2 Witnesses Dragged Off—Rep. Pool Pleased At Data on ‘Hard-Core’ Reds

BY JOHN HERBERS

Washington, Aug. 19 — The House Committee on Un-American Activities ended its two-day hearing on the New Left today after two witnesses had been dragged from the stand and a dozen other persons had been ejected and arrested for disorderly conduct.

Representative Joe R. Pool, Democrat of Texas, announced at noon that the investigative subcommittee would sit no more.

He said the committee had all the information it needed on how “revolutionary hard-core Communists” in America had enlisted new members.

Jerry Rubin, a young Socialist in Revolutionary War uniform who was one of two uncalled witnesses, objected so persistently at not being called that he, too, was hustled from the room.

Hostile Start and End

The twohearings ended as they began on Tuesday in an atmosphere of hostility. During the four days of proceedings, at least 50 persons were arrested for disorderly conduct, and there were frequent outbursts involving hissing, shouting and insults at the committee.

The climax and violence almost obscured the announced purpose of the hearings, which was to gather information for shaping legislation to make it a felony for Americans to aid persons engaged in hostilities against the United States.

Mr. Pool, acting chairman of the committee, said that such legislation would be reported to the House next week, and he predicted that both the House and Senate would approve it.

The hearing was held over hearings, however, renewed demands by some House members that the committee be restrained, and they predicted that Congress would not accept any bill based on the hearings.

This week’s hearings differed from previous committee inquiries in that several witnesses not only admitted that they were Communists but also bragged about their party memberships and openly attacked the American system.

The pattern in the past has been for accused Communists to invoke their constitutional right to refuse to answer questions about their beliefs and affiliations.
