In the last three months, 11 Black women in the Boston Black community have been murdered. People in the Black community are terrified and angry. Their frustration is like a volcano with a cork on it. What kind of system forces people to live in ghettos where you can’t go to the movies, where you can’t go to the park, and you can’t stay in, as one neighbor of the Halts, the eighth victim, put it? What kind of system forces you to live in ghettos where you are virtually a prisoner?

The Boston Globe matter of factly reported the first murder next to the dog track results. The dogs that won and the dogs that got killed were their neighbors. Some of the neighbors were Cronkite on national news reported with alarm that a seven-year-old daughter of a corporate head in Grand Rapids, Michigan, had been kidnapped. Likewise the police standard operating procedure could do nothing. The mother of the first victim told how when she first went to the cops to report her daughter missing, she was told there was nothing they could do to find her unless she denounced her as “a bad girl.” Another woman said, “They think all Black women are prostitutes.” And more than one or two women told how the cops always approach them to “come and sit in the car with them.” To these pigs Black women are no more than trash. When some kids found the body of a Black woman in a Kentucky Fried Chicken, the cops came over and licked her dead body and said, “Oh, it’s just a pig.” Wonder many think the murderer is a cop.

But as the murders increased, this blatant racist way of dealing with the life of Black people in whom they consider worthless couldn’t get over. Hundreds of people were jammied into the community in Boston. “The cops are coming around and picking up any Black man.” And she added, “I don’t trust them.” The suspects are just scapegoats. Yet these pigs and politicians call the cops a “police presence” and slap each other on the back, praising their “great” work. They run long interviews with each murder victim. The exposure of their inability to control or stop this terror has the ruling class of Boston uptight. They now run around and pick up every Black man. “The cops say it’s the victim’s fault and un¬

Two Dogs on a Beach

The cur on the left once had a pedigree—King of Kings, the Shah of Iran. Today, scurrying from country to country, he is looking for a new doghouse—any palace will do. And it seems his old masters in the U.S. are out to throw him a bone. Says the New York Times in a recent article, titled “The Shah Needs a Home,” “The dethroned Shah of Iran needs a place to live,” and the U.S. “... has been a haven for the homeless, especially those who are not likely to become public charges!” Well, not everybody has its imperialist masters forever!

CPML Loves Cops From Coast to Coast

Recently, CPML has called for more pigs to be sent into the Black community of Boston (see article below). Here a CPMLer consults with Seattle pigs about how to stop an RCP picketline at a film shown in honor of Teng Hsiao-ping’s Seattle visit. CPML, while the masses in Boston are being told to “love the enemy,” is openly calling for more hoolish to the community.” The pigs have stopped up their harassments of Black people and arrested a number of “suspects” on the “evidence” that they were Black (see article on Boston murders in this issue). According to CPML logic this should be hailed as a victory—or would they say the other way if the West doesn’t deal them a good enough hand? Or maybe to scare Vietnam with the prospect of a Sino-Soviet agreement pre¬

Two Dogs on a Beach

The cur on the left once had a pedigree—King of Kings, the Shah of Iran. Today, scurrying from country to country, he is looking for a new doghouse—any palace will do. And it seems his old masters in the U.S. are out to throw him a bone. Says the New York Times in a recent article, titled “The Shah Needs a Home,” “The dethroned Shah of Iran needs a place to live,” and the U.S. “... has been a haven for the homeless, especially those who are not likely to become public charges!” Well, not everybody has its imperialist masters forever!

CPML Loves Cops From Coast to Coast

Recently, CPML has called for more pigs to be sent into the Black community of Boston (see article below). Here a CPMLer consults with Seattle pigs about how to stop an RCP picketline at a film shown in honor of Teng Hsiao-ping’s Seattle visit. CPML, while the masses in Boston are being told to “love the enemy,” is openly calling for more hoolish to the community.” The pigs have stopped up their harassments of Black people and arrested a number of “suspects” on the “evidence” that they were Black (see article on Boston murders in this issue). According to CPML logic this should be hailed as a victory—or would they say the other way if the West doesn’t deal them a good enough hand? Or maybe to scare Vietnam with the prospect of a Sino-Soviet agreement pre¬

Two Dogs on a Beach

The cur on the left once had a pedigree—King of Kings, the Shah of Iran. Today, scurrying from country to country, he is looking for a new doghouse—any palace will do. And it seems his old masters in the U.S. are out to throw him a bone. Says the New York Times in a recent article, titled “The Shah Needs a Home,” “The dethroned Shah of Iran needs a place to live,” and the U.S. “... has been a haven for the homeless, especially those who are not likely to become public charges!” Well, not everybody has its imperialist masters forever!

CPML Loves Cops From Coast to Coast

Recently, CPML has called for more pigs to be sent into the Black community of Boston (see article below). Here a CPMLer consults with Seattle pigs about how to stop an RCP picketline at a film shown in honor of Teng Hsiao-ping’s Seattle visit. CPML, while the masses in Boston are being told to “love the enemy,” is openly calling for more hoolish to the community.” The pigs have stopped up their harassments of Black people and arrested a number of “suspects” on the “evidence” that they were Black (see article on Boston murders in this issue). According to CPML logic this should be hailed as a victory—or would they say the other way if the West doesn’t deal them a good enough hand? Or maybe to scare Vietnam with the prospect of a Sino-Soviet agreement pre¬

Two Dogs on a Beach

The cur on the left once had a pedigree—King of Kings, the Shah of Iran. Today, scurrying from country to country, he is looking for a new doghouse—any palace will do. And it seems his old masters in the U.S. are out to throw him a bone. Says the New York Times in a recent article, titled “The Shah Needs a Home,” “The dethroned Shah of Iran needs a place to live,” and the U.S. “... has been a haven for the homeless, especially those who are not likely to become public charges!” Well, not everybody has its imperialist masters forever!