Makhenko Arrives

In Britain to Tour Electric, A-Plants

LONDON, March 15—Former Soviet Premier Georgi M. Malenkov arrived today for a tour of Britain's electrical and atomic power plants. Malenkov, one of the few members of the central leadership, is expected by many to become a candidate for the top job in the new government.

Malenkov, who is on a goodwill mission, arrived with a delegation of Russian power engineers and experts.

Malenkov's arrival is significant because he is expected to bring about changes in the country's power policy, which has been dominated by the conservative leaders for many years.

Malenkov, a former party official, is known for his strong anti-communist views and his support for democratic reforms.

He is expected to meet with British Prime Minister Harold Wilson and other political leaders during his visit.

Malenkov's visit is also seen as a sign of changing attitudes in the Soviet Union towards the West, particularly in terms of economic cooperation.

Malenkov's visit is therefore expected to be closely watched by both the Soviet Union and the Western world.
