UAW-Fair Deal Candidate for Mayor
In Detroit Beaten in Racist Campaign

By Walter Jason

DETROIT, Nov. 12—Thirty-three years after the first UAW-GM contract strike, the UAW leadership Ton, organizer for the Fair Deal Mayoral campaign, this week lost his bid for Detroit’s chief executive. His defeat may mean the end of the Fair Deal Mayoral campaign, sources indicate.

The Fair Deal campaign’s defeat is a major setback for the UAW and its allies, who had hoped to use the campaign to strengthen their position in the city. The campaign’s failure is a blow to the UAW’s efforts to boost its membership and to its hopes of winning the mayoral election in 1972.

The Fair Deal campaign was launched in the spring of 1970, with the support of the UAW, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and other labor organizations. The campaign’s goal was to elect a mayor who would support the UAW’s agenda, including better wages and working conditions for GM workers.

The Fair Deal campaign was led by Tim Johnson, a UAW organizer, who was running against the incumbent mayor, James Rogan. Johnson was supported by a coalition of labor, civil rights, and feminist groups.

The campaign’s failure is a blow to the UAW’s efforts to boost its membership and to its hopes of winning the mayoral election in 1972. The UAW is the largest union in Detroit, and its success in the city is crucial to its success at the national level.
