Is This the Last Round?

The Fight in the Communist Party

By GORDON HASKELL

The fight in the American Communist Party which was not resolved at their convention a year ago has broken to the surface again. And from all appearances, there is every indication that the situation will not improve. Once this round is over, it hardly seems there will be enough people left in the party to work up a good fight among themselves, though the history books are sure to show that the American Communists should give one pause in making any such prediction. But if the signs are read right in this corner, the outcome of this fight will determine the fate of the Communist Party nothing but a shrunken, isolated and insignificant Stalinist sect.

CENTRAL STRUGGLE

The issue around which the factions question one another is mainly the declaration of the ruling parties of the Communist world, which was issued in Moscow last fall. But the central struggle in which this is but an episodic moment will be the showdown over the role and function of the CP in the United States. The party's role in the party, that is, and the nature of the struggle over which the party has been divided is now evident as never before, and it is clear that the struggle over the question of the CP's role will determine the fate of the American Communist Party.

When the Moscow Declaration became public, it was immediately clear that this represented a new departure even though its nature and direction were still obscure. The direction of the question, in the direction of tightening the screws on the world Communist movement, was clear, but the CP could not stand aside in a stance of isolation, as some of the old-line loyalists had done. It was designed, precisely, among other things, to assert the leadership of the CP over all the world, to the encouragement and backing in settling their accounts, once and for all, with those strains in the world Communist movement which have been but a palliative of Russia's signs of restlessness and independence since the Krasnaya Sloboda and the Magyar revolution. William Z. Foster and his friends in the American party were not just last to read the signs and hear the bell.

Foster Lashes Out

In the December issue of Political Affairs, Foster lashed out in an article entitled "The First Round Out," the first of a series of three articles, in the series is "The Second Round Out," with an excerpt about the "The Third Round Out." The essay of the article is to accuse Gates and his tendency of "Right Revival." This is "as the most critical political error experienced by the Party in its entire history." That is saying a mouthful, but there is a good deal more.

In concluding the first section of the article, Foster states, "The Road..." is announced for the purpose of making sure that "by the end of the year, Foster states, "The Road..." is announced for the purpose of making sure that the world Communist movement is not to be divided in a stance of isolation, as some of the old-line loyalists had done. It was designed, precisely, among other things, to assert the leadership of the CP over all the world, to the encouragement and backing in settling their accounts, once and for all, with those strains in the world Communist movement which have been but a palliative of Russia's signs of restlessness and independence since the Krasnaya Sloboda and the Magyar revolution. William Z. Foster and his friends in the American party were not just last to read the signs and hear the bell.

FOSTER LASHES OUT

In the December issue of Political Affairs, Foster lashed out in an article entitled "The First Round Out," the first of a series of three articles, in the series is "The Second Round Out," with an excerpt about the "The Third Round Out." The essay of the article is to accuse Gates and his tendency of "Right Revival." This is "as the most critical political error experienced by the Party in its entire history." That is saying a mouthful, but there is a good deal more.

In concluding the first section of the article, Foster states, "The Road..." is announced for the purpose of making sure that "by the end of the year, Foster states, "The Road..." is announced for the purpose of making sure that the world Communist movement is not to be divided in a stance of isolation, as some of the old-line loyalists had done. It was designed, precisely, among other things, to assert the leadership of the CP over all the world, to the encouragement and backing in settling their accounts, once and for all, with those strains in the world Communist movement which have been but a palliative of Russia's signs of restlessness and independence since the Krasnaya Sloboda and the Magyar revolution. William Z. Foster and his friends in the American party were not just last to read the signs and hear the bell.

Protective War Drift

(Finished from page 11)

bombing of towns and cities, and deep holes in the ground. Gatehouse and Rockefeller reports say yes.

ARMAMENT RACE

Great stress is laid on the fact of Russian industrial and scientific achievement and that in a few years it will probably be on an equal level with many of the advanced nations. This is the basis for the argument that the US is falling behind.

The consequences of the Russian war is the stated...by and do nothing.

The Russian war will create an atmosphere of...of the Russian war. The real war is never won.

The fact that the US is not the paramount...the armaments race.

The US has nothing to gain...do nothing.

The Russian war will create an atmosphere of...of the Russian war. The real war is never won.

The fact that the US is not the paramount...the armaments race.

The US has nothing to gain...do nothing.

The Russian war will create an atmosphere of...of the Russian war. The real war is never won.

The fact that the US is not the paramount...the armaments race.

The US has nothing to gain...do nothing.

The Russian war will create an atmosphere of...of the Russian war. The real war is never won.

The fact that the US is not the paramount...the armaments race.

The US has nothing to gain...do nothing.

The Russian war will create an atmosphere of...of the Russian war. The real war is never won.

The fact that the US is not the paramount...the armaments race.

The US has nothing to gain...do nothing.

The Russian war will create an atmosphere of...of the Russian war. The real war is never won.

The fact that the US is not the paramount...the armaments race.

The US has nothing to gain...do nothing.

The Russian war will create an atmosphere of...of the Russian war. The real war is never won.

The fact that the US is not the paramount...the armaments race.

The US has nothing to gain...do nothing.