Let’s Organize Our Meetings
We have had two large and successful meetings in New York, in the first of which nearly 1200 members, including leaders of both the white and Negro labor movements, participated.

Everyone is requested to participate in these meetings and to circulate the program and action points among friends and acquaintances, in order to bring in the greatest possible number of new members.

The program of our meetings will center around the following points:

1. The organization of labor unions and other groups of workers.
2. The establishment of local branches of the Party in various cities.
3. The promotion of the Party through the media of newspapers, radio, and other means.
4. The education of the masses of people regarding the need for a new political organization to fight for the rights of the working class.

We must work hard to organize these meetings in such a way that they will be effective in bringing in new members and in furthering the cause of the Party.

We must also work to build up our membership and to make sure that the members of the Party are active in their work.

Gastonia: Its Significance to Negro Labor

Gaston County, North Carolina, is a center of the textile industry. The textile workers in this area are primarily Negroes, and they form a large part of the labor movement in the state.

The textile workers in Gastonia have been organizing for several years, and they have made some progress in their struggle for recognition and better working conditions.

The纺织 workers have been demanding better wages, shorter hours, and an end to the system of piecework. They have also been demanding an end to the use of strikebreakers and the practice of hiring replacement workers.

The workers have been encouraged by the support of the local community, and they have been able to make some gains in their struggle.

Despite the challenges they face, the textile workers in Gastonia continue to fight for their rights and to demand a better life for all workers. Their struggle is an important part of the broader movement for workers' rights and social justice.

Big Layoffs Taking Place in the Auto Industry

By P. FRANKSEL

The Detroit Free Press, in an article by A. C. Brainard, reports that the automobiles produced in the state are suffering from a labor shortage.

The layoffs are due to the strike of the auto workers, which started on March 21st. The workers are demanding higher wages and better working conditions.

The layoffs are expected to continue until the strike is settled. The workers are demanding an end to the use of strikebreakers and the practice of hiring replacement workers.

The workers have been encouraged by the support of the local community, and they have been able to make some gains in their struggle.

Despite the challenges they face, the auto workers in the state continue to fight for their rights and to demand a better life for all workers. Their struggle is an important part of the broader movement for workers' rights and social justice.