CCNY Student Strike Strong Despite Cops

by WILLIAM GREEN

New York, April 11—"Strike Today" was the call of a CCNY (City College) student strike. The meeting was addressed by "Student Council—Strike Truant," of the previous week. The line of the talk was, "strike to the surface of the streets. The pickets formed the main street areas at the corners of 114th and Broadway and 112th and Amsterdam Avenue.

Twenty minutes later the police wagon pulled out of the campus gates. Like a electric spark, the pay raises started a picket line that spread. "Get the cops off the campus!" the cops were lashed by the picket line defenses in the.PLAINS. The struggle. (Continued on page 3)

Anna L. Strong Reveals Russian GPU Police Terror, But Remains Stalinist Apologist

By JACK BRAD

Anna L. Strong, who was expelled from Russia in a "typ" last January after 26 years of living and working in the Soviet Union, has laid bare the horrors of Stalin's police-state and reflected on the past. "The GPU terror," she writes, "was a masterful organization that employed a combination of torture and deceit to maintain control and silence opposition."

"It was a system that spread fear and intimidated its victims," Strong says. "The GPU was not afraid to use violence, and it was not afraid to lie."

"The GPU was not afraid to use violence, and it was not afraid to lie," Strong says. "The GPU was not afraid to use violence, and it was not afraid to lie."

Will There Be “Peace” In Two Years?

Will the Atlantic Pact bring peace, as per Truman's promise? The president does not promise peace, but also denies his own decision was ever made.

By “peace,” of course, he (and we) mean the end of the threat of war.

In this brief prophecy on Truman’s part, we might as well say the following now, in foresight, rather than two years from now, in hindsight.

Two years from now, it is quite possible that Washington will be able to point an apostate hill in the cold war, to a less open-eyed world situation. It is possible that the Atlantic Pact may even repeat again that the Third World War for which both are prepared will be avoided, that the harvest of the Pacific will be a return to the old world, that West and East which now rage so publicly.

We are not under the illusion that either Washington or Moscow is now at war; we are just ready for any war between them. The situation can be at least partially maintained if the Pacific will be able to continue its present pitch for many more years.

The Washington administration is banking on the hope that the show of strength in the Atlantic Pact, the arming of Europe, the attack on China with U.S. divisions—"that this will force the Kremlin to back down," "play ball," talk more subtly, "make concessions," etc., thereby evening the world’s military balance.

And so it may.

Truman, of course, will then have the success of his "peace policy," which will have written down in the history books as the prophetic who brought peace to a troubled world. There will be a difference, to be sure, between the submissiveness of the cold war, and the cold world of war.

But all this submissiveness, if it will be, if it can be, will be at the cost of the imperialist war alliances, seemingly overwhelming to begin with, plus fouled armies, plus tough talk, is not likely to subdue the cold war. Both sides prepare, both sides, both sides jockey for alliances and influence and security.

The process of empressing each other—"Scare Steff" or "Bluff the U.S.—" which seems to many people as a "peace policy," can itself be laid for a certain number of years, as long as either side is really overpowered, is only one of the channels through which the cold war is conducted.

We suggest you remember that if and when Truman makes his "I told you so" speech in 1953.

A Note on Progress And Civilization

Elsewhere in this issue we present an important summary of the official report of the U.S. Strategic Bombing Survey, in essence, an extension of Truman's atom-bomb statement.

One point that emerges to be underlined. At the beginning of the war the general conception of military aviation strategy was the principle of selective bombing with the object of destroying certain specific targets, and, with the advance in the war, and economic and military strategy, was that of the menace created by industrial targets, and, finally, the menace created by the new concept of the total war or civilization.

The American concept of civilization is to be seen in the manufacture of the atom bomb, and the complete destruction of an entire city as the symbol of the war. The Soviet Union, like all modern states, is now in the process of a comprehensive strategy of total war and civilization.

Air strategy became the strategy of mass terror. The war became direct in the whole world, not only of their place of work but in their homes. Japan was the laboratory where these concepts were tried out.

For this purpose, the type of bomb and the type of aircraft had to be changed. The dive bomber or medium bomb of high maneuverability was preferred over the night bomber, in the size of which the load was decisive. The explosive bomb was replaced by the incendiary.

The atomic bomb was the next step, in the technological sense, in the fulfillment of this conception of total war against a population.

The atomic bomb is not a maneuver of military technology but fits into the pattern of military ideas. In this large sense the war is the product of the next generation after the military ideas of the previous generation.

British RR Workers' Poll Reveals Demand for Workers' Control

By JIM MILLER

The results of a recent British labor survey indicate that workers are increasingly demanding control over their working conditions. The survey, conducted by the British Railways Board, shows that a majority of workers believe that workers' control of the workplace is essential to improve productivity and working conditions.

SCIENTISTS WONDER IF MODERN KNOWLEDGE IS BOON OR CURSE

By JIM MILLER

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology's mid-century vacation conference, a significant event in the history of science, attracted a large number of scientists from around the world. But not only is it one of the largest and most prestigious scientific conferences ever held in the history of science, but it raised the question of whether the knowledge and scientific advances made in the 20th century would be a boon or a curse to humanity.

The conference was attended by many of the world's leading scientists, including Albert Einstein, Niels Bohr, and Enrico Fermi. The discussions centered around the implications of scientific progress and the potential for misuse of knowledge.

There has been a split in the development of science. On the one hand, many of the scientists praised the advances made in science, particularly in the fields of medicine and agriculture. On the other hand, there were concerns about the potential for misuse of knowledge and the potential for scientific progress to be used for destructive purposes.

In conclusion, the conference was a significant event in the history of science and raised important questions about the potential for scientific progress to be used for both good and ill. The debates and discussions continue to shape the way we think about the relationship between science and society.

"They Tell Our Troops That Their Base Is No More Than a Fort to Fight For."

The report concludes that the fact that a good deal of American armed forces are now stationed in Europe is not a hindrance to their deployment in Europe, but rather a sign of their readiness to return to Europe if necessary. The report also states that the presence of American forces in Europe is a deterrent to aggression and a testament to America's commitment to Europe.
