Solidarity not enough

UNIONS MUST STRIKE NOW WITH MINERS

THE TORY government is using talks between miners' leaders and the Coal Board to maintain the isolation of the strike from the rest of the trade union movement.

No compromise is on offer, because the conditions for one do not exist: Thatcher's Bonapartist dictatorship is driven by the insoluble world economic crisis of capitalism to smash up jobs and pits.

Output of coal must be cut if it cannot be sold at a competitive price during a world slump. Those are the laws of capitalist production which have produced the 13-week long strike.

So while the talks are dragged out — a third session took place in Edinburgh yesterday, and more are planned for next week — the ruling class is pressing ahead with its main objective — the destruction of the National Union of Mineworkers.

Since the strike began the world-wide resistance of the working class has intensified the capitalist crisis, sending the major banks to the edge of a financial precipice.

This only makes the Tories more determined to inflict a defeat on the British working class as a preparation for sackings and wage-cutting on a massive scale.

The NUM is fighting for jobs on behalf of the whole working class against the might of the capitalist state machine. Yet while its very existence is threatened, it fights alone.

It is the responsibility of both the NUM leaders and the leaders of unions which have pledged support to begin from the fact that what is posed is the bringing down of the Tory government by the whole working class.

The illusion that talks can produce anything must be dispelled and the isolation of the miners' strike ended.

After three months of unremitting assault on the NUM, for leaders of the transport, rail and seamen's unions to restrict support to further expressions of solidarity in terms of blacking of coal, coke and oil is inadequate.

The Transport and General Workers' Union executive's decision to give the 'strongest advice' to members leaves them to implement the action on an individual basis. Indications that the union will back them if they are sacked do not overcome this problem.

Moss Evans, the general secretary of the T&GWU, says the union cannot instruct members to black the movement of fuel.

Yet dockers' shop stewards have voted for a strike in support of the miners. Let Evans endorse their decision.

Solidarity expressions, like the talks, effectively preserve the isolation of the miners' strike.

Sectionalism prevails, and the miners' fight is separated from the interests of the unions which support it. While there is a lot of pontificating about the consequences of a defeat for the NUM, union leaders are doing little to avoid this happening.

The strategy of the Tories is absolutely clear. Letters from the Cabinet to British Rail chiefs to settle with the railwaymen at all costs show Thatcher's determination to keep the miners' struggle isolated.

And, it must be said, the strategy is working so far. Sectional opportunism has, for the moment, kept the railmen apart from miners. Postal workers' leaders too put their own interests above those of the working class

GMBATU TO RECRUIT UNEMPLOYED WORKERS

UNEMPLOYED workers are to be recruited into Britain's third-largest union, the GMBATU general workers' union.

The union will be the first to open its doors to unemployed workers following a decision by delegates at the union's annual conference in Torquay yesterday.

Delegates overturned

the executive in supporting the motion from Southampton, and afterwards general secretary David Basnett refused to comment.

Instructed

The motion instructed the executive to produce new rules and amend all relevant rules so the unemployed could be recruited into the union and participate fully in union activities.

Although other unions maintain in membership those who have become unemployed since joining the union, the new decision will make the GMBATU the first union to recruit among the unemployed.

John Truscott, a Gas

Board service engineer and Southampton city councillor, who moved the resolution, said afterwards he was delighted.

'In all honesty I didn't expect to win. I had a fight in my region before it came to the national conference.

'I shall be keeping an eye on what happens at our executive. They have the power now to amend the rules. Once we have given them instruction from here, they can do what they want.

Involved

'Bringing the unemployed into the union will give them the opportunity to stop the isolation, become involved and interested in what is going on. When you stop working you lose the comradeship.'

Delegates also heard that the union would contribute £1,000 a day to pay for food vouchers for miners and their families.

Basnett reported that the union had already paid out £50,000 in strike pay to GMBATU members employed by the Coal Board who are on official strike alongside the miners.

Dockers stay out

STRIKING dockers at the port of Liverpool yesterday voted to reject a recommendation to return to work while a dispute over manning levels went to arbitration.

The 1,150 men will meet again on Monday to discuss the dispute, which has affected the unloading of eight ships.

Over the weekend, union officials from the Transport and General Workers Union will seek further talks with the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company.

The dispute started over the manning levels needed for the unloading of the Agnete Diana, which was carrying Cyprus potatoes.

More miners' talks next week

SECRET talks between the miners' union and the Coal Board were held near Edinburgh yesterday. Both sides agreed to meet again next week.

Unlike last week's secret talks, the NCB was represented by chairman Ian MacGregor.

MacGregor claimed after the talks that there was 'a degree of realism' in the discussions, but added that relations with the union had not changed.

Mick McGahey, NUM vice-president, said: 'We are approaching the problems, although we have not yet resolved them.'

'I hope the next set of meetings next week will enable us to tackle the nitty-gritty of the problems.'

General secretary Peter Heathfield described the talks as 'constructive', adding:

'It was the second of what I imagine to be a whole series of meetings that we will require to end our members' problems and secure the future.'

There is speculation that the next talks will take place before Thursday's executive meeting of the NUM.

British seamen serving on oil tankers were ordered last night to refuse to connect discharge pipes to power stations.

If officers refuse to give assurances that they will not carry out union work, the ship will be blacked, seamen's general secretary Jim Slater said.

Support

Meanwhile, delegates at the ASLEF train drivers' union conference in London yesterday gave unanimous support to the transport unions' blockade of oil supplies to power stations.

Lancashire NUM officials agreed in court yesterday to abide by an order banning them from suspending blacklegs.

But local NUM president Sid Vincent said after the hearing that he wanted next week's national executive meeting of the NUM to declare the Lancashire area officially on strike.

This would then give the Lancashire NUM the power to suspend blacklegs officially, he believed.

Scaled

The three Welsh miners who scaled the winding gear at the Midlands colliery of Littleton succeeded in affecting production at the pit yesterday.

And at Houghton Main, the two scab winders who had a protection squad of several hundred police to get them into work, decided not to go into work yesterday. They claimed they did not want to see any more injuries on their behalf.

In Edlington, near Doncaster, nine policemen have been barred from the local miners' welfare following allegations that they have been spying on striking miners.

NUM branch secretary for the local Yorkshire Main colliery, Ian Ferguson, said: 'Feelings are running very high. There is a great deal of bitterness.'

'The action has been taken after complaints from pickets who have seen some of the local officers outside the Orgreave coking plant knocking our lads about.'

Convoy

A convoy of six lorries and 30 tons of food for striking miners left the centre of Glasgow yesterday.

The £12,000 convoy was organised by print workers from SOGAT '82 and members of the T&GWU transport union. The unions estimate the convoy will provide 45,000 three-course meals.

'Too hasty' power pay deal

POWER workers' leaders will today question the haste over their pay settlement following the exposure of Tory interference in the railmen's pay deal.

Shop stewards representing 77,000 manual workers in power stations throughout the country and some area boards meet in Doncaster, South Yorkshire.

In April their negotiators accepted a 5.1-per-cent deal without first putting it to the membership, said Mike Ellis, secretary of the National Joint Industrial Council. 'Our members are normally very moderate people, but there is widespread shop floor displeasure over the haste with which the pay offer was accepted,' he said.

'We feel there has been a sell-out and there is strong suspicion that — like the railwaymen's pay, the government intervened to avoid the powermen taking industrial action alongside the miners.'

Fiddlers Ferry power station is now silent following local management's attempts to cut jobs in the coal handling plant without going through local procedures, after workers took action in support of the miners.

The 25 coal-handlers are now on official strike.

Sick woman was handcuffed to chair

A JURY yesterday returned an open verdict on the death of a sick woman who was handcuffed to a chair by police and taken to prison on the floor of a van.

The verdict, by a nine-to-two majority, came after the jury had retired for four hours to discuss the death of Mrs Wilma Lucas, 42, a chronic alcoholic of Addlestone, Surrey.

Lucas died from a subdural haemorrhage on February 13 at the Royal Free hospital, Hampstead.

The jury made a number of recommendations. They said:

- Handcuffs should not be used on sick prisoners;
- No prisoners should be transported sitting or lying on the floor of a police van; ● Surrey police should find alternative accommodation for prisoners in a similar medical state to Lucas;

● Full written medical statements should be kept, if the prisoners have been seen by a doctor;

● The Surrey Area Health Authority should examine whether there are adequate provisions for the care and rehabilitation of alcoholics.

The jury also said that existing regulations were not carried out in two respects.

A medical opinion was not sought to certify that Lucas was fit to travel immediately and a police-woman did not accompany her on all occasions.

WEATHER

ALL districts will be dry with sunny periods after the clearance of any mist or fog patches. It will be warm in most places but cooler on some eastern coasts.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday: Dry with sunny periods except for the far north of Scotland where it will be more cloudy with drizzle at times. Mostly warm but cooler near some coasts.

June Fund — Keep steady pace throughout month

DON'T let us have a last-minute struggle to collect our Fund this month. Let's see your donations arriving now so that we maintain a steady pace throughout June.

The total so far stands at £71.77 which means the campaign has hardly begun. Let's change the situation this weekend by sending your amounts in immediately.

The News Line is vital in the struggle between the miners and the government. It stands alone in speaking out and calling for the other trade unions to take strike action alongside the miners.

The danger today is the weakness of allowing one section of trade unionists to take on the full force of the state attacks by themselves. The working class must be mobilised and the TUC be made to call a General Strike in this emergency situation.

as a whole and settled a pay dispute this week.

Yet every section of workers faces enormous battles over pay, jobs and democratic rights in the coming weeks. Each one will pose immediately the bringing down of the Tory government and, therefore, the organisation of the entire working class in a General Strike against Thatcher.

The Tories have made the strike an issue of class war. That is why they have spent more than £2,250 million fighting the miners — twice the amount spent on the imperialist war against Argentina.

Sacrifices

Miners have made tremendous sacrifices during the struggle. Thousands have been arrested and families reduced to living on cabbage soup.

Strikers have battled against uneven odds with the national riot police on picket lines. This class heroism must not go unanswered by the rest of the trade union movement.

The Tories are prepared to allow the miners to stay out on strike until Christmas — so long as they are on their own. To allow this to happen would be to play into Thatcher's hands.

United we stand, divided we fall was one of the main slogans which served in the building of the trade unions in Britain. This is the time to invoke this historical fighting tradition.

We say to those unions who have limited their support: you will be next in line for the full savage treatment. You will face destruction, suffering the fate of the trade unions at Cheltenham GCHQ abolished by decree.

Union leaders who support the miners should stop all meaningless talk of 'solidarity' and instead act by calling their members out on strike alongside the miners against the Tories.

Only the organisation of the General Strike along these lines can restore the unity of the working class and defeat Thatcher's strategy of using the sectional opportunism of the movement to isolate and break the miners' union.

The building up of an All Trades Unions Alliance for strike action alongside the miners must begin immediately with the transport unions who met in London on Thursday night.

Discredited

This will provide the basis for winning the fight for the General Strike inside the TUC itself, where general secretary Len Murray is discredited and former supporters like David Basnett of the GMBATU now forced into opposition to the Tories.

Come to the All Trades Unions Alliance Conference in Sheffield on June 30 (details page one) to discuss how to unite the working class in strike action against Thatcher.

KEEP ON TAKING THE MEDICINE

Thatcher's message to summit

THE London economic summit is no place for the pessimist. As the world banking system teeters on the brink of collapse and starvation haunts the peoples of the debtor countries, the word from Lancaster House is that there is much to be thankful for.

That was certainly Prime Minister Thatcher's message when she opened the formal sessions of the summit yesterday morning. Her line was that the capitalist powers are following the right strategy and should keep it up.

Reduction of inflation, restraining of public spending and borrowing and the maintenance of growth was the best basis for 'the economic recovery that we know will be maintained'.

'We shall want at this meeting to concentrate on how to sustain the recovery over the coming years and how to tackle the problems which remain,' she told the other six heads of government.

Outside police and miners are battling every day, the dole queues get longer by the month, the Iran-Iraq war threatens to engulf the whole region and the danger of nuclear war is ever present.

The business of the summit has nothing to do with resolving the economic problems of world capitalism: all the participants make a virtue out of capitalism's inability to do away with unemployment, poverty and war.

Concerned

As far as the leaders of world capitalism are concerned anyone who suggests that things could be improved is guilty of an insidious attack on the status quo. And with Ronald Reagan, the Big Cheese, due to face the US electorate in November, nobody at Lancaster House is rocking the boat.

They all put their names to the rapid clichés of the Declaration of Democratic Values handed out to sceptical journalists at the Press Centre in the Connaught Rooms two miles from Lancaster House.

Sir Geoffrey Howe claimed that the declaration, the first of its kind since the summits began ten years ago, was intended to mark the anniversary of D-Day. The summit participants had been on opposite sides during the war, he said.

Few of his listeners were convinced. Thatcher's devotion to 'democratic values' is epitomised by her lies about non-involvement in the miners' strike and her decision to abolish elections to the Greater London Council and the metropolitan authorities.

The prevailing opinion was that the whole document had been dreamed up by the President's election campaign managers to try and drum up extra votes.

The 3,000-odd media people at the summit are becoming accustomed to the mushroom treatment, being kept in the dark and covered with manure. As one Fleet Street veteran put it over a free pint of real ale (choice of four brands, sponsored by Watney Mann):

'This conference is the ultimate dream of every government press officer. Journalists can't get anywhere near the meeting, so you can shower them with meaningless pieces of paper and they have to accept whatever they're told.'

To sweeten the pill, the authorities have persuaded food manufacturers to lay on free meals at the Connaught Rooms throughout the three days of the summit.

Like the leaders themselves the summit press corps are expected to play their part in the Reagan re-election circus, not step out of line at a time of crisis.

Scots teachers in cheap labour battle

A RESOLUTION opposing collaboration with government cheap labour Youth Training Schemes was defeated at the annual meeting of Scotland's largest teaching union yesterday.

The Educational Institute of Scotland decided at its Rothesay meeting to continue its policy of 'monitoring and improving' the schemes. But a growing section of its members — including many in the further education section who are directly affected — expressed disquiet about the schemes.

An EIS education committee minute on the 'monitoring and improving' of schemes over the last year was approved by 206 votes to 148.

Speaking against the retention of existing policy, Norman Bissell from Lanarkshire described the YTS as a 'crime perpetrated on young people, an attempt by the government to hide the real scale of youth unemployment and to destroy the conditions which the trade unions have won for young people.'

Pat Carlos, Aberdeen, pointed out that for the Tories, the enormous advantage of a state-controlled cheap labour scheme had been grasped, and the machinery for its expansion had swung into action.

Dangled

With the co-operation of elements in the TUC, the corporatist MSC had deepened its involvement in the training business, 'dangled the carrot of funding in front of the hard-pressed education sector, and sold the scheme to the EIS.' They had done this 'while the crisis of Britain's creaking economy was making its appearance'.

Joe Eyre, from Glasgow area further education sector, said: 'There is an alternative to the schemes, which the motion spells out.

'The trade union movement must break from its collaboration with the government. It must begin a national campaign to sponsor training activities for youth, and local authorities must be mobilised to provide a comprehensive system of education and training based on schools and colleges.'

Many speakers voiced their objections to the YTS. Eddie Rooney from Lanarkshire warned that 'if we don't take a stand against it, we'll have it for ever and a day, because Thatcher wants it that way'.

James Thompson for the EIS executive, supporting retention of existing policy, claimed that despite 'misgivings' about the schemes, they had to go along with TUC policy. He claimed that teachers jobs would be at risk if they stopped collaborating with the MSC.

Barking workers lobby Crothall's HQ

BARKING hospital women were joined by about 100 other hospital workers and Kent miners in a lobby of the central London headquarters of private contractors Crothalls yesterday.

The 90 women at the east London hospital have been out on strike since March against cuts in wages and hours of up to 60 per cent by Crothalls, their employers.

The protestors put three bags of rubbish on the steps of the building in Clifton Street, to signify the deterioration in standards in the hospital they say there has been since the strike began.

One of the health hazards concerning the striking cleaners is the danger of rubbish piling up at the back of the hospital and not being separated into red bags if it is insanitary.

As Peter Pritchard, chairman of the Pritchard's Organisation of which Crothalls is a subsidiary, walked by, he was heckled by the protestors.

Nechells' future in the balance

AN application to lodge a judicial review over the planned closure of the Nechells primary school in Birmingham has been accepted by a High Court judge.

The board of governors at the school asked for the review, supported and financed by the newly-elected Labour council.

The city solicitor expressed optimism, based on a premise that the previous Tory council could have broken the law because the chairman of the education committee changed the closure date without the agreement of the full education committee.

Parents are disturbed that the future of the school seems to be hanging on such a technicality.

They surprised that more important breaches of faith, like the failure of the city council to consult the board of governors about the closure and the speed with which the decision was made, have no legal bearing whatsoever.

The Parents Action Committee is now waiting to see how Tory Education Secretary Sir Keith Joseph will react to the news of the judicial review.

He can withdraw the closure decision he made, contest the review or let the judicial review run its course unopposed.

If he doesn't contest it, he cannot appeal if any verdict goes against him.

The board of governors have the right to appeal to the Court of Appeal and the House of Lords if the judicial review goes against them.

If the legal proceedings are still underway when the school is due to close on August 31, they can apply for a court injunction to keep the school open until the legal proceedings are exhausted.

The parents say the single most important task if the decision goes in their favour is to extract a commitment from the education committee to employ another teacher and enable the school to grow.

They hope to persuade the headmaster to run an open day in July for parents of prospective pupils and to persuade new parents to register their children at the school before the end of term.

Doomed Sixty Minutes blacked out

THE BBC's 'Sixty Minutes' TV show was blacked out last night when journalists staged industrial action in protest at the axing of the programme.

A National Union of Journalists spokesman said there was a 'spontaneous display of anger' among the news team when they learned that the Corporation was scrapping the programme in August.

They began a mandatory meeting of their union branch lasting until midnight which made screening impossible.

The early evening news bulletin went out but was then followed by two repeats — of a 'Great Sporting Moments' programme and an episode of 'Are You Being Served?'

The programme is to be replaced with an extended news/current affairs show.

The new programme, scheduled to begin in August, would be edited by Ron Neil. His present job with Breakfast TV would be taken by David Lloyd, now editor of 'Sixty Minutes'.

AMRITSAR DEATH TOLL STILL RISING

More bodies found in Golden Temple

NEW DELHI — The death toll from the storming of Punjab's Golden Temple of Amritsar and the intense fighting that has followed has risen to more than 500.

Police, doctors and troops sifting through the debris and rubble in the sprawling temple grounds yesterday found at least 200 more bodies and about 100 wounded.

BY A FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT

The Indira Gandhi government has said that 250 Sikhs and 48 troops were killed and about 150 wounded during the storming.

Sikhs in Kashmir, the Himalayan resort town of Simla and the capital, New Delhi, have revolted.

Thousands of Sikhs gathered in Amritsar and other cities in the Punjab defying teargas canisters to hurl stones at the occupying troops.

Sikhs vowed vengeance for the killing of the Dal Khalsa leader, Jarnail Singh Bhindranwale, on Wednesday and swore to bring down the Gandhi regime.

The government continues to deny the rise in the death toll. A spokesman said: 'The death toll has not gone up as far as I know but the latest figures are not available.'

Witnesses said several buildings within the shrine perimeter had been badly damaged.

Some were smouldering and a small market next to the temple was burning late on Thursday.

The building where Bhindranwale was shot dead had been virtually destroyed in the last and most intense assault by the troops, who bombarded the precincts with withering firepower.

Bhindranwale's bullet-ridden body was found in the basement of the Akal Takht, seat of Sikhism's highest religious order.

The government spokesman admitted the Akal Takht was damaged but repeated official assurances that the most sacred part of the complex, the small, gold-leaf domed shrine in the middle of a moat, had not been hit.

He said also that the tanks that had rolled in had avoided firing their cannon to avoid damaging the shrine.

Witnesses said, however, the tracked vehicles had damaged the marble and tile floors of the shrine precincts as they moved in under intense fire from Sikhs manning sandbagged positions.

The storming of the temple was launched on Tuesday to flush out Bhindranwale and his followers.

Violence

At least 20 people have been killed elsewhere in India in violence sparked by the storming.

There were violent clashes in Bombay, New Delhi and other cities, police admitted.

The censorship laws and press bans are being enforced with unprecedented severity in the country's publications and Punjab remains sealed off from its neighbours.

Air, road, rail, telephone and telex links have been cut.

President Zail Singh, himself a Punjabi, cancelled all public engagements during the storming but on Thursday attended a reception for leading Moslem leaders hosted by Mrs Gandhi.

Members of the Sikh community protesting in Birmingham yesterday

Sikh protest in Birmingham

FIVE hundred members of the Sikh community in Birmingham demonstrated yesterday outside the headquarters of the Indian High Commission and the National Bank of India in New Street.

The demonstration followed a night in which petrol bombs were thrown at the Punjab National Bank and the Hindustan Travel Service offices in Handsworth.

The meeting, coinciding with demonstrations and rallies all over Britain, was addressed by the general secretary of the Supreme Council of UK Sikhs, Gurder Singh Chohan and Mr Bahrdwaja, a civil engineer in India, himself a Hindu who denounced the atrocities of the Gandhi government against the Sikhs and other national minorities.

Also present were representatives of the Kashmiri Liberation Front. News Line spoke to several of the youth who were present, all members of the Sikh Youth Movement.

'What the Sikhs are doing is right. We are a peaceful people until provoked but once provoked we shall not stop until we get our rights.'

'Sikhs have been campaigning for the past two years for religious and political rights. Our religion and culture are different but we're not recognised as a nation. Our passports are in Hindi.'

'We are forced to learn Hindi in schools as the first language. We are even called long-haired Hindi.'

All the youth were supporters of the martyred Sikh leader Bhindranwale. 'Bhindranwale was not a terrorist or an extremist,' said Herpal Singh. 'He was a realist who knew what the people wanted. He died for us.'

'Longowal (leader of the right-wing Akali Dal Party) is a traitor. He surrendered. Now he is wanted by the whole nation. We are freedom fighters, not extremists.'

'We are not very religious, but we believe that our rights have been violated. How can a so-called democratic government justify storming a holy shrine? It's the same as if some government were to storm the Vatican.'

All the youth said they would be going to London for Sunday's mass demonstration and then back to the Punjab to fight.

'We will give our lives for our rights. It's the youth who will lead this fight.'

Ike wanted to bomb China

WASHINGTON — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower endorsed the use of atomic bombs against China if Korean truce talks failed, papers released in the capital have revealed.

He threatened to use the atomic bomb on China again, in 1954, to force the Chinese government to secure Viet Minh agreement to partition Vietnam and against the Soviet Union in 1959 over the occupation of Berlin.

Eisenhower believed Soviet intervention and another world war could be prevented with swift, decisive strikes against China, minutes of a May 20, 1953, National Security Council meeting showed.

'The president observed that the quicker the operation was mounted, the less the danger of Soviet intervention,' the minutes said.

Nuclear attacks against China were recommended by the military joint chiefs of staff as part of a general widening of air and naval operations to break the military stalemate in Korea if truce talks then under way failed.

The military chiefs estimated the build-up for a nuclear and non-nuclear offensive would take nine to 12 months.

Next day, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles relayed a warning to China, through Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, of stepped-up US military action.

The truce agreement was signed two months later, on July 27.

North Korean delegates broke the deadlocked truce talks under these barbarous threats and agreed to voluntary rather than forced repatriation of prisoners.

Months after the truce, on January 8, 1954, Eisenhower and his National Security Council adopted a general policy of rapid retaliation, possibly with nuclear weapons, against a so-called likelihood of resumption of hostilities by China.

The military chiefs estimated 22 hours would be needed at that time to assemble atomic bombs

SWAPO rejects
Botha proposals

LUANDA — The leadership of SWAPO, the South West African People's Organisation, has denounced the Namibian proposals made by P.W. Botha, the South African premier.

Botha said his racist regime will withdraw from Namibia within two months if one or more of the Western Five Contact Group will take over the territory's administration and defence.

Confirmed

A SWAPO statement said: 'This has confirmed SWAPO's serious misgiving that though obviously feeling the pinch of the financial and military burden of its repressive occupation of Namibia, South Africa has not yet made the fundamental political decision to allow the Namibian people to exercise their inalienable right to self-determination and national independence.

'The 'offer' by Botha to hand over Namibia to one or more of the five Western countries just goes to show how archaic and crude is Pretoria's view of Namibia and its people.

'That Botha is not ashamed to propose that Namibia should remain a colony under yet another colonial power or a set of them reveals an amazing lack of realism on the part of Pretoria.

'The suggestion is quite obviously out of step with the demand of the day that Namibia must become an independent and sovereign state now. This is what the Namibian people are insisting on and dying for. This is also what the international community and the entire progressive section of mankind are unceasingly demanding from South Africa. There is no escape route for Botha from this demand. South Africa must face up to this demand and allow the Namibian people to proceed to independence without any further delay.'

BUENOS AIRES — Former Peronist President Maria Estela Peron and other Argentine opposition leaders have signed a wide-ranging pact of national union with President Raul Alfonsin's government.

The 15-point document follows two weeks of talks between Alfonsin, who assumed power last December after eight years of military rule, and opposition political leaders.

Refused

Peron returned from exile in Spain for the talks, former president Arturo Frondizi and 15 other leaders also signed the pact, but several small parties refused to join in.

A few last-minute changes were inserted into the text, including one that called on the government to renegotiate the nation's foreign debt 'without prejudicing the interests of the country or national dignity'.

Argentina is expected to sign an agreement with the International Monetary Fund allowing it to open negotiations on rescheduling its $43.6 billion foreign debt.

The document also urges the government to intensify joint efforts with other Latin American nations to ease the region's $360 billion foreign debt.

The pact contains a statement of support for Pope John Paul in his mediation of the century-old Beagle Channel border dispute with Chile.

It calls for negotiations with the Thatcher government over the Malvinas, including the question of sovereignty.

● LIMA — Leaders of Peru's civil servants voted on Thursday night to continue a three-day-long strike despite the arrest of about 30 militants.

Marches

They were detained when riot police dissolved two marches by government workers, whose stoppage has closed most schools and municipal offices as well as several ministries and hospitals.

About 20 were later released.

Although workers at Peru's Health Ministry and law courts returned to their desks yesterday. Labour leaders said more than 80 per cent of the country's 600,000 civil servants were still on strike.

Most public schools and municipal offices remained closed on the fourth day, as well as several government ministries.

President Fernando Belaunde denounced the strike as 'a crime' while the country was in economic difficulty and accused civil servants of taking illegal holiday time.

The strikers are seeking a 150 per cent pay rise to bring average monthly earnings to the equivalent of £120 and restore their buying power, now barely a third of its 1978 level.

US/Soviet support for Iraq

WASHINGTON — US Secretary of State George Shultz said yesterday that US imperialism and the Soviet Union shared similar concerns over the Iran-Iraq war and that the war was one issue that had not become 'part of east-west conflict'.

'We have some differences of interest, but basically both we and the Soviets want to see international waters remain open,' he said in an NBC Television broadcast by satellite from London.

Shultz said the US would continue to help its allies in the wider Gulf region. 'We have supported our friends in the area and intend to continue doing so,' he said.

Meanwhile in Tel Aviv the Israeli regime also declared moves to support Iraq. It proposed to Iraq that because of the Gulf war it should ship its oil through a disused pipeline from Baghdad to the Israeli Mediterranean port of Haifa.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said in an interview with the daily 'Maariv' that he realised Israel's offer would not be accepted just now despite Iraq's troubles with Iran but still he wanted to give the Iraqis something to think about.

Agreed

'Our offer should give the Arab world some idea of the possibilities that would be available to them if and when they agreed to achieve peace with Israel.'

Shamir said the Israeli proposal was made through a third party, presumably the United States.

Some ships carrying Iraqi oil have come under attack from Iranian warplanes and news reports have said the Iraqis were seeking an American loan to build a pipeline to the Jordanian port of Akaba.

The old Baghdad-Haifa pipeline, built during the British mandate in Palestine, has not been used since Israel was established in 1948.

Iraq is buying more than 5,000 cluster bombs from the Chilean dictatorship for use against Iranian troops in the Gulf war.

In a report from Santiago, NBC news said a Chilean arms manufacturer was using American-made electronic parts in the 500-pound (225kg) bombs, which split into 240 smaller bombs in the air. The pieces explode on the ground and scatter shrapnel over a large area with a devastating effect on massed troops.

NBC said it had learned that Iraq had ordered more than 5,000 of the bombs at a cost of $35 million and had picked up the first shipment from Chile 10 weeks ago.

Selling

According to NBC, US firms were selling electronic equipment in Chile but were claiming to be unaware that the parts were being used for bombs.

● THE International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), in a strongly-worded statement from its headquarters in Geneva, said the Iraqi air attack on Banah town in Iran three days ago was 'murderous'.

W. German strike talks to continue

STUTTGART — The West German metalworkers union IG Metall and employers yesterday ended a fourth day of talks with no sign of compromise in their dispute over shorter working hours.

They agreed to meet again next week.

The two sides, seeking to end a four-week-old strike over the union demand for a 35-hour week, had four hours of talks before deciding to resume negotiations next Wednesday.

Employers' leader Hans Peter Stihl said there was no sign of agreement and that he saw the conflict continuing until the week after next.

Union negotiator Ernst Eisenmann said employers had shown no readiness to compromise but were only prepared to discuss their own proposals.

Eisenmann said the union had no immediate plans for further strikes, currently restricted to the Stuttgart and Frankfurt areas, but would decide on future tactics.

The strikes and associated lock-outs and lay-offs have affected up to 400,000 workers across West Germany, with the car industry almost at a standstill.

CLASH OVER CONTROL OF 'MORNING STAR'

THE BIGGEST internal clash in the history of British Stalinism will take place in London tomorrow at the final session of the 39th annual general meeting of the People's Press Printing Society, the co-operative which owns the 'Morning Star'.

The Wembley Conference Centre has been booked for the contest between the Communist Party leadership and the so-called 'hardline' group led by Tony Chater who have hi-jacked the Stalinist daily.

Votes in the crucial elections for the incoming management committee will be counted at the 'Morning Star' office on Monday.

If the party's five nominees win and the Chater group is routed, it will almost certainly mean that the paper's 'survival plan' to invest in a new £650,000 printing press to take on commercial printing will be scuttled.

Grave doubts about the feasibility of the 'survival plan' were expressed at the Bristol meeting of the PPPS on Thursday night.

Entanglements

Bert Pearce, the former Welsh district secretary of the Communist Party, accused the PPPS management committee of offering shareholders 'a false prospectus — politically and financially'.

Figures given in the annual report 'appear to be nonsensical', he said, and he raised the question of whether the paper was drifting into unknown 'financial entanglements'.

He accused 'Morning Star' editor Tony Chater, his assistant David Whitfield and the management committee of responsibility for breaking the relationship between the paper and the party.

If the management committee won the elections, it would continue its policy of disagreement and confrontation with the Communist Party while the 'Morning Star' would be 'led to sectarianism and failure. Vote for a change in this course to destruction,' he said.

Neville Carey, a former district secretary in the West of England, accused Chater of trying to separate the paper from the party. 'It is a betrayal of the thousands of communists who have sacrificed for it over the years,' he said.

Questioned

Referring to the economics of the PPPS 'survival plan', Carey told the 260 shareholders present: 'The plan doesn't bear scrutiny.'

Questioning the plan to start commercial printing, Carey asked: 'Will these trade unions only go ahead (with printing contracts) if the "Star" is cut off from the Communist Party?'

PPPS secretary Mary Rosser was closely questioned about the printing contracts with trade unions, revealing for the first time that only four members of the management committee knew which unions had signed Letters of Intent to print their journals on the new press.

She drew attention to the auditor's qualification in the annual accounts which states: 'We are unable to form an opinion as to whether the current account balance amounting to £155,602, due from the Morning Star Co-operative Society Ltd., is fully recoverable.'

'No provision has been made in these financial statements in the event of the above society being unable to repay its liability.'

Rosser told shareholders: 'Legally we cannot continue to trade in this kind of deficit. It is a legal position. We have been warning about this since the autumn of 1982.'

Throughout the course of the two-and-a-half hour meeting Rosser and Chater were repeatedly heckled by shareholders and there was a constant barrage of calls for Chater to resign.

Description

The meeting heard that the Welsh NUM has lodged a formal protest with the PPPS management committee over the decision not to hold a sectional annual general meeting in Wales this year.

Arfon Evans, of the South Wales NUM executive, said he wanted 'to express in the strongest possible terms the denial of the right to have a shareholders' meeting in Wales.'

George Bolton — Called a 'disrupter'

He also expressed 'outrage' at the description of Communist Party members as 'disrupters' in last Monday's 'Morning Star' report of the abandoned Scottish AGM.

He said that those described as 'disrupters' included Mick McGahey, president of the Scottish NUM, and George Bolton, the Scottish NUM vice president and chairman of the Communist Party.

Yesterday's 'Morning Star' carried a further open attack on the party leadership. A letter from

Barry Williams, chairman at the Manchester AGM, tries to maintain order while 'Morning Star' editor Tony Chater hurriedly confers with PPPS secretary Mary Rosser

R. Fairns of Renfrew said: 'I am sure that I am writing on behalf of many people who attended the Glasgow sectional AGM of the PPPS on Sunday, June 3, when I say that the behaviour of a part of those attending was disgusting.'

'When they are leading members of the Communist Party, it is nothing short of shocking. The shouting, swearing and threatening behaviour was much more reminiscent of a football match, more so when you consider the violence afterwards.' ('Morning Star', June 8, 1984)

The paper also published a letter from the father of Ian Park, the PPPS steward, who was allegedly assaulted at the end of the meeting. Mr Eric Park wrote saying:

'Ian has a depressed fracture of the cheekbone and a further examination later this week should determine the degree of surgery required.'

'I wish to assure his friends and comrades that, despite the fractured face, the socialist spirit is solid. Although temporarily stopped in a layby, he will soon pull out and continue the march along the British Road to Socialism — inspired, as always, by the "Morning Star".'

Rejected

At the Bristol meeting, executive committee member Dave Richards said the Welsh committee of the Communist Party absolutely rejected the attempts by the PPPS management committee to break its links with the Communist Party.

'We feel even more betrayed when this takes place in the midst of the fight with the Tory government,' he said.

Referring to decision not to hold a sectional AGM in Wales, Richards said: 'It's an affront to the Welsh working class. We demand it never happens again.'

Prevented

Veteran CP miner, Cliff True, said the decision to hold the meeting in Bristol had prevented hundreds of shareholders from coming because of the distance and the evening venue.

'There's no justifiable reason for not coming to Wales,' True said. 'It's a country.'

'Stop the rot that's taking place in the management committee or the "Morning Star" will go the same way as the "Daily Herald".'

Another Welsh speaker from the floor of the meeting said to loud cheers: 'How are you able to deny the working-class movement of Wales a sectional meeting when you can go night after night all over the country to supporters' meetings?'

In reply, Rosser said she 'very much regretted' there was not a Cardiff meeting this year but it was done on the basis of which area had the lowest turnout at previous AGMs.

When heckled by shareholders she angrily snapped: 'I am just demanding the right to be with my family one night a week.'

During his reply Chater said: 'There is no intention whatsoever to separate from the Communist Party or its policies. None whatsoever.'

He repeated his statement made at other AGMs that the talk of a break with the Communist Party was 'the biggest non-issue of the 1980s'.

He said the root cause of the differences was the attempt by the Communist Party executive to impose its decisions on the management committee.

His voice was drowned at one point by shareholders shouting, 'Resign'. 'He is abusing his right of reply', 'Sit down', 'Tell the truth', 'Let him reply to the discussion and not throw mud at the leadership of the party'.

Removal

Towards the end of the meeting Martin Jacques, editor of the monthly 'Marxism Today', made a 'strong protest' on behalf of the party's executive committee over the PPPS decision to rule the EC resolution out of order.

The executive had called for shareholders to vote for the removal of Chater and Whitfield and their replacement by diplomatic correspondent Chris Myant and editorial assistant Frank Chalmers.

'The management committee is depriving us of the right to discuss,' Jacques said. 'This is treating the rights of shareholders with complete contempt.'

'We formally object to the conduct of the PPPS management committee in undemocratically depriving shareholders of their rights.'

Irrespective of the Workers Revolutionary Party's fundamental and irreconcilable political differences with Stalinism, we restate our principled view that the Communist Party is entitled to maintain control of its own daily paper.

It is the property of the Communist Party which built it and not the clique of Chater, Whitfield and Mick Costello.

Unite Sikhs, Hindus and Moslems against the Gandhi regime

Statement by the Workers Revolutionary Party Political Committee

THE Workers Revolutionary Party (WRP) condemns the storming of Punjab's Golden Temple of Amritsar on the orders of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. It is a barbarous attack on the Punjabi people, and an affront to the Sikh religion.

It is an expression of the extent to which the Gandhi regime has adopted the ideology of Hindu chauvinism and is openly exciting communal feeling against national and religious minorities in order to divert attention from its own political bankruptcy.

Gandhi wants to make an example of the Sikhs in order to teach a lesson to all those other areas of India where discontent with her rule is seething, and at the same time to mobilise a section of the Hindu masses on the most reactionary course of national chauvinism.

The constitutional guarantees of the status of India's minority religions have been torn up and the government no longer even bothers with the rhetoric of a secular state.

Massacre

The symbolism of Mrs Gandhi's action in Amritsar, where the historic massacre of demonstrators at the Jallianwalla Bagh took place at the hands of the British army in 1919, will not be lost on anyone in India.

Two years ago, in August 1982, the main Sikh political party, the Akali Dal, representing the interests of the Sikh bourgeoisie, began a campaign for religious and political rights.

Specifically it demanded the restoration of the city of Chandigarh, the former Sikh capital which is now used as federal-administrative territory for both Punjab and Haryana states.

The Akali Dal also called for constitutional changes to accord full recognition to Sikhism as a religion in its own right. Under the 1947 constitution, Sikhism is classified as a branch of Hinduism.

The government's failure to meet these fully justified demands, and the inability of the bourgeois Akali Dal to resolve the problems of the Sikhs, encouraged the growth of reactionary separatist tendencies within the Sikh community calling for the formation of a theocratic state of Khalistan (State of the Pure).

Comprised

This is a reactionary demand because the Sikhs are not a nation. The Punjab traditionally has comprised Sikhs, Hindus, Moslems and a number of smaller religious sects.

The separatist party, the Dal Khalsa (Party of the Pure Ones) was headed by Jarnail Singh Bhindranwale, who was killed on Wednesday when troops stormed the Golden Temple.

Mrs Gandhi encouraged the growth of the Dal Khalsa in the initial stages of the campaign, and provided its leaders with money in order to disrupt the Akali Dal.

The storming of the Golden Temple follows violent anti-government upheavals in Maharashtra, also under army rule, and the northern states of West Bengal, Uttar Pradesh, Tripura, Jammu and Kashmir, Assam and Nagaland.

The bloody revolt in Punjab, India's breadbasket, is the sharpest expression of the insoluble capitalist crisis of semi-colonial India. Rapid post-war industrialisation financed through immense loans from the International Monetary Fund (IMF) has saddled the Hindu ruling class with insoluble contradictions.

Punjab's revolt shows that the capitalist regime has no answer to national and religious discontent except bloody repression. Every such movement, no matter what the source, immediately gives rise to constitutional crises.

Marxists cannot ignore the revolutionary content of these developments. Under the rule of the Indian bourgeoisie, the acute problems of land-hunger, territorial river waters disputes, poverty, linguistic and national oppression are constantly regenerated.

The Indian working class and peasantry are on the road of socialist revolution and the most immediate and urgent task is the resolution of the crisis of proletarian leadership to smash the capitalist, semi-feudal, bureaucratic and racist Hindu state.

Only the working class under a Trotskyist leadership as part of the International Committee of the Fourth International (ICFI) can unite and lead the peasant and rural masses in this historic task.

The Golden Temple at Amritsar

The Stalinists in the Communist Party of India (CPI), the CPI-M (Maoist) and the other offshoots have betrayed and turned their backs on these movements. The CPI and CPI-M both openly backed the Gandhi regime's bloody military suppression in Amritsar.

They condemned the 'violence' of the alalis (militants), after the government had openly prepared for the bloody suppression of the mass movement in the Punjab, by massing troops in Amritsar and throughout the region.

The Stalinists long ago went over to counter-revolution and the defence of the national state. In India this now means total subservience to Hindu chauvinism.

India's crisis is bound up with the world crisis of capitalism. The international banks are on the brink of an unprecedented crash as Bolivia and Ecuador default and other indebted semi-colonial countries prepare to follow suit.

Some of the largest banks are teetering, such as Continental Illinois, Manufacturers Hanover Trust and Chase Manhattan.

They are gartetting the debtor countries, wringing the last drop of blood and treasure from their peoples and imposing starvation, misery and disease.

IMF orders to impose draconian standards on industrial productivity and cuts on wages and living standards that already are at subsistence level are the source of the fierce opposition from the industrial, rural and semi-proletarian class and peasantry.

India faces a critical food shortage because the curfews, widespread arrests and violence has kept away hundreds of thousands of interstate labourers and aggravated the crisis.

Thousands of acres of farmland are under gherao (siege) by rural workers and peasants enforcing a ban on sales to government authorities in protest against IMF-dictated price restrictions.

Punjab is not an Indian exception but the epitome of the politics of communalism that the Hindu ruling class imposed as part of its settlement with British imperialism behind the backs of the Indian workers and peasants.

The first act of the Hindu ruling class was to agree with British imperialism to arbitrarily partition the Punjab and Bengal with Pakistan in 1947.

Communalism

The Hindu ruling class paid lip service to secularism, but practised communalism. This policy was extended throughout the land to defend against civil insurrection that has never ceased to threaten its parasitic existence.

The old policy of divide and rule practised by British imperialism now finds its firmest adherents in Mrs Gandhi's Congress (I) Party.

Communal divisions are not the cause of the widespread revolts but the result of this reactionary policy that trampled on the national rights of the minorities in Assam, Jammu, Kashmir, Bengal and virtually every other of the 21 states.

Punjabis and Bengalis were among the first to suffer the brutalities of the new oppression.

Partitioned Punjab was carved up again into the provinces of Chandigarh and Haryana under the guise of granting language rights but, in fact, to set off the communities one against the other.

This policy has the full support of world imperialism which still sees bourgeois semi-feudal India as a bulwark against communism.

Poverty

So-called reforms under the Punjab Tenants (Security of Tenure) Act only worsened the semi-feudal misery and chronic poverty of the peasantry and rural workers as the Sikh bourgeoisie and petty bourgeoisies scrambled for scarce privileges.

While opposing the barbaric repression practised by the Congress regime against the Sikh secessionists, the WRP calls on the Punjabi-speaking people to reject religious communalism and bigotry and the blind alley of Khalistan.

We call for the unity of the Hindu, Sikh and Moslem workers and peasants against the Gandhi regime and against bourgeois rule in India.

Smash the Gandhi regime! Build the Indian Section of the International Committee of the Fourth International! Self-determination for the national minorities! Land and language rights! No to Khalistan! Forward to the dictatorship of the proletariat! Forward to a Soviet Socialist States of India! Forward to the World Revolution!

Demo at High Commission

SIKHS and their supporters protested outside the Indian High Commission in London again yesterday after the massacre of Sikhs by the Indian army at Amritsar.

Chanting slogans against the government of Indira Gandhi, which ordered the military assault on the holy temple, were members of the Sharomani Akali Dal UK, and representatives of the Overseas Indian Association.

Bachittar Singh, general secretary of the Supreme Council of Sikhs in the UK, told News Line:

'We have demonstrated every day for a week against the killings and the insult to our holiest temple which followed the invasion of the Indian army on the orders of the Indira Gandhi.'

'She is supposed to be the leader of the non-aligned nations. But she preaches that outside India but kills her own people at home.'

'The sentiments of the Sikh community are now running very high, and the anger is likely to increase.'

'The Sikhs no longer want to live as second-class citizens in India. We should not be treated as second-class citizens because we have fought many wars for India.'

'On Sunday we are having a vast demonstration which we expect to bring together 50,000 from the Sikh community throughout the UK.'

World imperialism drives towards nuclear war

AS THE world economic crisis of capitalism deepens, the dangers of nuclear war draw nearer. There can be no grimmer proof that world capitalism is in its death agony.

The world slump and the dangers of imperialist nuclear destruction emerge out of this death agony.

No amount of pacifist protesting, irrespective of the good intentions of the pacifists, can rid the world of capitalism. Only the working class, guided by conscious revolutionary Marxist leadership, can accomplish this historic task.

This is the essential message for today's anti-war demonstrators who will be out on the streets of London to protest against the meeting of Reagan, Thatcher and the other world capitalist warmongers.

They have been taking part in a 'world economic summit' yet their discussions have centred on organising for the political implications of their grinding debt crisis, the imminent break-up of the world banking system and the drastic fall in world trade. In short, they have been discussing world counter-revolution.

World imperialism seeks to place the burdens of its economic crisis on the backs of the international working class. But everywhere this is being resisted by the working class which is becoming more and more revolutionary.

That is why the struggles of the oppressed peoples everywhere are weakening the reactionary forces of imperialism. In Britain the miners' strike against Thatcher's Bonapartist dictatorship is simultaneously a powerful blow for revolutionary peace because it weakens British imperialism with its policies of slump and nuclear war.

The same is true of the three-week West German engineers' strike which marks the inspiring historical renewal of the German working class as a decisive force in the forthcoming socialist revolution in Western Europe.

These struggles in the major capitalist countries are inseparable from the struggles of the national liberation movements in El Salvador, the Middle East, Africa and Ireland. All are dealing blows to US and world imperialism.

The epic resistance of the Iranian revolution to the relentless attacks of the US and Soviet-backed Iraqi regime shows the determination of the national revolutionary movements and their unyielding hatred of imperialism.

Every single blow struck by the working class in any country in the world which weakens imperialism is a blow for peace.

All those who genuinely oppose imperialist war have a clear political responsibility: it is to take their place in the ranks of those fighting for the world socialist revolution.

In Britain this means joining the Workers Revolutionary Party, the British section of the International Committee of the Fourth International, the nucleus of the world party of socialist revolution.

CALL A GENERAL STR

Scottish gala: show of strength

Miners in

THE Workers Revolutionary Party Scottish district committee greets miners, their wives and families, trade unionists, Labour Party members and others gathering in Edinburgh today for the miners' gala. It will be a powerful demonstration of working class unity in support of the miners' struggle.

It will display Scottish workers' hatred for Tory Bonapartist torship and their destruction of Scottish industry.

Miners and everyone else in Edinburgh knows this is a 10 cent political struggle the 'Daily Mirror' firmed when it exposed Thatcher's interve

Polmaise miners banner on last Thursday's miners demonstration in London

LIKE TO BACK THE MINERS

political battle to defend whole working class to stop railmen joining the miners' strike.

The tide of hatred against the Tories must come up sharply against the 'no politics' line of the Stalinist-dominated Scottish NUM executive, who have decided to try and prevent political parties taking part in today's gala.

The Stalinists say 'no politics' on the one hand, on the other they are spreading illusions that the miners can win the strike by negotiating a deal with MacGregor.

Leading Stalinist Michael McGahey, Scottish NUM president, claims in this month's 'Scottish Miner' that the gala will 'challenge' the government, the NCB and the employers to 'end the de-industrialisation and devastation of our country'.

The Tories and the crisis-ridden capitalist class are going to do no such thing. They are on the road to dictatorship, mass impoverishment of the working class and world nuclear war.

In its turn, the working class can only assure its future in the course of the struggle for power, to smash the capitalist state and establish a socialist planned economy.

In Scotland their uncompromising determination to smash the miners has been spelled out loud and clear. In the last 12 months, one union agreement after another has been trampled on, Cardowan closed, the two-week Polmaise lock out and the seven week Monktonhall strike provoked.

Management provocations forced Frances and Seaford miners to strike three weeks before the nationwide action. They have now been out a total of 17 weeks.

The issue at today's gala is not just the destruction of the Scottish coalfields, but the wiping out of Scottish industry as part of Thatcher's onslaught against the working class and the trade unions.

On the Clyde, Nigel Brookes' Trafalgar House tightens its grip on the privatised Scott-Lithgow yard and the bankruptcy of the French multi-national UIE threatens jobs further up the river.

Ravenscraig is in as much danger as ever.

Scotland's last major vehicle-building factory, British Leyland's Bathgate, is due to be axed. Despite the recent calling off of their occupation, workers there have vowed at a mass meeting this week to continue the fight against closure.

Nowhere is the need for all-out action in support of the miners clearer than in Scotland. Nowhere has the demand for a General Strike against Thatcher been the subject of more serious discussion.

Desperate

Its fiercest opponents have been the Stalinists and right-wing trade union bureaucrats, who are desperate to limit the miners' strike to a sectional struggle and fear the revolutionary implications of a General Strike.

In April they halted a march by Fife miners who were demanding a General Strike arguing that such a call would 'place the miners' fate in the hands of the TUC right wing' and 'allow them to do "an NGA" on the miners'.

But the falseness and political cowardice of these arguments has been exposed by events: Murray who betrayed the NGA has had to resign; the movement behind the miners has built up not only with the regional TUC days of action which he opposed, but with a growing response from other trade unionists to Arthur Scargill's call to widen the anti-Tory action.

The Stalinists' attempt to limit the miners' strike to a sectional dispute has had its own results in Scotland. The compromise with the right-wing steel leaders at Ravenscraig ended not only with scab coal going into the plant to maintain virtually full production, but also with ISTC members at Hunterston openly scabbing on T&GWU dockers.

The Workers Revolutionary Party has every confidence that the Scottish miners will continue their heroic defiance of Thatcher which has been displayed on the picket lines.

Confident

We are equally confident that the movement towards the organisation of a General Strike will build up under the impact of Thatcher's dictatorship. In the course of this struggle the Workers Revolutionary Party will continue to build up revolutionary leadership in all trade unions in sharpest opposition to Stalinism and reformism.

We call on all Scottish miners and other trade unionists to join us at the All Trades Unions Alliance national conference on Saturday June 30 at Sheffield (see page one) to discuss 'The organisation of the General Strike'. Read our daily newspaper News Line and consider joining our party.

Everyone should come out

THE Thatcher government's attempts to break the NUM should prompt 'everybody holding a union card to come out on strike', Rossington miners told News Line yesterday.

'It must be as clear as day to all unions now that if she can beat us, then they will be defeated next,' Norman Deakins said.

Graham Cooper believes: 'The TUC has been lacking in bringing about a full General Strike to support us because this is a fight on behalf of all trade unionists.'

'This strike has been politically orchestrated from the start. That was the case as soon as MacGregor was appointed by Thatcher. She hates the miners because she remembers what happened in 1972 and 1974.'

And Cooper maintains that the determination of the Thatcher government to crush the miners must be matched by the NUM in rejecting any shabby compromise over closures in talks with the NCB.

Proven

He said: 'There can't be any deal whatsoever. We have to say no to all closures except where there is proven seam exhaustion.'

Deakins added: 'There is not a miner in Britain who wouldn't go back next week on the right terms. But until we get the right terms, which must mean no closures, then we have to stay out.'

Malcolm Day is also adamant that 'the TUC must get off their backsides and back us to the hilt'.

Cooper, who took part in the 1972 and 1974 pay strikes, also has bitter recollections of the treachery of past union leaders.

'But whatever anyone says about Arthur Scargill, he has spoken the truth and hasn't been bought.'

'We should have leaders in all the unions who represent their members and who don't back down.'

No guarantee on jobs: spark

PIT electrician Paul McQuillan is infuriated by the Tory and Coal Board claim that miners are guaranteed jobs because he knows from his own experience that it is a barefaced lie.

For when Elsecar Main colliery near Barnsley closed last year he and other craftsmen expected to be offered transfers to neighbouring pits in South Yorkshire.

Standard

But the NCB told them that no jobs were available and that they would have to go to the Fence Workshops — and face a drop in their standard of living.

Paul told News Line: 'I told them that I preferred to work at a pit, but it made no difference. So I asked them whether they were telling me that if I refused their offer to go to Fence, I would be thrown on the dole.'

'And they replied: "Not at this stage".'

NCB management finally agreed to let two electricians start work at Fence on two-week trial to see whether working conditions there were acceptable.

'But,' said Paul, 'before those two weeks were up I got a letter from the Board saying: "You will start at Fence on the following Monday".'

'So it really annoyed me to see the Chancellor Nigel Lawson on "Question Time" on TV saying that miners' jobs were safe. They are not, it's a lie to say they are.'

'What I want to know is, where are the lads from Cortonwood going to go, or from any other pit when it closes for that matter?'

After 13 weeks on strike, Paul insists that there can be 'no compromise over jobs. There must be no closures and we must not allow them to take away future jobs.'

Physical

'We need more co-operation from other unions and definite physical support to stop all coal moving.'

'It's clear that Thatcher is out to destroy the NUM and the working class. She wants to have us all under her thumb.'

Case for Community Councils

EVERY trade unionist and worker must come to the aid of the miners in their struggle for jobs against the capitalist state, the Thatcher dictatorship and the National Coal Board.

The working class as a whole and their professional allies must share the burdens and sacrifices of the fight which the miners are waging in defence of the most basic of rights — the right to work and to organise freely in trade unions independent of the state.

Trade union branches, shop stewards' committees, trades councils and other labour movement organisations must take the initiative now in the setting up of Community Councils which will act immediately to meet the needs of the miners, who are fighting on behalf of the whole working class.

As well as the trade unions, the Community Councils must draw in representatives of every section of the working class and professional allies involved in the anti-Tory fight — miners' wives, youth groups, voluntary organisations and local Labour councils.

There are immediate and practical tasks which flow from the defiant resistance of the miners to the provocations of the NCB, an unprecedented military-style police operation directed by the Home Office through Scotland Yard and the organised harassment by social security, gas and electricity bureaucrats.

The Workers Revolutionary Party believes that the tasks of Community Councils, which should extend beyond mining districts, will be to:

- Provide food for families and children of those on strike. No miner to be starved back to work by the Tories.
- Pay urgent bills for electricity and gas, calling on workers not to carry out cut-offs as an act of solidarity with the strike. Raise funds for new clothing and footwear for strikers.
- Ensure that no miner is evicted by local councils for not being able to pay rent or rates. Make certain that medical supplies are paid for so that miners and their families can get the treatment prescribed.

- Arrange for the care of the elderly dependent on support from miners' families, ensure nursery provision so that miners' wives can participate fully in winning support for the strike.
- Organise the provision of free legal representation for miners who need it. Provide accommodation for miners from other areas.
- Watch out for and organise against provocateurs. Organise the defence of union offices and funds from state attacks.
- Rally other workers to support and back up miners' pickets and organise marches and rallies.

LABOUR COUNCILS must be asked to:

- Provide free school meals and transport for miners' children.
- Make office accommodation in council offices available to miners, with facilities for printing and communications.

- Make sure that no evictions take place because of mounting debts. Wipe out rent and rate arrears.
- Provide free public transport for strikers and their families. Make all council facilities available free to miners. Lay on entertainments and outings for miners' families.
- Resist having to foot the bill for the cost of the Downing Street directed police operation against the miners' union.

This is the best way to answer the challenge of the capitalist state, and the Tory dictatorship. Community Councils — as Soviet-type organisations — will give the working class confidence in its own independent strength to defeat the class enemy and provide the basis for the successful struggle for power which has now been joined.

Circus Plume for Piggott record

CIRCUS PLUME (3.00) looks all set to put Lester Piggott's name on another record by landing the £80,000 Gold Seal Oaks at EPSOM today.

Piggott needs one more classic winner to equal Frank Buckle's record total of 27, and it seems that he has found the right partner in John Dunlop's filly.

Earlier this week came news that Piggott had lost his job with Henry Cecil.

He had hoped to win the Derby on Alhabatim, but now all eyes will be on Circus Plume, so impressive when winning the Sir Charles Clore Memorial at Newbury on her reappearance last month.

A daughter of High Top, Circus Plume should have no problems lasting out the Oaks trip. She only had to be pushed out with hands and heels to beat Leipzig by a length and a half at Newbury, and the form of that race has since been franked by Leipzig's Kempton win.

John Dunlop also saddles Out Of Shot, but the form of her win in the Esal Bookmakers Oaks Trial at Lingfield does not look as good as Circus Plume's.

Michael Stoute is also doubly represented, with Malaak and Optimistic Lass. American ace Willie Shoemaker has been persuaded to fly over for the ride on Malaak, but stable jockey Walter Swinburn's decision to stick to Musidora winner Optimistic Lass must be respected.

Poquito Queen finished second to Optimistic Lass at York and Barry Hills has great hopes that his filly will finally end his run of frustrating luck in this race.

Hills has a disastrous record in this classic. He was robbed of victory when Dibi-dale's saddle slipped in 1974, then his well-fancied Durtal unshipped Lester Piggott on the way to the start and had to be withdrawn in 1977.

Two seasons ago, the Lambourn trainer saw his two entries, Slightly Dangerous and Last Feather, finish second and third to Time Charter.

Poquito Queen has been well backed to make amends, but Hills may have to play second fiddle again.

Others who must come into consideration are the Irish pair, Real Gold and Easy to Copy.

Channel Affair (2.15) showed improved form to win handsomely at Brighton last month and Paul Cole's filly looks on a handy mark in the Ever Ready Ebbisham Handicap.

THE JONES BOY PLANS WORLD TITLE FINALE

EDDIE THOMAS . . . 'Colin has never worked better'

'THE only day I'll be fighting is when I go into a fight knowing I'm not fit,' said welterweight Colin Jones during a short break at his Swansea gym this week.

He is preparing for next Wednesday's fight with American Billy Parks at the Afan Lido, Aberavon.

Jones, his initial road work and bag punching now over, was putting the finishing touches to his edge by sparring with Brian Anderson, the Yorkshire light-middleweight.

Eddie Thomas, Colin's manager, believes Commonwealth champion Jones is in 'fine fettle'. 'Colin is boxing well within himself, which I like to see,' Thomas said.

'In the past he tended to wait, wanting to get the big punch in to knock the other fellow over. Now he's boxing and moving three times as good,' he added.

Campaign

What didn't please Thomas, though, was the query over Colin Jones's eyesight by the British Boxing Board of Control, which turned into a campaign by some national newspapers giving that April eye test more coverage than Jones's two world title fights put together.

The affair threatened Jones's boxing licence at one time and his position as number one world contender for the welterweight crown of Milton McCrory.

'Colin is just short-sighted in one eye and we have got three specialists to show that his eyes had not deteriorated since he had started his boxing career,' Thomas said.

Many fans believe that holding two top class boxing venues in Aberavon in such a short space of time had shaken out more than just a few cobwebs outside the Royal Albert Hall circuit.

Wednesday's bout will be only the third fight Gorseinon-born Jones has had in Wales since 1979.

Jones is now the only British boxer of proven world class and is also the least dependent on established boxing venues and hollow publicity campaigns, which is demonstrated by his enormous popularity in America after his two world title fights against Milton McCrory in Nevada last year.

The Jones of 1984 is even more confident than the Jones of 1983.

'Seven years inside and outside the ring has taught me a lot,' he said.

His plans are clear. 'Barring cuts and injuries of course, three fights or one, I might be out of the boxing game. If I win the world title I would only defend it once. Either way I aim to be out of the game by my 26th birthday next March.

Spend

'You've only got one life to spend your money in!' he quipped.

New Orleans's Billy Sparks is another American whose record on paper is not outstanding, but he is a big man and has fought some of his bouts at light-middleweight.

No American boxer is treated lightly these days, least of all by Jones, who won't give Sparks anything less than 100 per cent in front of the massed and loyal fans in South Wales next week.

COLIN JONES . . . Planning to retire on 26th birthday with World title

Sports Line

THE DEBATE over which tournaments and over which period they are won constitute a Grand Slam has raged here in Paris for a fortnight.

The players are divided, the world's press cannot make up their minds — and when conversation in the bars surrounding the courts at Roland Garros turn to the subject, it sends the Gallic temperaments running high.

Traditionally the Grand Slam has meant winning the title here, at Wimbledon, the US Open and the Australian Championship all in the same year.

The American Don Budge first completed it back in 1938, Maureen Connolly followed in 1953 before Rod Laver — during the great era of Australian tennis — managed to accomplish it twice in 1962, and again in 1969.

The last person to do it was another Australian, Margaret Court, back in 1970.

Two important factors have played a considerable part in this greatest of tennis hurdles being surmounted again.

Capture

Firstly, the game is so highly commercialised these days, and the professional circuit so large, that the top players find it hard to play the whole year and capture all four titles.

Secondly, the Australian Championships are considered to be something of a sick joke these days.

Lack of interest among the top players — tired at the end of a strenuous year — means the dates for this tournament have fluctuated between late December and early January.

Even if a player has won two or three of the Grand Slam finals — the long trek to Melbourne at the end of the year has put them off. But now the International Tennis Federation (ITF) has officially declared that holding all four titles — even if they are won in a two-year period — constitutes a Grand Slam.

And just to show how much they believe in it, they have offered a cool $1 million bonus to any player who reaches their criteria.

Martina Navratilova stands just one match away from that today.

If she should overcome

MARTINA NAVRATILOVA and Chris Evert-Lloyd, the two most consistent winners on the women's professional tennis circuit over the past decade, meet in the final of the French Open Tennis Championships at the Stade Roland Garros, Paris, this afternoon.

Lloyd is chasing her sixth French title, Navratilova goes for the big one — the Grand Slam.

News Line's Matthew Nugent, in Paris this week for the Championships, previews today's big match.

Chris Evert-Lloyd this afternoon on centre court, Philippe Chatrier, president of the ITF, will gladly slip a cheque for $1 million into her back pocket — the biggest bonus in the history of sport.

Victory for Navratilova today, no matter whether you are a 'Slam' or 'Sham' fan, will confirm Navratilova as the greatest player in women's tennis in the modern era.

Lloyd's contribution to women's tennis over the past decade has been overshadowed by Navratilova's astonishing record.

But Lloyd has also made her mark at the very summit of the game.

Record

She has won this tournament on no less than five occasions. Victory today would put her into the record books as the greatest women's clay court player of all time.

The head-to-head record for these two giants shows that they have met on 58 occasions since 1973.

Lloyd has the edge at 30-28.

While Navratilova has dominated their meetings in the past two years — she has won every match since April 1982, a total of ten finals — Lloyd still remains supreme when their careers have crossed on clay.

Navratilova has managed to defeat Lloyd just once in six clay finals.

'For Chris to win tomorrow she will have to abandon her base-line game and come into the net. But I don't believe she can do that,' Hana Mandlikova said after Navratilova had beaten her in yesterday's semi-final.

'I would like to see Chris win. That would be good for women's tennis. It would show the people that there are other players around. But I think that Martina will win in two sets.'

Indeed, there are not too many players around who give Lloyd much of a chance today — except maybe Navratilova!

'Chris's game will suit me,' she said yesterday. 'Staying back on the base line does not put any pressure on me at all.'

GRAND SLAM OR GRAND SHAM

MARTINA NAVRATILOVA

Planned

Lloyd stayed away from the stadium yesterday. She had planned to take a long rest and just put in an hour's practice this morning.

Navratilova won't arrive until around 11a.m. this morning, have a light warm up and then set out to hopefully record her own little piece of tennis history.

One must go for Navratilova, despite Lloyd's career record on clay.

The No.1 seed has played so exceptionally well over these past two weeks that it would be one of the major shocks in world tennis if she were to lose.

Doc takes over Wolves

TOMMY Docherty returned to soccer management yesterday — as boss of newly relegated Wolverhampton Wanderers.

The former Scotland manager, who has managed a host of clubs in the First, Second and Third Divisions, was named yesterday to revive the Midlands club's fortunes following their disastrous season.

The challenging appointment gives Docherty the chance to get back into football — doing the job he relishes most.

So far he's had an eventful if somewhat chequered career, during which time he has taken charge of nine clubs, including three different spells with Queen's Park Rangers.

That was after an outstanding playing career which started as a wing-half with Preston — including 25 Scottish international caps — and ended with Arsenal.

Since then he has rarely been out of the limelight for long. His first manager's job was at Chelsea, where he took charge in 1962, and stayed over five years to build an outstanding young side.

The 56-year-old Docherty has been given a one-year contract at Molineux, but if he proves successful in hauling them out of the Second Division, an extension has been promised.

Docherty, who once quipped that he'd had more clubs than golfer Jack Nicklaus, said the Wolves appointment was his 16th managerial position.

He said: 'I sometimes wondered whether I would get back into football with the type of club I wanted. I have had

TOMMY DOCHERTY
... Another soccer life-line with Wolves approaches from smaller outfits but I wanted a big club — and they don't come much bigger than Wolves.

'They have lost their way in recent times, but in a situation like this, a club has to make a bold step ... that is what they have done in appointing me.'

'I am a top class manager,' Docherty added modestly. 'People always point to my failures, but I have had success as well — not only in winning things but in balancing the books, which is very important in today's game.'

'My immediate aim is to try and sell some season tickets by getting the fans to rally round. Then it is up to me to provide an attractive and winning team, to attract even more support.'

'I am aware of the financial situation at Wolves, but they are in the same position as many clubs.'

'One of the great pleasures of management for me is to go out and find small nuggets and develop them into international players,' the Doc concluded.

CHRIS-EVERT LLOYD

French first for McEnroe

JOHN McEnroe, the No.1 seed, reached his first-ever French Open tennis final here at the Stade Roland Garros, Paris, yesterday afternoon.

McEnroe demolished the challenge of fellow-American Jimmy Connors in just a little over two hours, 7-5, 6-1, 6-2.

He now meets Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl in tomorrow afternoon's final. Lendl beat Sweden's Mats Wilander — also in straight sets — 6-3, 6-3, 7-5.

Martina Navratilova also kept on course for her Grand Slam when she beat Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2 in her semi final which had been held over from Thursday because of rain.

Control

Despite a tough first set, McEnroe was always in control of his match with Connors yesterday.

'I am certainly happy with the way I played today,' he told me afterwards. 'I was a little surprised with how easy it was.'

'Jimmy played well in the first set, probably the best I have seen him play on clay. But after the first set it seems that some of the steam had gone out of him.'

There was just one real moment when it seemed as if yesterday's match might boil over. At 3-1 up in second set and about to break Connors' serve yet again, McEnroe questioned a line call.

After disputing it with the chair umpire for several moments, Connors walked forward to his opponent and said: 'Why don't you just shut up and play the game?'

It seemed as if we might be in for an explosive match.

But McEnroe simply walked back to the base line, and proceeded to continue the bombardment of his opponent.

Shooting

'I psych myself up sometimes by shouting at myself,' McEnroe said after his victory. 'But when I play Jimmy he tends to try and get back into a match when he's losing by having a go at me.'

Lendl did what he had to do yesterday — hung in when Wilander decided to take the ball from the base line throughout their match.

From Matthew Nugent at Stade Roland Garros, Paris

Wilander, for most of their clash, was willing just to balloon the ball back over the net — but Lendl was always there at the other end, looking extremely relaxed, to return it.

'The way I played today, I wasn't missing anything,' Lendl was to say afterwards. 'I also started to serve much better as the match went on.'

'Mats tried to control the match but I felt in control throughout.'

'If I wanted the points to be quick, then they were — if I wanted long rallies, then we had them. Mats tried to change this but he couldn't.'

McEnroe promised the gathered press last night that tomorrow's finals would be lot less boring than the Wilander-Lendl clash yesterday.

Moon balls

'There were a lot of "moon balls" out there today,' McEnroe said. 'I will play Lendl the way I have done in the past. I shall play as I did today — I will attack.'

'I shall try and get a high percentage of first serves in. When we play, whoever gets the most first serves in is a good indication of how the match will go.'

At times yesterday, the semi-final between Mandlikova and Navratilova was positively scrappy. Centre court was only half full for what many had regarded here as being the best women's match of the fortnight — as these two players opened play for the day.

Raced

Mandlikova, the only player to beat Navratilova this year, raced through the first set, breaking her opponent's serve in the fifth game to take it 6-3.

Navratilova, throughout the opening set, had looked much too eager to win. She seemed as if she wanted to get it all over quickly and get back into the locker room but in the second she began to wind up — and as she did, Mandlikova's game began to deteriorate.

The match finally turned in the No.1 seed's favour in the fifth game when she broke Mandlikova's serve to take a 3-2 lead. She did it again in the seventh, and then served out for the set.

In the final set, Mandlikova managed to hold her serve just once as the match finally slipped away from her.

Robson hopes on Rio carnival

ENGLAND'S footballers sampled the scenic delights of Rio de Janeiro yesterday.

And had Mark Hateley and Dave Watson known the good news awaiting them on their return to their hotel they might well have climbed the famous Sugar Loaf mountain without the cable car.

The pair of 22-year-olds are included in a surprise 4-2-4 formation against Brazil tomorrow as manager Bobby Robson asks fortune to proffer rewards to the brave.

Centre-half Watson wins his first cap because Robson refused to risk a half-fit Graham Roberts, and Portsmouth striker Hateley starts his first senior game to provide aerial power for the wing crosses of John Barnes and Mark Chamberlain.

'It is not a gamble, it is a decision, said an unabashed Robson afterwards. 'I am keeping my nerve by keeping the formation intact and seeing if it can be improved.'

'We need a bit of luck

. . . perhaps we can earn it by being positive,' he added.

Sammy Lee is back in the squad after European Cup final duty with Liverpool and is on the bench, while the youthful approach is supplemented with Clive Allen also gaining a substitute's role.

The job of the two-man midfield of Bryan Robson and Ray Wilkins requires all their experience to control enough possession in the intimidating Maracana Stadium to prevent total Brazilian domination, besides which they must also support the front four.

'I want Barnes and Chamberlain to work a bit harder. I still feel we can get a bit more from using two wide players,' said Robson.

The availability of the six-foot Hateley virtually assures the wingers their places.

'The fact that I'm playing Mark means I have got to use wingers. We need someone like him to make sure their goalkeeper can't pick off crosses like cherries,' Robson added.

Of Watson, whose maiden cap tomorrow means Liverpool will receive another £100,000 from Norwich, the England manager said: 'He has done well at under-21 level. He is solid, commanding, quick and strong in the air.'

The two newcomers plus Mike Duxbury (24), Terry Fenwick (24), John Barnes (20), and Mark Chamberlain (22) leave England worryingly short of experience for as tough a challenge as football offers anywhere in the world.
