End Berlin Strike
Under Pressure;
Expect Repressals

By V. JENKINS

The German railway strike is over. It was ended not only by demands of the workers but also by the action of Berlin society itself. In the face of the considerable pressure exerted by the state, the railway workers finally relented and accepted the demands of the employers. The strike, which started on April 20, lasted for seven days.

The state, which had initially rejected a settlement proposal from the employers, finally agreed to a compromise. The employers had demanded a wage increase of 15% and a 40-hour work week. The state, however, refused to accept these demands. Instead, it demanded a 10% wage increase and a 40-hour work week.

The railway workers, who were also under pressure from the state, eventually agreed to the state's demands. The strike was ended on April 27, with the workers accepting a 10% wage increase and a 40-hour work week.

ANTICCarthy DRIVE IS ON; EXILE GOVERNMENT IN CRISIS

By S. RUDINSKI

Much water has run under the bridges of resurgent Warsaw since the government moved in, the postwar coalition parties, the FPP, and the Solidarity Socialist Party, the FPP. The new government, led by Premier Zbigniew Romke, who was the head of the FPP, has already been condemned by the Polish left for its failure to take decisive measures against the opposition. The government has been accused of being too soft on dissidents and of not taking adequate steps to limit the influence of the opposition. However, the government has also been praised for its efforts to improve relations with the United States and other Western countries.

The current government is faced with a number of challenges, including economic reform, political stability, and international relations. The government has announced plans to reduce inflation and improve the economy, but it remains to be seen whether these measures will be successful. The government is also facing pressure from the opposition to hold free and fair elections and to ensure the protection of human rights.

The government's efforts to improve relations with the United States and other Western countries have been seen as important steps towards rebuilding relations with the West, which had been strained during the Cold War. However, the government still faces a number of challenges, including the need to address the legacy of the past and to ensure the protection of human rights.

YOUTH AND STUDENT CORNER

by JULIUS PALE, National Secretary STL

This week's column by Bob Morgan of the Chicago suburb of the Southern Youth League.

The U. C. of Politicians

The history of the Politicians Club at the University of Chicago is the story of one of the most influential groups on campus. The club was founded in 1932 by a group of students who were interested in politics and who wanted to create a forum for discussing political issues. The club has since become one of the most influential groups on campus, and its members have played a key role in shaping the political climate on campus.

By the 1980s, the club had become a powerful force on campus, and its members were regularly involved in a wide range of political activities. The club's influence was so great that it was seen as a threat by many other groups on campus, and it was often the target of criticism.

Despite this, the club continued to thrive, and its members have continued to play a key role in shaping the political climate on campus. The club's influence is still felt today, and its members are seen as key players in the political landscape on campus.

Developing a Broader Socialist Coalition

The result of this evolution has been the creation of what the Politicians Club describes as a "broad coalition of students, faculty, and staff working to create a more inclusive and participatory political environment on campus." The club's members are now involved in a wide range of political activities, and they are seen as key players in the development of a broader socialist coalition on campus.

In the coming years, the club hopes to continue to expand its influence, and to work to create a more inclusive and participatory political environment on campus. The club's members are committed to working towards this goal, and they are looking forward to the challenges that lie ahead.

In conclusion, the Politicians Club is an important force on campus, and its members are an important part of the broader socialist coalition on campus. The club's influence is seen as key to the development of a more inclusive and participatory political environment on campus, and its members are committed to working towards this goal.
