Liberal Party Obligation in Mayoralty Race:
Run Labor Candidate in N.Y.

By DANIEL DAVISON

A year and a half ago many New Yorkers were disturbed when Governor Episcopal Church, of the presidencies of the Independent State, and the Liberal Party seized the opportunity to run candidates. And the New York State Labor Union League, the most influential labor organization in the state, took the opportunity to express its approval of the move.

The move was made by the Independent State, which is one of the state's largest and most influential labor unions. The union's leaders felt that the party was not adequately represented in the state legislature, and that by running candidates they could help influence the outcome of the election.

The Liberal Party, on the other hand, was unhappy with the move. The party felt that the Independent State was not a true labor organization, and that by running candidates they were diluting the independence of the party. The Liberal Party also felt that the Independent State's candidates were not as effective as the party's own candidates.

The situation was further complicated by the fact that the Independent State was allied with the Democratic Party in many areas. The two parties often worked together to achieve their goals, and this made it difficult for the Liberal Party to run candidates of their own.

In the end, the Liberal Party decided to support their own candidates, and they ran a strong campaign against the Independent State's candidates. The Liberal Party was able to win several races, and this helped them maintain their independence.

The move by the Independent State was seen as a sign of the growing influence of labor in New York politics. The Independent State was able to use its large membership to make their voices heard, and this helped to ensure that the labor movement was represented in the state legislature.

The Liberal Party may have lost this particular battle, but they remained committed to their own goals, and they continued to work to improve the lives of New Yorkers. The Independent State's move was a reminder of the power that labor can have in politics, and the Liberal Party was determined to use this power to their advantage.

OHIO LABOR NOTES \n
Fawick Strike Ends in Cleveland; CP-Walkout Couldn't Get Aid \n
By JOE CLARK \n
The AFL United Auto Workers Union has just signed a two-year contract with the Fawick Auto Company, recent reports of a new agreement with the United Auto Workers, and the Fawick Auto Company have announced that the strike in the Fawick Auto Company in Cleveland has ended.

The terms of the new contract are as follows: \n
1. Over-all wage increase of 10 cents per hour for the period of the contract. \n2. The current minimum wage rate will be increased to $1.50 per hour. \n3. The union will have the right to negotiate for the reinstatement of any worker discharged for union activity.

It is stipulated that the company will continue to pay all health and welfare benefits and that the union will continue to negotiate for the reinstatement of any worker discharged for union activity.

18 Units Reach or Top Goals; Tagging Units Promise Last-Week Effort \n
By YUTTA BARSH \n
The United Auto Workers Fund Drive has reached its goal of $20 million in a little over a month. The drive has been successful in collecting $18 million, with the remaining $2 million to be collected over the next week. The drive is expected to raise a total of $25 million by the end of the year.

The following were the results of the drive: \n
1. New York City: $5 million \n2. Chicago: $3 million \n3. Los Angeles: $2 million \n4. Detroit: $1 million \n5. Milwaukee: $500,000

The drive has been successful in collecting $18 million, with the remaining $2 million to be collected over the next week. The drive is expected to raise a total of $25 million by the end of the year.

Ohio Strikes \n
Several Ohio strikes have been settled recently, including the United Auto Workers strike at the Fawick Auto Company in Cleveland. The union agreed to a two-year contract with the company, which includes a raise in wages and the right to negotiate for the reinstatement of workers discharged for union activity.

Labor Movement's Fourth Round Faces Tough Opposition from Bosses \n
LABOR ACTION is the leading publication of the United Auto Workers, and its editors have been working hard to provide a forum for union members to express their views on the issues of the day. The magazine has been critical of the company's efforts to undermine union organizing, and has been a strong advocate for workers' rights.

POLITICAL \n
The political climate is changes, with a shift from the Republican to the Democratic party. The new Democratic administration in Washington has been more sympathetic to labor issues, and has taken steps to protect workers' rights.

The newly elected administration is expected to make some changes in labor policy, including the possibility of introducing legislation to strengthen the National Labor Relations Act.

The labor movement is facing a tough fight, with the company working to undermine union organizing and to weaken the workers' negotiating position. The union will have to be prepared to fight hard to hold the line on wages, benefits, and working conditions.

In conclusion, the labor movement is facing a challenging period, but with the support of the workers and the backing of the Democratic administration, it can be successful in its efforts to win better wages and working conditions for all workers.
