heard. The sponsor is confident, however, that with careful consideration and compromise, a solution can be found that will lower gas prices without undermining the stability of the industry.