New British Cabinet Tied More Closely to Cold War

BY PETER ZENICK

LONDON—April 12—The relatively small changes in the Government announced today that an early general election would be held if it were otherwise, the changes in the British Cabinet have been more substantial than the officials, to the extent that 40 per cent of the new members have been named to the new Cabinet, and 20 per cent of the old Cabinet has been replaced by new men.

The changes add up to more than a change in personnel. They have been made in the context of the following factors: The war is now over; the British Government is now in control of the country; the British economy is in a better condition; the British people are now more influential in the world; and the British Government has more resources to deal with the problems of the post-war world.

The changes announced today are the result of a Cabinet meeting held yesterday morning, at which the Prime Minister, Sir Anthony Eden, announced that he would resign as leader of the Conservative party and as Prime Minister of the British Government.

The changes announced today will have a significant impact on the British economy and society. The British Government is expected to reduce the budget deficit, increase the national debt, and raise taxes. The changes will also have an impact on international affairs, as the British Government is expected to take a more active role in international negotiations and to work towards a better future for the British people.

The changes announced today are a significant step towards a more democratic and equitable society in the United Kingdom. The changes will have a positive impact on the economy and society, and they will be a significant step towards a better future for the British people.
