

'There will be no settlement of this dispute unless and until Mr MacGregor and the National Coal Board withdraw their pit closure programme'
ARTHUR SCARGILL YESTERDAY

There's no surrender on jobs

ORGANISE BEHIND US... Miners' president Arthur Scargill passing on his message to TUC and Labour Party outside the Orgreave coking plant in south Yorkshire yesterday

MINERS' president Arthur Scargill yesterday rejected attempts by TUC general secretary Len Murray, Labour Party leaders and ACAS to impose a deal over redundancies and pit closures.

He said TUC and Labour leaders would do better organising support for the miners in the trade union and labour movement.

Scargill was speaking after he joined more than 3,000 strikers massed outside the British Steel coke plant at Orgreave near Sheffield, where he was knocked down during a police charge on Sunday.

When the NUM president mentioned this week's talks with the Coal Board, there were shouts of: 'No surrender! No surrender!'

To which Scargill replied: 'Don't worry about that.'

'I want to make one message clear to the Coal Board and our members. There will be no settlement of this dispute unless and until Mr MacGregor and the National Coal Board withdraw their pit closure programme,' he said, to loud cheers and applause.

Press

Scargill confirmed that despite speculation in the Tory press he would be attending the talks accompanied by NUM general secretary Peter Heathfield and vice-president Mick McGahey.

They would be 'carrying out the policies of this union,' he said.

Scargill gave an indication of the intense pressure that had been brought to bear on the NUM to enter negotiations with the NCB.

He said the union had been approached by the government conciliation service, ACAS, TUC general secretary Len Murray and Labour Party leaders.

'I told the TUC and the Labour Party that rather than talk about mediation, they should be asking the rest of the Labour and trade union movement to join us.'

Asked whether the union would agree to further productivity measures in any settlement, Scargill replied: 'We should scrap the incentive scheme which has caused dissension in this union.'

No coke was transported from Orgreave to the steel plant at Scunthorpe yesterday. The BSC claimed this was because of the Bank holiday. But Scargill said the halt to supplies 'had a lot to do with the large number of pickets here today'.

He added: 'We intend to persuade workers in there to show the same solidarity, the same consideration to us as we did to the steel workers during their strike in 1981.'

FROM SIMON VEVERS

Scargill said he was opposed to continuing coal supplies to BSC plants. 'The sooner they get involved, the better, so that we can win this dispute,' he added, emphasising the link between the fight for jobs in both industries.

Scargill told the pickets: 'We want to see the biggest picket here tomorrow that we've had during the whole of this dispute.'

'I've been told that quite a number of our members are coming from other parts of the country.'

Principle

'We want to see the Mansfield demonstration repeated here tomorrow.'

Scargill said steel union leaders were guilty of 'breaching every fundamental trade union principle,' by ignoring NUM appeals to stop loading coke on to non-union lorries.

They had connived with the BSC to smuggle an extra 5,000 tonnes of coke into the Scunthorpe works in defiance of an agreement signed by coal, rail and steel unions and the steel corporation.

250,000 join West German engineers' demo
More miners' news in pull-out starting P. 7

250,000 join Bonn march for 35 hours

BONN — 250,000 workers gathered yesterday for a huge demonstration against the Kohl government and to demand the right to work.

This was the climax of the struggle for the 35-hour week led by the metal and print unions in West Germany.

It was a reaction to the attacks of the Kohl government, which has decided not to pay laid-off workers any social security benefits.

The main slogans of the demonstration were: 'Against the terror of lock out! Against the breach of justice! For jobs and rights!'

Big delegations came from the metalworkers and printers. They were joined by several international delegations — from Britain, Italy, Belgium and France.

A delegation came from the Sacilor, the French steelworks in the Lorraine. All West German trade unions sent delegations, including the miners, textile workers, building workers, public employees and railway workers.

Hans Mayr, chairman of the main union involved in the strike, IG Metall, drew loud applause when he told the demonstrators at a rally: 'The employers and government are marching arm in arm to abolish the social right to work and to undermine the trade union right to strike.'

Each time Mayr mentioned members of the Kohl cabinet, the workers answered with loud shouts and booing, especially when he mentioned Kohl himself.

Workers shouted 'Kohl out, Kohl out!', drowning out Mayr himself. When he referred to the Employment Secretary, Norbert Blum, who is still a member of IG Metall, the workers shouted that he should be thrown out.

Mayr said the decision by the Department of Social Security not to pay laid off workers was like a banana republic or a feudal state.

He said the government

BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT

was now using this department to fight the workers, not to fight unemployment. Yet the department is financed by workers through a special insurance.

Mayr concluded by thanking those who joined the march, saying: 'This encourages us.' He appealed to members of all other trade unions to support the metal and print workers.

Strike

Next speaker was the chairman of the German TUC (DGB), Ernst Breit. Breit announced another solidarity strike of all trade unions in the Hessen province, where all the employers have announced lock-outs next week.

He announced a national solidarity strike if the employers didn't back down.

The lock-out and the decision not to pay social security was an attack on all workers, not just on the metal and print workers,' said Breit.

'Help us to defend the democratic right to have trade unions. Support our struggle against unemployment. Those governing today may have the power but we have the right and the morale on our side.'

Printers' union chairman, Erwin Serlimann, attacked the government members for their slanders against the printers' union and said: 'Those slanders have one aim — to split us and to destroy our struggle for jobs.'

'The government and employers are acting against us together and we will answer with the weapon of the suppressed, with our solidarity.'

Serlimann bitterly mentioned the attacks on pickets in front of printshops, such as Horst Bekel in Stuttgart and a worker at the Moehring print shop who was recently knocked down by a van and injured.

Serlimann sent warm greetings to Horst Bekel in hospital from the rally.

Other speakers included Kurt van Haaren, chairman of the post workers' union, convenor of Daimler Benz, Mannheim, Herbert Lucy, and the general secretary of the European Metalworkers' Union, Bert Thairron.

Tories nervous over Botha

TORY Party chairman John Selwyn Gummer will try and deflect opposition to next weekend's visit by South African Prime Minister P.W. Botha with a speech deploring apartheid.

His speech, in Essex on Thursday, will reflect government nervousness over the public reaction to Botha's visit, the first by a South African premier for 23 years.

Gummer, who followed the disgraced Cecil Parkinson into the party chairmanship, projects a sanctimonious image.

Pride of place in his office at party HQ goes to a snapshot of the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Pope with Gummer trotting at their heels.

Gummer believes that South Africa is 'a necessary figure in the pattern' of the region, and takes issue with those like Bishop Trevor Huddleston who say Britain's historical ties mean it should boycott South Africa.

In fact his attempt to justify inviting the world's No.1 racist simply demonstrates the government's own solidarity with the apartheid regime.

Cold and wet Bank Holiday

PARTS of Britain have shivered through the coldest and wettest spring Bank Holiday since records began in 1941, with rain falling almost non-stop in some areas.

In central London, usually one of the warmest and driest places, 16.6 millimetres of rain fell on Saturday, followed by 13.7 millimetres on Sunday — and the rain was still falling yesterday. The previous wettest spring Bank Holiday in London was in 1954, when a total of 24 millimetres fell over the three days.

The weatherman described holiday conditions as 'topsy-turvy', with traditional wet spots such as Scotland and Northern Ireland enjoying mainly dry sunny conditions, although temperatures have been below the seasonal average.

The sunniest place during the Bank Holiday was the Inner Hebrides and among the warmest has been Glasgow, and County Down and County Tyrone.

The grey cold and wet weather in eastern England and the south east made it a 'stay-at-home' Bank Holiday with the motoring organisations reporting light traffic on all roads.

Palestinian fighters killed after capture

TEL AVIV — Two Palestinians who hijacked a bus last month were killed by blows to the skull after capture by Israeli security forces, an official inquiry found yesterday.

Each man 'died from a skull fracture as a result of a blow to the back of his head with a blunt instrument', a summary of the inquiry report said.

Although the Zionist regime released a summary the bulk of the report is classified top secret.

It lays no specific blame but said there was 'evidence of violations by individual members of the security forces'.

Disciplinary measures were to be taken against other members of the security forces 'who did not fulfil duties incumbent upon them in this case'.

The inquiry was called after an international scandal erupted over newspaper reports and a photograph suggested the two could have been summarily executed.

Zionist military officials had asserted all four hijackers and an Israeli passenger among the 35 had died when the security forces stormed the bus at dawn on April 13, after staking it out overnight.

A still-banned photograph of the Israeli daily 'Chadashot' showed one of the Palestinians being led away, apparently unharmed.

Security troops who stormed the bus were given no specific order as to what should be done with captured Palestinians, the summary said.

No order had been given from which it could be understood the hijackers if taken alive should be killed 'and no-one claims he received such an order or that he could have understood there was such an order', it said.

No precaution had been taken to ensure unauthorised persons did not enter the area where the guerillas were being interrogated.

The two-page summary contained 'the main findings of the report which are available to the public', the summary said.

'The report in full is considered top secret.'

Defence Minister Moshe Arens said in an interview on state radio 'nothing can justify' the 'irregular incident'.

He hoped it would not affect Israeli soldiers held by the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) since Israel's 1982 invasion of Lebanon.

At least six Israelis are believed to be in PLO captivity.

Former Prime Minister and Labour opposition candidate for Defence Minister in general elections next month refused to blame the Likud coalition government for the atrocity.

Rabin praised the army and Defence Ministry for establishing the commission.

'I want to believe with all my heart that this is an exception which will not be repeated,' he said.

Miners occupy NCB

MORE than 60 miners occupied the Scottish offices of the National Coal Board for 10 hours yesterday in protest at management's refusal to pay holiday earnings.

The sit-in ended later, though Coal Board officials said that no holiday pay — which has already been earned by miners and can amount to up to £300 for some men — would be issued unless miners had worked for five days before annual leave started.

Most of the miners were from the Monktonhall and Bilston Glen collieries, and Dave Clark, Bilston Glen NUM chairman, said the action was against Coal Board attempts to starve miners back to work.

FERRY STRIKE STARTS TONIGHT

SEAMEN stop work on all ferries from midnight tonight in protest against the Tories' plans to sell off the British Rail subsidiary Sealink. The stoppage has been called by the National Union of Seamen, which is confident of getting the full support of all its 7,000 members on the ferries.

'We expect to shut down all the British-manned ferries,' said Jim Jump, the union's public relations officer.

The strike will affect the three major ferry operators — Sealink, P and O and European Ferries, operators of the Townsend Thoresen fleet.

Sealink say it will be able to run about a third of its cross-Channel services using foreign crews, with the Dover-Ostend and Dover-Dunkirk sailings unaffected, and half its normal sailings from Harwich to the Hook of Holland.

But it will not be able to supply services to Ireland and the Channel Islands.

British Rail want Sealink sold by the end of June. No price has yet been put on the company, though some estimates have exceeded £70 million. The NUS say that 2,500 of the company's 10,000 jobs could disappear through rationalisation after the sell-off.

Jamaican officer on stabbing charge

AN officer in the Jamaican defence force yesterday appeared at a special court in Exmouth, Devon, charged in connection with a stabbing incident in the officers' mess of the Royal Marines commando training centre at Lymington.

Second-lieutenant Karl-Gunnar Charles-Harris, 20, who is on a Commonwealth forces officer training scheme at the centre, is accused of wounding 2nd Lt Andrew Quinlan, Royal Marines, with intent to cause grievous bodily harm, on Friday night.

Representatives of the Jamaican High Commission were in court. The injured officer, who was taken to the Royal Devon and Exeter hospital, with a chest injury, was yesterday said to be stable and out of intensive care.

Bob Green, prosecuting, applied for an eight-day remand in custody. He said that Charles-Harris was understood to have triple nationality, Swedish, Trinidadian and Jamaican.

The magistrate, Major Terence Corkery, refused an application on behalf of the defendant for bail.

Heart attack kills Eric Morecambe

Tributes to a great comedian

COMEDIAN Eric Morecambe died early yesterday, aged 58, after collapsing at a charity performance in Tewkesbury, Gloucestershire.

He had survived two heart attacks — the first in 1968 and the second just over ten years later.

His wife Joan was among the audience in the theatre and was at his bedside when he died in Cheltenham General Hospital.

Ernie Wise, the other half of the famous comic duo, paid tribute 'on the saddest day of my life' to his friend and partner for the last 40 years.

'We have lost a great comedian,' he said. 'Everywhere I went people — from royalty to the poorest — always said they felt Eric was one of the family.'

'He was a natural comedian, and I am very, very proud to have been his partner. Through the years people will realise how great he was.'

Asked whether Eric should perhaps have retired after one of his earlier attacks, Ernie replied: 'I don't think he could have done that.'

'Show-business is a big thing and you can't get away from it.'

Des O'Connor — the man that Morecambe and Wise loved to hate — described the dead comic as a 'wonderful friend', adding:

Gift

'I thought he would go on for ever come what may. He was a gift to the earth who was sure to make us laugh.'

'I know so many people who thought Eric was so wonderful. Not many times did you hear: "I don't like him."

'They say you can't please all the people all the time. Eric and Ernie came closest to it.'

Comedian Eric Sykes said: 'This has been a dreadful month — first with the death of Tommy Cooper and now Eric Morecambe. It is probably the worst month of my life.'

'Eric's death leaves a big hole in our business. Eric and Ernie were probably the first act that TV really made great. I think they helped to raise double acts and give them respectability.'

'The only saving grace from his death is that he has left some classic comedy clips which we can keep showing and I am sure they will be a great encouragement to other performers.'

Long Kesh escapee faces extradition

A MAN who escaped from Ulster's Long Kesh prison eight months ago has been accused of the murder of a prison officer on the day of the escape, Dublin District Court was told yesterday.

Extradition proceedings are due to begin in Dublin on Thursday against the man, Robert Russell, 26, from West Belfast. He made a four-minute appearance in the Dublin court yesterday.

He was remanded in custody until Thursday when barrister Susan Denham said she anticipated the case would go ahead. Det Sgt Patrick Morgan gave evidence of re-arresting Russell in Dublin, on a warrant seeking his extradition for escaping from the Long Kesh on September 25 last year.

He later read over to Russell another warrant seeking his extradition for the murder of prison officer James Ferris at Long Kesh on the same day.

Russell was serving a 20-year sentence for the attempted murder of an RUC superintendent when he escaped with 37 other Republicans.

He was captured in Dublin on Saturday after a police swoop on a house in the Ballymun area of the city.

POLICE in the Irish Republic grappled with demonstrators yesterday as the Prime Minister Dr Garret Fitzgerald was being driven into a £5 million factory complex which he was to open.

Several protesters hammered on the car with their fists and with placards. The crowd of about 400 was campaigning against a move by the Irish government to transfer hospital services

Pay gap is widening

IN THE last six years the gap between the low paid and the higher paid has become a yawning chasm, according to figures contained in the latest low pay price index.

Since 1978 workers in the bottom 10 per cent of the wages league have suffered a real drop in living standards, but the take-home pay of the top 10 per cent of workers has leapt by as much as 60 per cent.

The low paid price index is published monthly by the Civil and Public Services Association and the Low Pay Unit and charts changes in the living standards of the low paid compared with other consumers.

Its latest figures published today show that between 1978 and 1984 real take-home pay for the low paid had fallen by 1 per cent. By contrast, mainly as a result of tax cuts, the higher paid have been taking home 16-60 per cent more in real terms.

WEATHER

WALES and England, except the extreme north-west, and south-east Scotland will be rather cloudy. Some sunny intervals may develop in the west and outbreaks of drizzle may occur in the east. Northwest England, Northern Ireland and much of Scotland will have sunny periods, but cloud will spread from the west across northern areas, perhaps with a little rain later. It will be rather cool in most regions with temperatures ranging from 12C in some east coast areas to 17C in sunny northern areas.

Outlook for the following 48 hours: Dry with sunny periods at first. Further rain expected to spread from the west. Temperatures generally near normal or warm.

Tories condemned in Begum case

THE EUROPEAN parliament has approved an emergency resolution condemning the British government's deportation of Afia Begum as 'callous and showing the racist and sexist nature of the United Kingdom Immigration laws' by 70 votes to 67.

But Tories prevented a majority vote in favour of her right to return to Britain. That section of the motion was defeated by 72 votes to 72 with 7 abstentions.

Peace women released

NINE women peace campaigners from the Brawdy peace camp in Dyfed, West Wales, were released after being questioned for three hours by police early yesterday.

Police said the women voluntarily accompanied officers to Haverfordwest police station after being found daubing slogans on a roadside bus shelter in the United States naval base at Brawdy.

They dismissed claims by the campaigners that the nine were attempting to enter the high security base by cutting through an outer perimeter fence.

About 150 women and children have been taking part in the peace camp protest over the weekend. Eight were released on Sunday after spraying slogans at an arms depot near Fishguard.

Reginald Bosanquet dead

REGINALD BOSANQUET, one of television's best known newsreaders, has died of the cancer he kept a secret from the public for years.

Bosanquet, 51, who read his last bulletin on ITN in 1979, had been ill for some time.

The news of his death on Sunday night was given on an ITN news programme last night.

Shamir hits at Saudi arms

TEL AVIV — Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said the Zionist state would oppose any US move to supply Saudi Arabia with air-borne tankers for use in the Gulf war. The 'Washington Post' had reported the US was considering the delivery of Boeing KC-135 tankers which could refuel in mid-air fighter planes and ground-to-air Stinger missiles.

HOMELESS THOUSANDS FLEE BOMBAY RIOTS

BY A FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT

BOMBAY — More than 80,000 people have been forced into hastily erected refugee camps and thousands of textile workers have fled to other states in the worst communal riots in Maharashtra's history.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi has sent in the army with orders to shoot on sight to enforce curfew in Bombay and the industrial centres.

Almost 40 per cent of the 500,000 people in Bhamburda, a key textile manufacturing centre, have been driven away since the riots erupted on May 18.

Much of Bombay, India's financial and commercial centre, is idle as thousands boycott work, and the textile factories are at a standstill.

Green and saffron flags flutter over Bombay and the textile centres in the neighbouring regions, symbolising the fears and frustrations behind the Hindu-Moslem clashes.

'Communal violence is often provoked by economic factors such as job competition and political rivalries,' Rafique Zakaria, a member of the national parliament and prominent supporter of Gandhi, said.

'Religion gives a justification and a cause to popular feelings.'

The riots erupted when

Moslems hoisted a green flag, the symbol of Islam, outside the office of a militant Hindu group called Shiv Sena (meaning army or military) in Bhamburda.

In Pharbani, 180 miles east of Bombay, Moslems had placed a circle of shoes around a portrait of the Shiv Sena leader, Bal Thackeray.

Hindus and Moslems alike consider the pointing of shoes and the exposing of the soles of the feet an insult; and the two incidents contributed to an upheaval that has given the Gandhi government the excuse to send in the army.

Battles

Hindu and Moslem groups armed with makeshift swords, clubs, iron bars, bottles of acid and stones have fought pitched battles.

In several such incidents the army has opened up with gunfire, contributing to the hundreds of injured who have packed hospitals in Bombay and surrounds to overflowing.

A million Bombay's 9 million population are Moslems.

Moslem workers were the backbone of the textile industry until the influx in recent years of workers from Andhra Pradesh and Tamil Nadu.

A Bombay resident said: 'The struggle for survival is fierce and politicians use religion to whip up support for the respective parties or policies.'

'Religion provides a sense of identity.'

The Hindu ruling class has pursued an unwritten policy of a Hindu state since before independence from direct, British colonialism in 1947.

The partition of Punjab and Bengal into West and East Pakistan as Moslem states was part of this policy.

It led to the most savage exodus in modern history, memories of which are kindled still by the exploitation of communal politics by bourgeois parliamentarians of all parties.

Thackeray advocates the concept of 'Hindu Rashtra' (Hindu nation) and has angered the Moslem community by his provocative speeches.

At a recent hockey match against neighbouring Pakistan, a country that has fought India three times, Moslem spectators cheered the Pakistanis because they were Moslems.

Crackers

'Those who burst crackers when Pakistan wins a game of hockey or cricket against India should get lost,' Thackeray said in a recent newspaper interview.

'Now they are forcing Hindus to be fanatics. Moslems should be Indians first and Moslems second.'

GANDHI

He has also accused Moslem activists of being supported by a 'foreign hand', which usually implies aid from Pakistan or Moslem Kashmir.

G.M. Banatwalla, a parliamentarian and general secretary of the militant Indian Union Moslem League, said: 'Thackeray made derogatory remarks against the prophet Mohammad and Moslems in general.'

Suspensions

He did not elaborate but it was a clear reference to communal suspicions that underly much of the uprisings in Maharashtra, Punjab, Haryana, West Bengal and Andhra Pradesh.

Leaders like Thackeray have fanned fears among the Hindu community of being 'swamped' by Moslems.

Moslems form India's largest group, with more than 70 million people in a population of 880 million.

Zia dictatorship arrests politicians

ISLAMABAD — Sixteen opposition politicians have been arrested or restricted from travel by the military dictatorship to stop a scheduled political meeting yesterday.

They include Nawabzada Nasrullah Khan, leader of the Movement for the Restoration of Democracy (MRD), an alliance of 11 banned political parties campaigning against the Zia ul-Haq dictatorship.

Nasrullah Khan was due to preside at the meeting of the MRD central committee in Peshawar, in the north-west frontier province but the order has 'expelled' him from the province for 15 days.

The MRD had called the meeting to work out a strategy to reject elections promised by next March as a scheme by Zia to prolong military rule.

Captives of Grenada invasion released

ST GEORGES — Two prisoners detained without charge shortly after the US invasion of Grenada last October have been released.

Acting Director of Public Prosecutions Velma Hylton named them as Remy Noel, a former soldier under Grenada's New Jewel leader.

Four other detainees were released last week but four are still being held without charge.

A US firm will finish an airport in Grenada that Cuba was helping build until the US-led invasion last October, a US Embassy spokesman said at the weekend.

President Reagan has made the lying claim that the airport at Point Salines was intended to be a 'Soviet military base'.

Mubarak supporters gun down rival

CAIRO — President Hosni Mubarak is expected to be returned to office with a majority well ahead of his opponents but with a stronger opposition.

The general elections, held on Saturday, have been bloody and one leading opposition candidate has been killed.

Ne'mat Hussein Mohammed Ali died from a bullet wound to the head after a shoot-out with ruling party supporters near Luxor, Upper Egypt.

Interior Ministry officials confirmed her death.

The wife of an opposition party candidate was seriously wounded by gunfire in another violent incident in the Nile delta town of Shebein El-Kantar.

More than 16 people had been injured in clashes by late afternoon on election day.

Troops clashed with crowds hurling stones and extra police were drafted to Port Said, the scene of anti-government processions.

Most reports said the turnout was 'modest' among the 13 million registered voters.

One opposition leader, Fouad Serageddin, 75, angered by reported intimidation and the burning of ballot boxes by ruling party supporters, described the election as 'theatre'.

Serageddin leads a nationalist party founded in 1919 and allied to the banned Moslem Brotherhood.

Results of the polling for the 448-seat Assembly are expected to be announced today.

Mubarak's opponents were expected to win up to 100 seats, giving Egypt its strongest parliamentary opposition in a half century.

SA blacks given harsher sentences

JOHANNESBURG — A row has erupted in South Africa's parliament over a member's charge that blacks are routinely given harsher sentences than whites and that extreme right-wing offenders are treated more leniently than leftists.

Helen Suzman, the longest serving member of the official opposition, caused a storm of controversy when she named two judges who she said were notoriously biased in their judgments.

Suzman was ruled out of order for 'impugning the integrity' of the racist South African judiciary.

Lawyers said Suzman had revealed only a small portion of the disparity in South African justice.

'The government likes to propagate the myth that there is an independent judiciary,' one lawyer, who declined to be named, said.

US policy under attack

BONN — The US economy was casting a 'long shadow' over world recovery with its high interest rates, Finance Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg said yesterday.

It was also worsening the tense situation facing debt-ridden countries, Stoltenberg said in his attack on US economic policy in a speech to businessmen in Munich.

The speech signified what West Germany regarded as the key issue at the London economic summit from June 7 to 9.

Although West Germany had been able to cope with the dramatic rise in US interest rates, they were a cause for great concern, he said.

'Rising interest rates are in particular heightening the extremely tense situation

REAGAN'S MAN SAYS
LEND, LEND, LEND

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve Board (Central Bank) was prepared to 'lend, lend boldly, and keep on lending' if more big American banks got into trouble, President Reagan's personal appointee and No.2 man at the bank, Preston Martin, said yesterday.

Martin was speaking in a televised interview on the crises of Continental Illinois, Manufacturers Hanover Trust and Chase Manhattan.

Continental's crisis led to the biggest rescue operation in banking history: $4.3 billion on May 14, followed by a $7.3 billion on May 17.

Manufacturers Hanover and Chase Manhattan suffered a run on their deposits after rumours of their difficulties in the money markets.

Value

The policy will bankrupt the European economies through an artificially high dollar value and interest rates, while American imperialism props up its own tottering banking system.

Martin, asked if the Central Bank was prepared to do for other banks the same as it did for Continental Illinois, said: 'Indeed we are. In fact, I'll quote a Bank of England banker to you, who said: "Lend, lend boldly, and keep on lending" (in such situations).'

He did not identify the banker but the British magazine 'The Economist', in an analysis on the issue, quoted the banker, Walter Bagehot.

'The Economist' said: 'In a financial panic, said

Walter Bagehot in the 1870s, the only sensible course for rescuers is to "Lend freely, boldly, and so that the public may feel you mean to go on lending. To lend a great deal, and yet not give the public confidence that you will lend sufficiently and effectually, is the worst of all policies."

Panic

The US banking system was panic stricken last week as feverish trading and off-loading of Manufacturers Hanover Trust and Chase Manhattan stocks led to the sharpest declines on the share indexes in recent times before the markets stabilised on Friday.

Martin's comments were designed to reassure the financial markets that the Central Bank and, therefore, the Reagan government, would stand fully behind the US banking system.

Martin, the only one of the seven Central Bank governors appointed by President Reagan and the government's strongest backer on the board, denied the system was on the brink.

'Absolutely not. The situation in Chicago (at Continental Illinois) has stabilised,' he said.

'It is a sound bank. What the people who are making good progress there need is time.'

The government, the Central Bank, the US Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Development Insurance Corporation (FDIC) are hoping Continental's crisis will be absorbed through merger of part or all of the conglomerate with the other larger banks.

Banks

Part of Manufacturers Hanover's problems, apart from its heavy commitment to the Latin American countries, is that it has recently acquired a number of such 'banks of the brink'.

Martin, the only member of the board to have opposed a tighter credit policy to restrain inflation, predicted a fall in interest rates by autumn, a prediction that stems from the White House and is rejected by a majority of financial analysts.

Iran assures
Gulf states

TEHRAN — Saudi Arabia has received an assurance from Majlis Speaker Hojatolislam Hashemi Rafsanjani that Iran does not want the regime drawn into the Gulf war.

The assurance was given through Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel-Halim Khaddam, who flew to Tehran last week.

Khaddam had conveyed to the Iranian government a diplomatic feeler from King Fahd, who had asked if Iran intended escalating the war and involving the Gulf states, Rafsanjani revealed.

The leadership had adopted a conciliatory attitude towards the Gulf states, emphasising Moslem solidarity and limiting strikes against their shipping to what the English-language Tehran newspaper 'Kayhan' described as 'well-appraised tactical acts'.

Iran is preparing, however, for a major ground offensive against Iraq.

More than a million 'Basij' volunteers fighters and revolutionary guards are massed along the front near Iraq's border, awaiting signs of any worsening of the Gulf crisis.

Majlis and military leaders said they were confident of meeting any new provocation in the Gulf.

Diplomats said recent demonstrations by the revolutionary guards and 'Basij' signified the new offensive was more likely than ever.

The demonstrations were likely to have assured the leaders that, despite economic hardships caused by the war, it had enough support to go ahead with the ground assault.

Rafsanjani said Iran had been surprised by Iraq's switch to attacking ships at Kharg Island.

The switch was designed to starve Iran economically and 'internationalise' the conflict, he said.

Iran had expected the

CORRESPONDENT

Iraqis to counter-attack and try to recapture the oil-rich Majnoon Islands in southern Iraq when they launched their attacks in the Gulf.

Iraqi attacks in the Gulf were 'a sign of (Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's) frustration in the war, which he himself imposed, typical of the suicidal actions of a man who sees his own downfall as imminent', Rafsanjani said.

There were more than two million militarily-trained youths in Iran, prepared for a likely intervention by the United States.

Finn 'hardliners' ousted

HELSINKI — The 'Euro-Stalinist' majority in the Finnish Communist Party has sacked party chairman Jouko Kajanoja and removed all so-called 'hardliners' from the leadership at its three-day congress.

Kajanoja, 41, was replaced by aggressive 'Euro', Arvo Aalto, who immediately cautioned the 'hardliners' against creating chaos in the party.

Aalto's place as general secretary is taken by Aano Aitamurto, chief of the building workers' union, who has successfully purged his own union of pro-Moscow 'hardliners'.

Aalto, general secretary of the Finnish party for the past 15 years, is a leading advocate of the 'historic compromise' between the Stalinist parties and the bourgeois parties.

He supports the 'Euro-communist' line developed by Santiago Carrillo of Spain, Enrico Berlinguer of Italy and the leaders of the British Communist Party.

It rejects the revolutionary and leading role of the working class and bases its perspective on political alliances (liquidation) with bourgeois parties such as the Tories, Liberals, Radicals and Christian Democrats.

Result

The 'Euro' triumph came in a vote on the Central Committee which the Aalto group won by 193 to 163. As a result, the 'hardliners' then pulled out their candidates from the elections for the 50-member Central Committee and the nine-member Political Bureau.

As a result, the two leading bodies are now filled solely with 'Euros'.

The 'Euro' victory came in spite of strong lobbying for the pro-Moscow wing by the Soviet bureaucracy. On May Day, ousted party leader Kajanoja received a personal message of support from Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko.

The Kremlin said in a message to the congress that Communist parties could be successful only if they remained loyal to orthodox Marxism-Leninism and fought off attempts to weaken this commitment or sow inner-party divisions.

A high-ranking Soviet delegation headed by Politburo member Mikhail Solomentsev attended the congress.

The Finnish Communist Party, one of the largest in the West with 33,000 members, was founded in Moscow in 1918, a year after the Bolshevik Revolution.

A Tass report of the congress said that it had been dogged by 'difficulties', but did not mention that the 'hardliners' had been swept from all leading bodies.

Tass said: 'The difficulties which the Communist Party of Finland has experienced in recent years manifested themselves during the congress.

'This has found reflection both in some documents of the congress and during the election of the party's leading bodies.'

Aalto said at the end of the congress that if the 'hardliners' wanted to arrange an extraordinary party congress then this would mean a final split in the party.

Decide

The defeated pro-Moscow group which controls eight of the party's 16 districts will decide next week whether to form a separate party, call an emergency congress or submit to the 'Euros'.

After the 'hardliners' were defeated at the Spanish Stalinist congress last December they formed a new party which was backed by Moscow.

SHABBY TREATMENT OF SOUTH AFRICAN REFUGEE

HACKNEY council has condemned the 'shabby treatment' by the Home Secretary of a South African refugee whose application for permanent residency in Britain has been turned down.

Jonathan Bloch, who has lived in Britain since 1976, is due to put his case before a tribunal tomorrow. The Home Office maintains that the proceedings do not constitute an appeal.

Bloch is the co-author of 'British Intelligence and Covert Action', a book about the undercover activities of the intelligence services since World War II.

He was forced to flee South Africa because of his involvement in trade union and student politics. Refugees normally acquire the right of permanent residence after four years, but the government maintains that it is awarded entirely at the Home Secretary's discretion.

Last chance at tribunal

After a lengthy delay, Leon Brittan rejected Bloch's application for permanent residency on the grounds that details of British intelligence operations in the book could 'place servants of the crown at the risk of great harm'.

Because of the way the courts have chosen to interpret the law, Bloch has no right of appeal against the decision, though he does have the right to a hearing.

Unless Brittan changes his attitude, Bloch will have to leave this country when his one-year visa runs out at the end of the year, provided the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees can find another country willing to take him.

The case has received wide coverage in the international press. 'The Times' described Bloch as 'an ill-disposed journalist', but 85 MPs have backed his application for resident status.

Bloch maintains that if the government considers his book harmful to national security they should take action through the courts, not by the backdoor method of withholding residence rights.

Before it was published the book was checked by a barrister for libel and breaches of the Official Secrets Act in order to avoid risk of prosecution.

No action has been taken against the book's co-author, who is a British citizen, and 'British Intelligence and Covert Action' has not been banned and continues to be freely on sale.

Brynley Heaven, chairman of Hackney police committee, compared the treatment of Bloch with that received by Zola

JONATHAN BLOCH

Budd, the South African athlete whose application for British nationality was processed in a record ten days.

The council also expressed its opposition to next week's visit by South African premier P.W. Botha and contrasted the government's invitation to Botha with its treatment of Jonathan Bloch.

NATFHE CONFERENCE IN BIRMINGHAM

Lecturers worried by court order

'DEEP concern' was expressed yesterday by the National Association of Teachers in Further and Higher Education (NATFHE) conference at Solihull over a High Court ruling that individual staff members at the Polytechnic of North London must comply with a court order.

The order instructs Poly staff to attempt to identify students involved in a demonstration against National Front student organiser Patrick Harrington.

An emergency motion, carried overwhelmingly, declared support for the lecturers and court of governors. It said that supplying the names of students to solicitors acting for a National

BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT

Front official was 'an affront' to lecturers' civil liberties.

Keith Cook, a lecturer at the Polytechnic of North London, said lecturers had refused to identify students because they felt it would be a breach of trust.

He said the issues involved affected professional integrity and academic freedom.

Earlier, the conference had approved another emergency resolution expressing total opposition to South African Prime Minister Mr P.W. Botha's visit to Britain at the invitation of the British government.

Conference unanimously passed an emergency motion on Sunday condemning Gwent County Council's sacking of 400 lecturers, who were then offered their jobs back with increased hours.

The motion called for industrial action, including a national demonstration.

Moving the motion, a Gwent member said: 'This is not Grunwick's. This is not Eddie Shah. This is a Labour-controlled County Council.'

Support

Unanimous support was also given to a motion opposing the acceptance by union members of voluntary redundancy through premature retirement without replacement.

Part-timers won a magnificent advance when conference agreed to a National Standing Panel for hourly-paid part-time teachers. Barry Lovejoy, West Midlands Region, said:

'Part-timers are the academic lump labour. There was no mention of part-timers in the general secretary's report today, which was disgusting. And there is no commitment to industrial action to ensure the part-timers' parity claim is won.'

An emergency motion in support of the miners was carried unanimously.

Bill Greet, a lecturer from the mining department of a college in the Yorkshire and Humber-side Region, condemned the legal and police sanctions on NUM members and asked the NEC to maintain support by further donations and solidarity action.

The conference gave a standing ovation to Hugh Clark from Birch Coppice NUM, who spoke of the dangers to other trade unions if the NUM is beaten.

The GCHQ unions national committee held its first meeting in London last week to plan a campaign to defend trade union rights

GCHQ's scab union has dismal start

WORKERS who have defied the Tory ban on unions at Cheltenham GCHQ have been heartened by the dismal failure of attempts to set up a state-controlled staff association.

The management called an inaugural meeting recently, attended by an official of the government's conciliation service ACAS, and just 114 employees turned up.

Campaign

Meanwhile last week the GCHQ unions national committee held its first meeting at the headquarters of the Council of Civil Service Unions in London to plan a campaign to defend trade union rights.

The committee launched a manifesto which demands the reinstatement of anyone sacked or transferred as a result of Thatcher's decree.

Next month the unions are challenging the legality of the Tory ban in the High Court and a number of protests are being organised to coincide with the hearing.

Jack Hart, who was elected chairman of the committee, told News Line that since the ban was introduced, the employers had gone on the offensive, arbitrarily changing conditions of service.

Workers who refused to sign away their rights or agree to be transferred have now been told by the government that they have been deemed to have agreed to a transfer.

But Hart said: 'I have no intention of agreeing to that and so we shall have to wait and see what steps they take next.'

Mike McClinton, who works at the GCHQ outstation at Earls Court in London, told News Line: 'Now they are trying to lump us in with those who have agreed to a transfer, but I refuse to be transferred under any circumstances. I'll not shift at the behest of the government.'

'As far as I can see what has happened at GCHQ is the thin end of the wedge. Anyone in the civil service, particularly areas like the Foreign Office and the Ministry of Defence, are no doubt next on the government's list.'

Terry Benstead, who works at the Scarborough outstation, said: 'It's beyond me how anyone can submit to having such a basic freedom taken away.'

'After being active in my department for 30 years as a trade union official in the most mild way, I feel that I have been kicked in the teeth by the government.'

'I can only think that this is connected to the government's attitude towards trade unions in general. One wonders what will be next. Telecommunications? The MOD? I can see them making any excuse to de-trade unionise these areas.'

THE MINERS' STRUGGLE

4-PAGE PULL-OUT

Point of Ayr strikers make a defiant stand

STRIKING miners and their wives at Point of Ayr, North Wales, are determined to keep up the struggle in the face of enormous local hostility.

The majority of men at the pit are defying the NUM strike and continuing to work, and members of the T&GWU are driving buses through the picket lines in spite of their union's support for the miners' fight.

'We took the leaflets out to try and collect money and food,' said Lynne Cheetham, whose husband Tony is on strike, 'and people were just tearing them up and throwing them at us. Even when we just walk down the street, or go into a pub we have to put up with people making remarks and giving us hostile stares. Some of the families have had rude letters put through the doors.'

Both men and women are manning the picket lines.

'It got so demoralising for the men standing there day after day, watching the others going in, that we decided to get out there with them,' Lynne went on. 'Now a lot of the husbands and wives take it in turn on the different shifts. Many times I and the other women have been out on the picket lines at four o'clock in the morning.'

Buses

'This is a Tory area round here,' she went on. 'With the majority of the pit still working, those fellows who are out are getting it from all sides.'

There has been a large police presence on the picket lines. Some of the buses have been going through so fast that on more than one occasion pickets have nearly been knocked down.

An NUM lodge official was punched and pulled off the bus during the week when he tried to talk to the men going into work.

The women's support group had its second meeting last Friday, and they were delighted to get a visit from a group of striking miners' wives from Bold colliery in Lancashire, who came to share their experiences.

Pleased

They were also tremendously pleased to get a carload of food which had been collected by NUPE members in Bangor.

'It's given us a real boost to know that that sort of support is there,' they said.

Striking miners and their wives at Point of Ayr, were joined by women from Bold colliery, Lancashire, as they receive a carload of food presented by NUPE members from Bangor.

Sutton wives campaign for funds

WIVES of Sutton Manor miners in St Helens met on Sunday to discuss ways of raising urgently-needed funds for their group.

They have been promised money by the local council and Sutton Manor NUM but at present all travelling expenses and telephone calls have to be met from their own nearly empty pockets.

They want to set up an under-fives play scheme to allow more wives to participate in strike activities and make better provision for hot meals.

They also discussed the increasing police harassment of the local community. A 13-year-old girl who was accompanying her father to a chip shop was arrested on soliciting charges and 300 police laid siege to Bold Welfare club.

This evening the Everyman Youth Theatre are putting on 'Strike While the Iron is Hot' at West Sutton Labour Club.

● A wives' support group has been set up in Billinge village which is between St Helens and Wigan.

All Trades Unions Alliance publication

£1.00 + 25p p&p

'Nowhere are the class antagonisms more sharply defined than between the miners and the ruling class. They run deeper than any mine shaft in the country.'

Crucial to understanding the struggle of the miners today, this pamphlet analyses the decline of the coal industry in the course of this century. Tracing the history of the struggle against closures and increased exploitation, it shows why only socialism can solve the crisis, and examines the problems of leadership in the miners' union.

Butchered by Toryism! Buried by reformism!

THE Workers Revolutionary Party and its industrial department, the All Trades Unions Alliance, call on the labour and trade union movement to give total support to the Leyland truck makers sitting in to fight the closure of their Bathgate factory in Scotland.

Like the miners, they are in a life-or-death struggle. That is why we welcome next Saturday's joint demonstration by Bathgate workers and the National Union of Mineworkers.

Jobs have already been cut from 6,000 down to 1,800 at the Bathgate factory which is supplied with steel from Ravenscraig works, which in turn takes the entire coal output of the local Polkemmet colliery.

Two years ago the Plessey factory in Bathgate closed: the BL shutdown will take local unemployment to more than 40 per cent. Meanwhile, the Tory-run Lothian regional council is gleefully slashing social services along the lines imposed by the Treasury dictatorship over local government.

The lessons must be learnt from the closure of the Peugeot-Talbot car plant at Linwood four years ago with the loss of 5,000 jobs. The Scottish TUC, together with national Labour Party and trade union leaders, completely restricted the campaign to petitions, parliamentary protests, prayers — but no industrial action.

Singer's at Clydebank, Massey Ferguson at Kilmarnock, and countless other factories disappeared the same way. Their epitaph should read: 'Butchered by Toryism, buried by reformism.'

At a special STUC-organised meeting in Bathgate at the weekend, senior Scottish Labour MP Harry Ewing announced: 'We have had successes in fighting closures in the past and I believe that Bathgate can be our most outstanding success yet.'

The 400,000 in the Scottish dole queue will hear this with incredulity. But James Milne, STUC general secretary, went on to give examples of these 'successes', as being Upper Clyde Shipbuilders, and the run-down Ravenscraig steel works. In fact, 2,500 jobs were lost at UCS during the 1971-1972 'work-in' and thousands more have gone since. Ravenscraig has suffered sweeping job cuts and still faces a Tory closure threat.

Labour MPs and full-time union leaders decided at last Saturday's conference to send an all-party delegation to meet Prime Minister Thatcher. They will get the same reception that Len Murray got when he visited No 10 Downing Street on February 23 to offer a compromise over her ban on trade unionism at GCHQ, Cheltenham. She told him to get lost!

Bathgate workers and the miners are joined together in a fight to defend the most basic democratic right — the right to a job. They cannot secure this demand on their own. It must involve the strength of the whole working class through organising the General Strike.

We call on Bathgate workers to unite with miners, steelworkers, railwaymen, local government workers, teachers and health service workers in fighting inside and outside the TUC for a General Strike.

We urge the building of Community Councils, or Soviets, to bring together all those involved in the anti-Tory struggle so that the defence of basic democratic rights can be organised throughout the community and the burdens of the strike shared. The Community Council must provide all the essential back-up support for the occupation of the Bathgate plant.

The question of the organisation of the General Strike against Thatcher's Bonapartist dictatorship and the capitalist state machine will be the subject of a special conference called by the All Trades Unions Alliance in Sheffield on June 30. (See advertisement on Page 1).

CALL A GENERAL STRIKE

DON'T BEND ON CAPITAL

A section of the march through Harlesden yesterday called in support of the miners

Kent miners' leader Jack Collins and Greater London Council police committee chairman Paul Boateng on the GLC bus which led the Harlesden demonstration

RIKE TO BACK THE MINERS

CLOSURES

Scargill knows the score

SAYS KENT MINERS' LEADER

MINERS leaders entering talks with the Coal Board this week must not bend from their position against any closures, Kent NUM secretary Jack Collins told a rally of miners and supporters in north London yesterday.

'Scargill and the rest of our negotiators know the score, but I want them to know that the miners are not prepared to settle for less than our full demands,' he said.

He told marchers that talk of divisions inside the Coal Board should not be believed. The negotiators who are meeting miners' leaders this week are united with MacGregor in wanting to see the destruction of the NUM, he warned.

Collins was speaking after a march through the streets of Brent, organised by the local trades council.

The march was supported by ASLEF train drivers, and there were banners from Tilmanstone NUM, Betteshanger wives support group, and the local Labour Party.

The Kilburn branch of the Workers Revolutionary Party raised loud demands for a General Strike in support of the miners.

Also speaking at the rally, Greater London Council leader Ken Livingstone said the struggle to defend miners' jobs and the fight to defend local government were inseparable. 'They are all part of a major struggle against this government,' he said.

He said that the GLC would make certain that people in London had the right to express their opposition to its abolition before the year was out.

The Labour group on the GLC have discussed either their resignation before the ending of elections, or a London-wide referendum.

Support for the GLC had been shown in seven separate opinion polls.

BY BEN RUDDER

'That is because we have fought this government,' he said.

The GLC will also be mounting its full opposition to next weekend's visit of P. W. Botha, the prime minister of the racist regime in South Africa.

A new banner will be flown from County Hall denouncing the visit, and advertisements are being placed in national newspapers listing the crimes committed in London by South African secret police against opponents of the apartheid regime.

GLC police committee chairman Paul Boateng said that the Thatcher government was now using the police as the basis for all its industrial policy.

The same police brutality experienced daily by Brent workers, and especially during the Grunwick dispute, was now being used against the miners.

This use of state violence by the Tories was a measure of their desperation to prop up the capitalist system in crisis, he said.

It was now time to prepare the labour movement for the consequences of the passage through parliament of the Police Bill, he warned, because soon every community could expect to face the kind of police actions which the miners have experienced during the last 11 weeks.

ORGREAVE FACES . . . Some of the thousands of miners outside the south Yorkshire coking plant listening to their president Arthur Scargill (see page one)

General Strike, the sooner the better

'WE ARE still very militant in Kent, even though we have been out on strike for nearly 12 weeks,' Kevin Wood, a 21-year-old miner from Betteshanger colliery told News Line yesterday.

'But we should definitely have a General Strike, and the sooner the better,' he said.

'I agree,' added Kevin's colleague, 21-year-old Alan Ward. 'A General Strike is the only way to sort things out in this country.

'We also need to let Arthur Scargill know that he was right to insist that there can be no talks unless the Coal Board agree to withdraw the closures.

'Workers should realise what they face if the miners don't win this fight. For example, a friend of mine is virtually not allowed out of his house because of the bail conditions imposed by the courts.

'He has been told he must not go anywhere within a quarter of a mile of Rams-gate Harbour — although he lives within the quarter mile radius.

'So he was told by the magistrate that every time he leaves the house, he can only walk away from the centre of town — which is away from the shops and away from the social clubs.

'The courts are saying to anyone, not only the miners, that you have no rights to fight for what you want or what you believe in.'

Neil Kinnock had visited the colliery during his election campaign and told miners that he would support them in any struggle if they voted for him.

Now that the miners were in struggle, the Labour leader was still demanding a ballot and refusing to support the miners, they said.

It was time for workers to join the miners' fight to reverse the cuts in the health service and give job security and better wages for all.

'The most important thing now is to get more workers on strike alongside us. That is why we hoped that the rail unions would carry on with their action,' said Kevin.

'If they had come out, then we would be on our way to a General Strike.'

THE MINERS' STRUGGLE

The case for Community Councils

EVERY trade unionist and worker must come to the aid of the miners in their struggle for jobs against the capitalist state, the Thatcher dictatorship and the National Coal Board.

The working class as a whole and their professional allies must share the burdens and sacrifices of the fight which the miners are waging in defence of the most basic of rights — the right to work and to organise freely in trade unions independent of the state.

Trade union branches, shop stewards' committees, trades councils and other labour movement organisations must take the initiative now in the setting up of Community Councils which will act immediately to meet the needs of the miners.

Thatcher and the state are out to smash up pit communities, driving families into destitution and starving the miners back to work. Their aim is not only to destroy the miners' union, but all trade unions.

Miners are, therefore, fighting on behalf of the whole working class. They cannot be left to shoulder the burdens of the strike alone. All workers must ensure that the miners can continue the struggle under the best conditions, and that a common front is presented to the class enemy.

As well as the trade unions, the Community Councils must draw in representatives of every section of the working class and their middle-class and professional allies involved in the anti-Tory fight — miners' wives, youth groups, voluntary organisations and local Labour councils.

At the very same time the Tories are attacking the miners, they are also establishing a central government dictatorship over local Labour councils, threatening cities like Liverpool with financial destruction and abolishing seven authorities covering the major industrial areas of England. Community Councils will take responsibility for the defence of local councils, jobs and services.

There are immediate and practical tasks which flow from the defiant resistance of the miners to the provocations of the NCB, an unprecedented military-style police operation directed by the Home Office through Scotland Yard and the organised harassment by social security, gas and electricity bureaucrats.

The Workers Revolutionary Party believes that the tasks of Community Councils, which should extend beyond mining districts, will be to:

- Provide food for families and children of those on strike. No miner to be starved back to work by the Tories.
- Pay urgent bills for electricity and gas, calling on workers not to carry out cut-offs as an act of solidarity with the strike. Raise funds for new clothing and footwear for strikers.
- Ensure that no miner is evicted by local councils for not being able to pay rent or rates. Make certain that medical supplies are paid for so that miners and their families can get the treatment prescribed.
- Arrange for the care of the elderly dependent on support from miners' families, ensure nursery provision so that miners' wives can participate fully in winning support for the strike.
- Organise the provision of free legal representation for miners who need it. Provide accommodation for miners from other areas.
- Watch out for and organise against provocateurs. Organise the defence of union offices and funds from state attacks.
- Rally other workers to support and back up miners' pickets and organise marches and rallies.

LABOUR COUNCILS must be asked to:

- Provide free school meals and transport for miners' children.
- Make office accommodation in council offices available to miners, with facilities for printing and communications.
- Make sure that no evictions take place because of mounting debts. Wipe out rent and rate arrears.
- Provide free public transport for strikers and their families. Make all council facilities available free to miners. Lay on entertainments and outings for miners' families.
- Resist having to foot the bill for the cost of the Downing Street directed police operation against the miners' union.

This is the best way to answer the challenge of the capitalist state, and the Tory dictatorship. Community Councils — as Soviet-type organisations — will give the working class confidence in its own independent strength to defeat the class enemy and provide the basis for the successful struggle for power which has now been joined.

We're out for as long as it takes

'THE High Court action against the union last week has only strengthened our resolve at Arkwright Colliery,' says NUM committee member Steve Brunt from North Derbyshire.

'We are preparing a letter and petition to be sent to Arthur Scargill and Peter Heathfield to tell them we want no compromise this time.'

'The Tories have gone through the steel industry and the railways and they think that if they crack us then they can finish off the whole movement.'

'But they are not going to do that, and the pickets in the area want to make it clear to our leaders that they are prepared to stop out as long as it takes.'

Solid

'You can tell the determination of the members when you consider that after 11 weeks on strike, we are still absolutely solid at Arkwright.'

'A handful turned up Monday, but when they saw the picket line they just went back home.'

There are only 42 scabs out of 11,500 miners in the North Derbyshire area, and their number are falling every day.

'The activists are now saying that if we are going to be out for five or six months then we might as well go for the lot. We are not just talking about pit closures, but the miserable 5.2 per cent pay offer and the question of a four-day week.'

Brunt said that most miners he knew recognised that the miners could not win this fight alone, but they were still distrustful of the role of the TUC if a formal call for the General Strike was put to the TUC General Council.

Challenge

'We are going to have to challenge the right-wing on the TUC, and those that support Murray, but I don't know if we will get anything out of them.'

'But it is absolutely clear that we definitely need industrial action by other workers.'

'It is a great pity that the rail workers have called off their action — I had great hopes in Knapp and Buckton and I thought they would go ahead with their industrial action.'

Brunt is among many miners whose view of the police has altered irrevocably during the last 11 weeks.

'I used to have a certain amount of respect for the police — they had a job to do and one that had to be done.'

'But my experience in the last 11 weeks has completely rearranged my thinking and any respect

A plea for the future on Saturday's Cannock demonstration

I had for the police has been thrown out of the window.

'A lad just said to me he thought the police were alright in Cannock, but I just don't believe that can be true after what I've seen.'

Brunt also paid tribute to the young miners who had faced police harassment and intimidation on the picket line, but were still ready to respond to any request to join picket lines at all hours of the day.

Scientists demand leukaemia probe

Fears continue to mount over evidence linking the discharge of low-level radioactive and chemical waste with a rising rate of cancer in Scotland.

Scottish Office statistics on cancer cases between 1977 and 1981, notably in Central Scotland, showed a big increase. These figures emerged soon after a report showing an 'apparent outbreak' of leukaemia on the West Coast of Scotland — amidst allegations of a cover-up. Published in the Lancet magazine, the official report disclosed that, in a five-year period, twice as many young people as normal caught leukaemia in the vicinity of Hunter-ston power station on the Ayrshire coast. Two Ayrshire MPs demanded to know why they had been repeatedly given figures by the government and the local health board showing no significant excess of leukaemia in the area. Now the new statistics affecting the whole of Scotland have intensified concern. In 1977, there were 21,464 Scottish cases of cancer. In 1981, this had risen to 23,841 — an increase of nearly 10 per cent.

In the Bonnybridge-Denny area — where the controversial Re-Chem plant is located — the 1977 figure of 138 had risen by more than 38 per cent to 188. Dr John Wheeler, of the Society for the Control of Toxic and Troublesome Emission (Scottie), issued a statement saying a group of workers from the Re-Chem plant had approached him to tell him they were gripped with fear about their health. In addition, the Scottish Campaign to Resist the Atomic Menace (SCRAM) published a claim at the weekend that an American Poseidon nuclear submarine had collided, 175 miles south-west of Cornwall, with barrels of nuclear waste dumped without authorisation. The Hunterston disclosures were causing even more concern, however. And Dr Eric Wright, of St Andrews University, who is doing a three-year investigation into myeloid leukaemia, a radiation-linked cancer, commented: 'If I lived in these areas I would be personally concerned.'

Part of an anti-nuclear demonstration through Glasgow — with concern over radiation levels matching concern over nuclear missile bases in Scotland

Mystery of Hercules A

A DISTANT galaxy which gives the appearance of blowing giant smoke rings out of one side, is puzzling two US astronomers. They told the Washington-based National Science Foundation that Hercules A was the first galaxy to be observed emitting large rings, each of them apparently bigger than our own galaxy, the Milky Way.

'These rings are not smoke rings or bubbles being puffed out of one side of the galaxy, but they do present that appearance,' one of the astronomers, John Dreher of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said. 'New and unexpected, their nature is currently a mystery'.

Hercules A is a so-called radio Galaxy which sends out powerful waves of energy in the form of radio waves. Dreher and Eric Feigelson of Pennsylvania State University found one side of Hercules A was spewing out a twisting jet of radio waves, something which is not uncommon with radio galaxies.

New particle research

CONSTRUCTION work has begun on a new particle physics research station in West Germany. The Hera particle accelerator will be the first to collide electrons and protons head on, and it is hoped that the experiment will test the theory which predicts that protons and neutrons, the heavier atomic particles, are each composed of three smaller particles called quarks.

Some evidence of the existence of the quarks, which were predicted by theoretical physicists several years ago, has been found with the proton-anti-proton collider at Cern in Switzerland. But scientists hope that the Hera collider will give definite evidence for the first time. This is because the electrons which will be fired at the protons are much smaller than anti-protons.

Complex
Rather than hurling two relatively large and complex atomic particles at each other, and trying to put together the pieces which emerge, the Hera collider will act more like a dissection of the proton with a fine scalpel. Unlike the results at Cern, where the numerous particles emerging from a collision could come from either the proton, the anti-proton or from the interaction of particles from each, scientists predict that the Hera results will show particles which come only from the protons. The electrons will collide with the protons with an energy equivalent to the amount released when a proton is transformed into energy in an atomic explosion. Scientists hope that this energy will therefore be enough to exhaust most of the possible outcomes of the disintegration of the proton. In order to develop this energy on impact, the protons and electrons will be accelerated in opposite directions around a circular vacuum chamber nearly four miles long. The particles will be guided in their path by magnets which will be cooled to near Absolute Zero (minus 273 degrees centigrade), and powered by radio signals.

STALINISM IN FRANCE: Vol 1

The First Twenty Years of the French Communist Party

JUST OUT!
Price £4.50

Available at PAPERBACKS CENTRES or by post from: New Park Publications Ltd., 21b Old Town, London SW4 0JT

The origins, growth and political degeneration of the French Communist Party, from its foundations to the outbreak of World War II. Tom Kemp traces the about-turns in the policy and leadership of the CP in France, in line with the rise of Stalinism in the Soviet Union and the struggle within the Communist International. Invaluable for understanding the roots of the crisis in the French Communist Party today, this book shows how the working class was betrayed by Popular Frontism in 1936.

Cecil's Castle an Esher mudlark

BY OUR RACING CORRESPONDENT

SANDOWN makes history today by staging the first pattern race to be run in the evening in Britain. But more importantly the Henry II Stakes is a full dress rehearsal for the Ascot Gold Cup.

Little Wolf and Carlingford Castle (7.15) sure to be among the leading contenders at the royal meeting next month should fight out the finish with preference for Carlingford Castle.

Rain

Henry Cecil has spent the last few weeks looking anxiously skywards, not for inspiration but for the rain which will boost his star stayer's chances.

HENRY CECIL

His prayers have not been answered by two days of continuous rain, and with the going soft, conditions are ideal for Carlingford Castle.

He ran two tremendous races last term when second to Teenoso in the Derby and third to Sun Princess in the St Leger — on both occasions there was plenty of give in the ground — and this is a gilt-edged chance for him.

His only run this season, a respectable four-length second to Band in the Yorkshire Cup earlier this month, was on ground too fast for him and plenty of improvement can be expected.

Chantco (7.45) can extend his unbeaten run to four in the National Stakes. He has yet to be extended and provided he can handle the change in going should be too good for Primo Dominie, a convincing winner at Ascot on his only outing.

Treated

At REDCAR the best bet could be the one-eyed Claudius Crozet (3.45) in the Redcar Amateur Riders' Stakes.

He gets little respite from the handicapper these days but in this conditions event he is particularly well treated, and should be well ridden by the accomplished Maxine Carvalho.

CARLINGFORD CASTLE finished just behind Teenoso at Epsom last June

What do we have to do?

Matthew Nugent reports on the sad plight of women's football. A sport ignored by the media despite its success at international level

FOR TERRY Wiseman in particular, defeat was very hard to take at Luton on Sunday.

The England goalkeeper had kept her team in the game against Sweden in the second leg of the inaugural UEFA Women's Cup with a string of brave and spectacular saves.

England levelled the final 1-1 on aggregate in the first half. There were no further goals — and that most frustrating of systems, the penalty shoot-out, was brought into operation.

Sweden scored four times, England converted just three. The Swedes captured the trophy.

It was a cruel way to separate two teams who had played their hearts out for 70 minutes in the most dreadful conditions.

Two days of incessant rain left the dubious Luton surface like a newly-ploughed field. A cold, swirling wind lashed the rain around the pitch. No matter where the players turned they were hit by the conditions. There was no respite — and nobody asked for it either.

It was an perfect lesson in determination and commitment.

Just over 2,500 braved the conditions. Most of them will have gone away with a new perspective on women's football. The skill factor was of the highest level, and the tackling at times was bonecrunching, but fair.

The girls had done everything that had just been asked of them. It's just a pity that the British press were not there in force to see it all.

The Swedes brought with them enough media men and women to field two teams. The British press would have found it hard to muster enough people to control such a game with a referee and linesmen!

Defeat would have been a little less bitter for Wiseman and her teammates if they could have been cosseted by a stream of good press reports yesterday morning. Then they would have known that their game had finally arrived.

PIA SUNDHAGE (right) Sweden's highly rated striker wasn't given any room by the English defence. Here Angela Gallimore gets stuck in to the Swedish star

'You know that when somebody did go on to the sports desk at the "Daily Mirror" about today's game, the person at the other end said that they didn't regard women's football as being a sport,' England's amiable manager, Martin Reagan, told me after Sunday's game.

'What do we have to do to change the situation? We get to a UEFA final, the girls play their hearts out in atrocious conditions in a really exciting game and yet we just don't get the coverage we deserve.'

Talking in length to Reagan about the situation after the game didn't throw any light on the sport's biggest dilemma.

ANNA SVENJEBJ proudly displays her trophy as woman-of-the-match

He had certainly done all in his power to produce a team full of fighters with a fair smattering of skill and flair as well.

Women's football has been organised here for over 14 years now. The Women's Football Association (WFA) can boast over 200 clubs and close to 6,000 registered players.

In terms of participants and organised competition it is one of the largest in the country.

However, every London club approached to host Sunday's final turned them down. Some hadn't even the decency to reply to the WFA's request.

The next UEFA competition, run over two years, begins again in September. England will find it hard to raise the money to participate.

'We have to let UEFA know soon if we are going to enter,' WFA secretary Linda Whitehead told me yesterday. 'But at this point in time unless we can find a sponsor for the tournament then it is very unlikely that we will be able to enter.'

Sadly it is yet another example of the way we treat our sportsmen and women.

A friend from the Swedish press told me that Sweden's victory would make front page news in ALL the country's national papers. 'They will be treated as national heroes when they return home tomorrow,' he added. 'You have not managed to break down the barriers in this country yet. Until you do, I think the game will suffer.'

For some of the English girls playing on Sunday, the battle to win recognition may soon be at an end.

Elizabeth Deighan, their fiery midfielder, confided to me after the game that the time for her to hang up her boots at international level may be very close. She has 36 caps now, but at 30 feels that now might be the right moment to say goodbye to the game.

MUD BATHS seemed to be the order of the day at Kenilworth Road on Sunday but England's Liz Deighan (left) still showed tremendous skill throughout an action-packed 70 minutes

Others may follow, but Reagan will not cast aside the players who have done so well for him. 'Every one of these girls is in the squad on merit,' he stressed. 'We do have some youngsters, very talented ones, coming through. In that respect the game would seem to be on a sound footing.'

Reagan has things right at his end. But the pressures of raising the money — and finding the venues for big matches — could soon take its toll on some of the WFA's hard-working committee.

Blood, sweat and tears just doesn't seem to be enough when it comes to making a breakthrough with the media.

As the impressive new trophy was presented to the Swedish captain and the celebrations began at Luton in the rain on Sunday, Wiseman shed a tear. She looked across at the victors and wondered, would she have another crack at the trophy?

She will. Of that there is no doubt in my mind. Finances, eventually, will be raised and Wiseman and the rest of the youngsters will bring the trophy back to these shores.

It's such a pity that Deighan and some of the other girls who have been around so long possibly won't be there to share in the success.

Next month the Football Association will vote on whether to co-opt a WFA representative on to their 89-man general council. It is a step in the right direction and it looks as if Whitehead will then have the chance to take up the fight within the archaic bastion of the English game.

It would be foolish to SWEDEN'S Angelica Burevik ignore her when she gets there.

There may very well be 89 men with old-fashioned ideas at the FA, but they will be soon shaken into action by this little lady from Yorkshire. Then, hopefully, the FA will throw their support in behind the WFA's fight for recognition.

THIS picture, taken 23 years ago, captures one of Britain's best footballers on the beach at Rhyl, North Wales.

Tomorrow he will fulfil a life-time dream when he plays in the European Champions' Cup final in Rome. News Line exclusively talked to him this week and his thoughts and hopes for European glory will appear in tomorrow's paper.

JAEGER RETIRES

MARTINA NAVRATILOVA overcame the first round hurdle in Paris yesterday as she sets out to capture the French Open tennis title — the last part of her Grand Slam.

However, the first day's play at the Stade Roland Garros did have an early casualty when the fourth seed, Andrea Jaeger, retired from her match fellow American Jaime Golder with a shoulder injury. Golder had won the first set 7-5.

In the men's singles, No.3 seed Jimmy Connors advanced to the second round with a comfortable 6-2, 6-3, 6-1 win over American Eric Fromm.

Navratilova, the world's No.1 in the women's rankings, defeated the French 'wild card' entry Nathalie Tauziat 6-1, 6-2.

Cheers

But the American didn't have it all her own way. The French teenager was far from disgraced and earned cheers from the small crowd at centre court yesterday when she broke her opponent's service in the second set.

'The first match is always trying to get into the swing of things,' Navratilova said afterwards.

She raced through the first three games in seven minutes, and although Tauziat managed to hold her service in the sixth game, the set was over in 19 minutes.

ped the procession, earning a service break to the delight of the crowd to move 2-1 in front in the second set.

Navratilova, fuming at herself for dropping a point, decided enough was enough — and did not concede another game.

Jaeger, 18, will not look back on yesterday with pleasure after abandoning her match against Golder having lost the first set 7-5 after leading 5-1 at one stage.

'I have a problem with a muscle in my shoulder. I'm not going to ruin my arm for one match. It's certainly no fun playing with a bad arm when it's cold,' Jaeger said.

There were doubts at Roland Garros last night as to whether Jaeger would be fit to compete at Wimbledon next month. She reached the final there last year before being beaten by Navratilova.

Connors, beaten in the quarter-finals last year, did not encounter too many problems against Fromm, whom, incidentally he beat in last year's third round in Paris.

On that occasion Fromm managed to win a set. Yesterday Connors allowed him just six games in three sets, three of them from service breaks.

The US Open champion pleased the crowd with the neat chips and slices he interspersed in his hard-hitting game. 'When I first came here I played at one speed all the time. I was young enough,' Connors said afterwards.

Francome breaks record

JOHN FRANCOME duly obliged the waiting crowds at Fontwell Park yesterday and recorded the National Hunt record of winners (1,036) when Don't Touch won the second race on the card by six lengths.

Francome, 31, finally overtook Stan Mellor's 12-year-old mark in six years less than his predecessor and immediately said he would ride for another season.

After returning to an ovation in the winner's circle, the Swindon-born rider said: 'When I rode my 1,000th winner, Stan was the first to send me a telegram of congratulations.'

Injury

'It's nice to hold the record, though I never set out to break it,' Francome added.

Still suffering from an injury to his left leg sustained at Chepstow racecourse several weeks ago, Francome remarked: 'I was going to have tomorrow and Wednesday off if I drew a blank here, because the leg is still sore.'

'As long as I keep enjoying riding, I'll go on for another season. I'd like to ride six winners at a meeting. That'd be better than a Grand National win.'

THE WINDIES DEMOLISH GLAMORGAN

WEST INDIES re-emphasised their compelling power by demolishing Glamorgan by an innings and 226 runs at Swansea yesterday to record a second mammoth win in five days.

Captain Clive Lloyd gave his fast bowlers four-and-a-half-hours and a first innings lead of 314 in which to bowl out the county a second time.

Overs

But his new ball trio of Joel Garner, Michael Holding and Eldine Baptiste needed only 40 overs to do the job and skittle Glamorgan for 88.

There was little resistance in Glamorgan as the county suffered their heaviest defeat against a touring side — and at the end extras with 23, proved to be their main asset.

Garner softened-up the batting with an opening 14-over spell that yielded three wickets for 21 and combined match figures of 8 for 40. Holding and Baptiste cleaned up the rest.

Ominously for England, the tourists non-playing manager Jackie Hendriks, said: 'Our bowlers are beginning to find the target now and, although not at the top of their form, they are getting into a consistent rhythm.'

'When you bowl out a side for under a hundred, it's obviously a sterling performance. But I also thought we looked good at the same time.'

Earlier the tourists gave another powerful display of batting which can only have sent waves of fear to new England captain David Gower.

Overnight, the West Indies were 391 for three, including 111 from Richie Richardson and a 129 not out by fellow Antiguan master Viv Richards.

Yesterday, Richards, 32, added a further 41 in 34 minutes (is he getting slow) before falling to Rodney Ontong at 170.

Steps

Amongst the later highlights was one huge six from Rodney Harper that carried from the cricket ground high onto the concrete steps of Swansea's rugby ground — an estimated 130 yards in the air.

Lloyd called a halt to the batting slaughter to give his pacemen some practice at 489 for six. But the ease with which Glamorgan collapsed suggested Lloyd could even have allowed his batsmen another hour or two of practice, and still won comfortably.
