The Revolutionary Communist League, having held its 3rd Congress, at which it reaffirmed its line adopted at the conference held last November, on the Maoist criticism, decided general policy, and elected a new leadership, among other matters.

The Second Congress of the RCL was held in London. This Congress marked an important stage in the development of the RCL. It clarified the basic position of the League on the question of the relationship between national and class struggle in this country, and in many other countries, including the USA.

The main issue of the Congress was to discuss the question of the relationship between national and class struggle in this country. The Congress adopted a new leadership, which included new members from the USA and Canada.

The RCL is an organization based on Marxist-Leninist-Maoist principles, and it is committed to the task of building a Communist party in the USA. The RCL is dedicated to the struggle for peace, democracy, and socialism.

The RCL is an international organization, with branches in many countries. The membership of the RCL is growing, and it is working to build a strong international movement for a better world.