A Letter to The Call: Don’t Miss the Mammoth Threat

Editor The Call:

After reading Call writer David Kline’s piece in the Chicago Tribune warning of the dangers of U.S. appeasement, I thought to myself that we were indeed on the verge of nuclear war. However, when I read his other recent piece titled “Tusk, tusk! Soviets have mammoth idea for a baby,” I knew that I had been wrong. This article was not about the dangers of nuclear war, but about the dangers of mammoths.

Kline’s article was written in a style that was both informative and entertaining. He used humor and sarcasm to highlight the absurdity of the situation. For example, he wrote, “The Soviets have an idea that is both mammoth and troubling. They want to create a baby mammoth and use it as a weapon of war.”

Kline went on to explain that the mammoth was a creature that had been extinct for thousands of years, but that Soviet scientists had managed to bring it back to life. He argued that this was a dangerous and irresponsible move, and that it was up to the world to prevent it.

I was impressed by Kline’s ability to make a serious political point while also entertaining his readers. He is a true master of the art of writing. I urge everyone to read his article and to think about the implications of his argument.

Sycophant Gets Syndicated

Tusk, tusk! Soviets have mammoth idea for a baby

Tusk, tusk! Soviets have mammoth idea for a baby

Signed,
A loyal American,
and CPML supporter

The Call article was no different, it was written in a style that was both informative and entertaining. He used humor and sarcasm to highlight the absurdity of the situation. For example, he wrote, “The Soviets have an idea that is both mammoth and troubling. They want to create a baby mammoth and use it as a weapon of war.”

Kline went on to explain that the mammoth was a creature that had been extinct for thousands of years, but that Soviet scientists had managed to bring it back to life. He argued that this was a dangerous and irresponsible move, and that it was up to the world to prevent it.

I was impressed by Kline’s ability to make a serious political point while also entertaining his readers. He is a true master of the art of writing. I urge everyone to read his article and to think about the implications of his argument.

Sycophant Gets Syndicated

Tusk, tusk! Soviets have mammoth idea for a baby

Tusk, tusk! Soviets have mammoth idea for a baby

Signed,
A loyal American,
and CPML supporter