Miners from Kellingley colliery at the funeral yesterday of Joe Green who worked at the pit for 20 years (see centre pages for more pictures)

Scargill pledge at miner's funeral

WE MUST WIN FOR JOE

'It's clear that our members are prepared to pay whatever price is necessary to maintain their pits, their jobs and industry'

MINERS will honour the memory of Joe Green by winning the fight to defend pit jobs and communities, NUM president Arthur Scargill said after the funeral yesterday of the 55-year-old Kellingley miner.

He gave this pledge after more than 8,000 strikers from throughout the British coalfields had paid an emotional farewell to Green who was crushed to death on the picket line at Ferrybridge power station last Friday.

He is the second picket to die during the 15-week-old strike.

'We owe it to Joe Green and David Jones to win this fight to protect our pits, keep our jobs secure and our mining communities intact. And make no mistake we are going to win this fight,' Scargill declared.

Devotion

He said Green had been a close personal friend of his for many years and had demonstrated 'unswerving devotion and loyalty to the union and its policies'.

His death was a tremendous loss and had deeply shocked NUM members throughout the country, Scargill said.

But he added: 'We've had 3,000 members arrested, more than 1,000 injured, many of them very badly, and two members killed.

'It's clear that our members are prepared to pay whatever price is necessary to maintain their pits, their jobs and their industry.'

That mood of grim determination was written on the faces of all the miners and their families who made up the mile-long column of mourners that followed the funeral cortege to Pontefract crematorium.

Among them was the family of David Jones, who was killed on the picket line at Ollerton colliery in March.

Earlier a lone piper — a former miner from Acton Hall pit — had led Green's relatives and several hundred miners from Kellingley and his

GCHQ ban 'wrong'

THE GOVERNMENT should have consulted the International Labour Organisation before it decided to ban trade unions at the GCHQ spy centre in Cheltenham, a QC told the High Court yesterday. The ILO ruled earlier this month that the government's unilateral ban last January breached international conventions.

Louis Blom-Cooper QC, representing the civil service unions in their move to outlaw the ban on union membership, said the government's failure to discuss the GCHQ problem with the international agency underlined the 'unreasonableness of the action taken'. At the time the government was considering what steps to take at GCHQ, it was consulting the ILO about proposed changes in other laws which could affect Britain's international obligations, said counsel.

Peace 'threat'

FOREIGN Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe has discovered the real threat to peace. It comes not from US or British imperialism or even from the Soviet Union, but from the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament! He told Welsh Tories at their conference in Porthcawl yesterday that CND 'and its allies in the Labour Party' were making nuclear disarmament more difficult.

He said: 'They have no monopoly of the desire for peace. Their policies, however well intentioned, attack the balance which has maintained our peace for 40 years, and thereby increase the risk of war. Such movements also hinder progress towards disarmament. They create false hopes among those with whom we must negotiate that real concessions by them can be avoided.'

Down with counter revolutionary Soares regime

EARLY on Tuesday morning of this week, the Portuguese police raided the headquarters of the left-wing Força de Unidade Popular (FUP) in Lisbon and its offices in Setubal, Oporto and Marinha Grande. They also broke into the homes of FUP leaders, seizing documents, books, letters and other literature.

Thirty-five FUP members are now in police custody including its leader, Pedro Goulart, and Major Otelio Saraiva de Carvalho, one of the military officers who led the coup which overthrew the fascist dictatorship in April 1974.

This week's sweeping attack on political rights is glaringly reminiscent of the old days in Portugal when the fascist Salazar ruled. Today the man directing operations on behalf of the ruling class is Socialist Party leader and Prime Minister Mario Soares.

The raids, involving almost 1,000 police, were timed to take place on the eve of a parliamentary move to push through ultra-reactionary legislation aimed at the basic democratic rights of the working class. Soares's Bill authorises:

- ★ The establishment of a secret police service similar to the notorious and hated PIDE which was smashed by the working class at the time of the 1974 revolution and subsequently abolished by law.
- ★ The authorisation of phone-tapping, mail opening, and the search of homes, offices and premises without a warrant. (This part no doubt borrowed from the Tory Police and Criminal Evidence Bill!)

The legislation coincides with the government's adoption of draconian austerity measures against workers' living standards dictated by the International Monetary Fund. Some governments are snared and then steamrollered by the IMF, but it must be said that Soares has been the most obedient lackey of the bankers' consortium: they didn't have to catch him, he rushed into their arms.

Earlier this month he excelled even Thatcher by giving a rousing welcome to South Africa's racist hangman P.W. Botha, and has since been publicly thanked by the Pretoria regime for acting as a go-between in organising South Africa's peace treaty with Mozambique and for sponsoring Botha's eight-nation tour of Western Europe.

Last week South African and Portuguese officials met and signed a protocol aimed at improving relations between the two regimes.

Soares has cynically and dishonestly linked the FUP with the activities of the Popular Forces of April 25 (FP25), a shadowy military organisation responsible for a spate of political killings and bank robberies. Taking his lead from Reagan and Thatcher, the Portuguese premier has howled 'terrorism' to turn loose the forces of the state and obtain the resurrection of the PIDE.

But while his regime claims to be fighting 'terrorism', in fact it is conscientiously organising counter-revolution against the working class, the trade unions and the left wing. Ten years after the working class rose up and kicked the fascists out of the saddle, Soares is helping them back into the stirrups.

The same counter-revolutionary policy is being pursued by all the social democratic, reformist regimes in Western Europe, including Mitterrand in France, Craxi in Italy, Gonzalez in Spain and Papandreu in Greece. These are the pro-NATO, pro-American, anti-communist scoundrels whom Kinnock describes as 'our socialist colleagues in Europe'.

We say:

- ★ Release Otelio, Goulart and the FUP political prisoners!
- ★ Down with the Soares regime!
- ★ Build a Portuguese section of the International Committee of the Fourth International, the nucleus of the world party of socialist revolution!

Coventry rally to support miners

OVER 400 trade unionists and youth attended a midday rally at Coventry's speakers' corner in support of the miners yesterday.

The rally was organised by the trades council and a local miners' support group.

Banners from the UCW, AUEW bus workers, Rolls Royce, Massey Ferguson, CPSA and the Coventry trades council lined the wall from which the speeches were made. Pride of place was taken by the miners' own banner.

Phil Higgs, district officer of the AUEW, said support for the miners was a class question. 'The Tory strategy is to open up the Vale of Belvoir, close the uneconomic pits, and privatise a priceless national asset.'

Steve Morley, from the NUR workshop at Toton, Notts, said that in the rail industry 38,000 jobs were to go in the next two years.

'The call to black coal movement has received a tremendous response. We've all seen in the "Mirror" how the rail-men were bought off and we should be out now,' he added, calling for a build-up in the rank and file for a general strike as the leaders could not be trusted.

BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT

Greetings

Edwell Morgan, coking representative from South Wales, brought greetings from the NUM national executive committee, saying: 'The funeral of the second picket who died fighting for his right to work means that if the scabs don't come out now there is no hope for them.'

He believed the recent miners' talks had found common ground until

Trade unionists listen to speakers at the Coventry rally yesterday

Thatcher sent MacGregor in to break them up.

'This government is determined to do two things — one to destroy the NUM and the trade union movement, and two, to discredit Arthur Scargill.

'They will achieve neither. There will be no sell-out by the NEC and the only end will be secure jobs now and secure jobs for our children in the future.'

Liz Sugrue, from Keresley pit and Home-fire Plant wives' support group, said of the miners: 'Their future is our future and the future of the communities which are at risk.'

'Thatcher has tried to starve us back to work and it hasn't worked so she's tried the bully-boy tactics using the police, who won't even allow us to move or speak on our own public highway without threat of arrest.'

She stressed: 'I'd just like to tell MacGregor that we won't be giving in to bully-boy tactics or listening to any more lies. We are fighting to the bitter end.'

Dick Jones, shop steward from Rolls Royce, warned that Tory strategy was to beat the miners and then use the Tebbit laws 'with the viciousness as yet unseen'.

Brian King, AUEW mechanics, linked the miners' strike to the abolition of the councils, ratecapping, privatisation, cuts in health and social services.

King called for the whole working class to demand that the TUC get off its knees and call an indefinite General Strike and bring down the Tories.

Tony Thewlis spoke of police brutality. He had received two broken ribs and a broken leg at the hands of the police at Orgreave.

Ramsgate harbour blocked by police

KENT police sealed off Ramsgate harbour area yesterday to stop miners picketing an oil tanker with fuel bound for the nearby Richborough power station.

Police checked all vehicles and pedestrians entering the harbour area where a convoy of tanker lorries were being loaded.

The oil lorries were then escorted the five miles to the power station.

On the Isle of Grain, a Soviet tanker carrying 48,000 tonnes of fuel oil for two Kent power stations arrived yesterday.

The oil will be used to fire both Kingsnorth and Grain power stations. Asked about the deliveries, Kent NUM vice-president Harold Davis claimed:

'The Soviet Union would not break the miners' strike. All through the strike there have been stories of Russian ships bringing in oil but they never arrived.'

But Kingsnorth power station manager Brian Vickers said: 'We have had about half a dozen Russian tankers bringing in oil since the miners went out on strike.'

Bilston safety cover resumes

EDINBURGH — Coal board bosses here threatened to scrap redundancy payments to miners at a pit which the board said was in danger of closure.

Scottish director Albert Wheeler said that if management went ahead with its threat to shut Bilston Glen, there would be no redundancy payments made to the miners.

It was a scabbing operation organised by management, with the help of police, that led to safety cover being withdrawn at Bilston in the first place.

The operation, in which a small amount of coal was said to have been mined, was a propaganda exercise by the board. It was the first coal produced in Scotland since the strike began, according to the NCB.

NUM branch officials said they would not permit safety cover to be resumed until attempts to produce coal were ended. Later yesterday, after discussions between the board and the NUM, safety cover was restored at Bilston.

MPs' mileage claims too high

SOME MPs are putting in very heavy car mileage claims, according to an inquiry report out today.

But under a new system proposed by the inquiry, under former Transport Minister Lord Peyton, they will be able to claim up to £8,775 a year without supplying details or receipts.

What is more, the payments will be index-linked, rising automatically every April so as to minimise 'undue clamour'.

Peyton's report to the Leader of the Commons,

John Biffen, says: 'We noted with surprise and concern the apparent high level of mileage claims made in a few instances.'

In normal circumstances an MP would not exceed 25,000 miles a year, the report says.

It recommends that any MP who wishes to claim more than this number of miles should detail journeys made throughout the year.

At present MPs are treated in the same way as civil servants in charging mileage for business purposes, currently 25.8p a mile.

Under the new scheme cars larger than 2300cc qualify for a 39p allowance. Those with cars between 1301cc and 2300cc — like a Ford Sierra or a Maestro — will be able to claim 25.9p a mile.

MPs with cars up to 1300cc, such as the standard version of a Metro or a Fiesta, will be allowed to charge 18p a mile.

Lord Peyton says in his report that the inquiry team wanted to spare MPs the burden of producing voluminous records.

Carvalho held in jail

LISBON — Lieutenant-Colonel Otelio Saraiva de Carvalho, one of a group of army officers who led the 1974 coup that toppled Portugal's fascist dictatorship, is being held incommunicado in Caxias jail.

Carvalho was among more than 40 arrested in a snoop on the eve of debate on a Bill to strengthen police powers.

He may be held up to seven months while prosecution evidence is collected on accusations that he was connected with a banned guerrilla organisation.

The Portuguese news agency ANOP said Carvalho had refused to say anything to his police captors.

Blockade may start in Wales

A BLOCKADE of iron ore to the Llanwern steel plant in South Wales may begin before next week's meeting between steel and miners' union leaders.

Following the delivery of 1,000 tonnes of blackleg coal to the plant in lorry convoy yesterday, South Wales NUM executive members said they had already been in touch with rail union officials and were confident that their action would be stepped up to include iron ore deliveries.

The likelihood of a national blockade of iron ore to steel plants mounted yesterday after ISTC steel union leader Bill Sirs said he was 'not very optimistic' about an agreement with the NUM.

Miners' president Arthur Scargill warned again yesterday that any agreement must mean the end to all steel production, as in the 1980 steel strike.

The transport unions' alliance backing the NUM resolved unanimously on Thursday night that if talks between the two unions broke down, then the blockade against steel plants would be stepped up. This would almost certainly involve an iron ore blockade nationally.

THE miners' union is to take out a private summons for assault against the policeman seen by millions on television repeatedly striking a picket with his truncheon.

Miners' president Arthur Scargill said yesterday: 'Following the decision of the Director of Public Prosecutions not to prosecute the officer, the NUM, on legal advice is proceeding with action for assault'.

IN preparation for the NUM national delegates' conference on July 11 and 12, union leaders have drafted a change of union rules to allow the national leadership the power to discipline members found to have taken 'action detrimental to the union'.

The rules change is intended to centralise the federal structure of the union in line with the majority of other unions

Shah says use law

THE employers' organisation, the Institute of Directors, heard calls for the rapid use of the Tory anti-union laws against the miners yesterday.

Selim 'Eddie' Shah, the notorious print company owner who dragged the NGA print union into the courts last year, said that small employers now faced the prospect of losing another battle with the unions because the Coal Board and other nationalised industries had refused to use the law.

Shah's line was backed by IoD director general Walter Goldsmith, who claimed that the anti-union laws were 'a healthy and valuable influence on industrial relations'.

'It is for that reason that we find the NCB's failure to place its confidence in legal remedies in the present miners' dispute so difficult to comprehend,' he accused the NCB of being guilty of a 'grave misjudgment' in not using the anti-union laws.

Shah addressing the Institute of Directors meeting in London on Wednesday

Home Secretary Leon Brittan made it clear last week that the government was now encouraging nationalised industries to use the laws. Earlier in the dispute, the Cabinet had restrained nationalised industries from using the laws.

Stepping up the employers' attack on the union yesterday, Tory Energy Secretary Peter Walker repeated the 'mob rule' allegations against pickets. He also confirmed that the Tories still hope to starve miners back to work by waiting for a 'drift back'.

POLICE FILES ON INNOCENT YOUTHS

BY A SCOTTISH CORRESPONDENT

NAME and address. Reason stopped. Place of interrogation. Height, hair, eyes, complexion, build, marks. Who he or she keeps company with.

This is only part of an itemised list in a system under which Scottish police forces are keeping detailed files on young people who have committed no criminal offence.

The system of 'Juvenile Contact Cards' is being used by four forces — Strathclyde, Lothian and Borders, Central, and Northern.

Now criticism is growing following enquiries about the purpose of another item on the Cards. This states: 'Noted by Collator' ... with a space left for a tick.

It has been disclosed this means the cards are passed to collators in the criminal intelligence system — which has itself been exposed as holding gossip, hearsay and surveillance reports on people who have no criminal records.

This link-up with the criminal intelligence system has challenged the official police claim that the 'Contact Card' operation is merely to enable policemen to give friendly warnings to parents of youth that are, for example, 'keeping bad company'.

But if this is the case, why is such a depth of detail required to be filled in on the cards? Apart from the specific items mentioned above, plus many more, an equal amount of space is left for police officers to add 'Any Other Information'. What kind of comments are included here?

Superintendent Douglas Kelly, of Strathclyde Police community involvement branch, told 'The Scotsman' newspaper this week that the cards are returned to his branch after passing through the hands of criminal intelligence collators.

Supt Kelly said that if an incident had taken place 30 minutes previously (he gave the 'example' of an old lady being assaulted or robbed by a youth matching that description) the collator might spot the connection.

'The Scotsman' article commented: 'To some critics, this will reinforce the view that juvenile contact cards are indeed part of the criminal intelligence system.'

A civil liberties organisation called the Scottish Campaign for the Rights of Young People has produced a bulletin expressing concern and saying it wants to find out how many cards are being held and how the information is retrieved.

A Strathclyde Police community involvement branch booklet has a section which defines a 'potential offender'.

The section states: 'Youth in this category are usually referred to the community involvement branch by patrol officers or by parents, teachers, shopkeepers and youth and community workers in circumstances which do not warrant the submission of a formal police report.'

Teachers go to arbitration

STRIKES by teachers in England and Wales were called off yesterday after their pay dispute was referred to arbitration.

The move was agreed after a meeting with the Burnham pay committee at a hotel in central London.

The decision brings to an end the series of selective strikes which have been hitting schools in England and Wales for more than 10 weeks.

Teachers picketed the entrance to London's Piccadilly Hotel as the talks were going on inside. Most were members of the second-largest teachers' union, the National Association of Schoolmasters/Union of Women Teachers and they carried placards saying 'arbitration without strings'.

Arbitrators will now decide on the management's offer of 4.5 per cent and the union claim for a 'substantial' pay rise backdated to April 1.

The result of the arbitration will be known by the autumn.

But even then, the government will not necessarily honour any pay rise recommended by the arbitrators.

Doug McAvoy, deputy general secretary of the biggest union, the National Union of Teachers, claimed the outcome was a 'major success' for the teachers.

He said: 'The response from our members during the last two months has been magnificent.'

'They can take pride in the fact that their determination and commitment has achieved an unprecedented breakthrough in the face of a government determined to prevent a reference to arbitration.

'This major success is due to the endeavours of our members and will benefit all teachers.'

'Our action has shown the employers the determination of teachers to achieve a professional level of pay.'

Fred Smithies, general secretary of the NAS/UWT, said he was pleased the pay problem had finally been referred to arbitration.

'It is a tragedy that we have had to see weeks of disruption in schools simply because the employers were so perverse for so long in delaying the start of negotiations,' he said.

Cammell Laird jobs to go

OVER 800 more jobs are to be axed by British Shipbuilders at the Cammell Laird yard in Birkenhead.

The redundancies are all due before the end of the summer, and are added to the 900 already cut from the Merseyside yard since last December.

British Shipbuilders have said that further job cuts will be made at the yard if no new orders are won before the end of this year.

Workers at three 'Job Centres' in Manchester came out on indefinite strike yesterday in opposition to plans to shut the centres down.

The CPSA civil service union said yesterday that over 800 jobs were at stake.

Long-term benefits cut

NEARLY 2 million people drawing long-term supplementary benefit will lose money from November as a result of changes introduced by the Tory government.

Figures released by the Department of Health and Social Security show that 1.4 million claimants, including 80,000 families with children, will receive between 50p and £1 a week less than they would otherwise have done.

A further 400,000, including 20,000 families with children will receive up to 50p less.

Altogether 78 per cent of long-term supplementary benefit claimants — mainly pensioners — will have their benefit trimmed as a result of the changes.

The changes result from an increase in the so-called 'available scale margin' deducted from the payments to persons who qualify for extra expenses on diet, laundry, etc.

Until now this deduction has been 50p, but Social Services Secretary Norman Fowler plans to raise it to £1 in November and to extend it to heating additions as well.

The total amount raised by this mean trick will be £86 million in a full year. Labour MP Brynmor John commented yesterday:

'The government has tried to smuggle through a major cut in benefit under the guise of a technical change.'

'Many pensioners will find that their rise this autumn fails to match inflation.'

'For some the increase will be as little as 1.8 per cent. Disabled people, single parents and others on long-term supplementary benefit will also be hit by the changes.'

'The government seems determined that people will not realise the effect upon them until far too late.'

'Their major effort is directed to disguising facts rather than maintaining living standards.'

'In his statement on Monday Fowler was less than frank with parliament, but he has now been forced to reveal the full extent of what he intends.'

NALGO strike goes on

A MASS meeting of over 1,000 Tower Hamlets NALGO members has voted overwhelmingly to continue their week-long strike in defence of a basic trade union principle.

Tower Hamlets NALGO came out on strike on Wednesday June 13, after 50 library workers were suspended for not collecting fines as part of a campaign of protest against cuts in the library service.

Although safeguards have now been agreed with councillors to continue the service provided by two threatened libraries — Roman Road and Poplar — the dispute continues. Tower Hamlets Council now claims that any form of industrial action is strike action.

Library workers were given a letter which stated that as they would not collect fines they would not receive any pay and should not remain on council premises.

NALGO members are picketing all the main council buildings in the area and are organising a mass lobby of the council's Policy Committee on Monday evening between 5p.m. and 7.30p.m.

WORLD SUMMARY

Belgians organise strike

BRUSSELS — The two largest trade unions in the country have called on their 2.5 million members to stop work for 15 minutes next Tuesday to support West German metal and print workers' fight for a 35-hour week. Union leaders said they would try to enlist support of unions in Common Market countries.

Jailed

LAGOS — A military tribunal in Enugu, eastern Nigeria, has jailed former governor Jim Nwobodo for 22 years for corruption involving nearly $9.3 million.

Rescued

REYKJAVIK — Two Britons were rescued yesterday without major injuries, 24 hours after their single-engine aircraft crashed in the northern Icelandic mountains.

Border

ROME — Air and border traffic was returning to normal yesterday after customs union officials called off industrial action that caused several days of jams.

Home

PARIS — Four Iranian passengers who had been flown to France against their will in a hijacked aircraft have returned to Tehran.

TROOPS ENFORCE BOMBAY CURFEW

NEW DELHI — Troops shot dead one person and injured 17 in Bombay, Maharashtra state, when they opened fire on Hindu and Moslem demonstrators on Wednesday night.

State-run Press Trust of India (PTI) reported the violence yesterday and said police reinforcements had been moved in to enforce a curfew on the city, India's financial centre.

PTI released no more details but said the violence coincided with a campaign by the Indira Gandhi regime to 'restore confidence' in Punjab.

Hundreds of people died when police and army reinforcements opened fire on bitter street battles between Moslems and Hindus last month and thousands were made homeless in the surrounding regions as homes and factories were set ablaze.

In Punjab, the army mounted what it called 'flag marches' to restore public confidence in the face of seething anger against the June 5 military atrocity at the Golden Temple of Amritsar in which more than 2,000 people are estimated to have been killed.

Marched

Soldiers marched through the countryside to encourage people to return to their fields in time to plant the winter rice crop. All-India Radio home service said.

The government yesterday announced the lifting of 'all restrictions for the movement of all types of vehicular traffic throughout the state between 5a.m. and 9p.m., except in Amritsar district' from Thursday.

BY A FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT

All shrines, except the Golden Temple and a shrine at Muktsar, Faridkot district, western Punjab, were declared open.

The Punjab government announced an ad hoc relief of 5,000 rupees to each of those families that had suffered 'loss of life or property in Amritsar during the operations of the security forces'.

Nearly every Sikh shrine in Punjab, and some Mosques and Hindu temples, were shut down shortly after the storming of the Golden Temple in a sweep on anti-government Sikhs, and the arrests continue.

Mrs Gandhi is carrying out a desperate campaign to keep a clamp on the state as well as bring the agricultural industry back to normal.

Hundreds of thousands of tonnes of grain have not been harvested in the state that supplies more than half of the country's needs, because itinerant rural workers, the backbone of the labour force, have stayed away by the thousands.

Thousands of agricultural workers remain camped at Ambala, on the Haryana-Punjab border, herded into makeshift shelters.

A collapse of winter replanting would wreak incalculable damage on the economy, especially India's heavy world debt repayments.

All the main leaders of the Akali Dal, the Sikhs' main political party, are in detention, including party president Harchand Singh Longowal, who surrendered just before the storming of the Golden Temple.

The Panj Pyares (the Five Loved Ones), the high priests of Sikhism, yesterday appointed Punjab state assemblyman Ujagar Singh Sekhwan, acting-president.

It is believed Sekhwan has been entrusted by the Panj Pyares with the responsibility of seeking an immediate withdrawal of the army from the Golden Temple.

Mrs Gandhi rejected the Panj Pyares' appeal on Wednesday on the grounds that the army was clearing out arms and ammunition from the grounds, nearly four weeks after the storming.

The Sikhs are demanding the right to undertake repairs to the damaged and partly destroyed temple buildings under Sikh rites.

All-India Radio on Wednesday commented on the defection of one of the most senior of Indian diplomats in Norway, Harminder Singh.

It said the government considered his resignation 'regrettable' and 'terminated with immediate effect' his service at the embassy.

Singh, who said he had information that more than 2,000 people had been killed in the June 5 atrocity, has sought asylum in Norway.

Floods kill 200

DACCA — Tens of thousands of people in Bangladesh and north-east India have lost their homes in monsoon floods that have killed 200 people in the past month.

The toll is rising, and the flood ravages are spreading.

Bangladeshi officials said more than 50,000 people had lost their homes in the past week and nearly 300,000 people were affected in some way by the floods.

State-run Press Trust of India (PTI) said more than 56,000 people from 116 villages in Gopalganj district, Bihar state, had been forced to flee their homes.

PTI said the Brahmaputra River was rising in the north-eastern state of Assam, bordering Bangladesh, and more than 117 villages were submerged.

Artillery barrage rattles Bikfaya

BEIRUT — An evening artillery barrage rattled the hillside town of Bikfaya shortly after Lebanon's 'National Unity' Cabinet ended a five-hour meeting.

At least seven shells hit the town, 11 miles north-east of Beirut, only two hours after the Cabinet meeting in President Amin Gemayel's summer palace. No casualty was reported.

Bikfaya is near mountain positions held by Lebanese Moslem and Christian militias and is less than three miles from Syrian front lines.

The Syrian-controlled town of Dour Shweir, near Kikfaya, received four mortar rounds.

Reform

The Cabinet meeting ended on a stalemate over a reform package, sponsored by Syria, to change the Lebanese army's structure and stop factional fighting.

Prime Minister Rashid Karami said he expected 'full agreement' on the package at another Cabinet meeting today.

In Beirut guns were silent along the 'green line' separating Moslem and Christian combatants.

The evening shelling at Bikfaya underscored doubts among some political observers that Khaddam's visit had reunited the ministers, split mainly over the issue of army reforms.

Among expected changes under the Khaddam plan, army commander General Ibrahim Tannous would resign and a council of officers from different religious sects would oversee the force with the new commander.

Troops besiege Sri Lanka universities

COLOMBO — Armed police guarded six universities and other 'sensitive' areas as the government warned the opposition not to make political capital out of student unrest.

BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT

Two undergraduates died in state violence against the students who began agitating in support of the Tamil minority's struggle against the racist government of President Junius Jayewardene.

Schools remain closed on instructions from National Security Minister Lalith Athulathmudali, who admitted almost the entire army was tied up in fighting the student uprising and the Tamil Liberation Tigers for Tamil Eelam (Tamil homeland) in north and north-east Sri Lanka.

Athulathmudali has branded the students who were being rounded up as 'extremist elements' and 'provocateurs'.

The revolt against the state started on Tuesday when a student was killed in a clash with police at Peradeniya University in the central hills.

A second student was killed in Colombo the next day, when police opened fire on a group of university students who retaliated by hurling stones.

Athulathmudali denied during a stormy debate in parliament that the police had made indiscriminate arrests and had assaulted students.

'Let us not seek to make political capital out of it,' he told the opposition.

Opposition members said in parliament the revolt was sparked by the setting up of a police post in the Peradeniya University premises.

Parliament approved an extension of the state of emergency on a 125-10 vote.

The unleashing of state violence coincides with Jayewardene's decision last month to enlist the services of the Israeli Mossad secret service to train the army and police in terror tactics.

The move was aimed against the Tamil fight for a separate state of Tamil Eelam and especially against the Tamil Liberation Tigers freedom fighters.

The polarising of the students, largely Sinhalese, in the southern universities coincides with this move towards escalation of state terror against the Tamils.

● TWO British MPs, Labour's Dave Nellist and the Tory Harry Greenwood, had been refused visas because they wanted 'to inquire into human rights violations, inquire into unrest in the island and sort out Sri Lanka's problems... but they were coming to interfere in our affairs', acting Foreign Minister Tyronee Fernando told parliament on Thursday.

Protest

HARARE — Five people died and 141 have been injured in demonstrations organised by the ZANU-PF ruling party against Joshua Nkomo's opposition ZAPU party in the midlands town of Kwekwe.

The violence has been part of anti-ZAPU demonstrations in five central towns since Sunday. Two ZANU-PF members were reported killed in the province.

Turkish prisoners die

WASHINGTON — Fifteen political prisoners have died in Turkey on hunger strike in the past two months, according to a US congressman.

Democrat Mel Levine told a House of Representatives sub-committee hearing on human rights in Africa that three had died last weekend in a protest against prison conditions.

He expressed concern over a woman prisoner, Nigar Gulsat Aygen, arrested in April 1981, who was in a coma.

Levine interjected during the hearing to ask Elliott Abrams, Assistant Secretary of State for Human Rights and Humanitarian Affairs, to raise the matter with the Turkish government.

DEBTOR COUNTRIES FACE AN IMPASSE

Oil glut slumps prices

CARTAGENA, Colombia — Calls made yesterday by the Latin American debtor states for better terms on loans and trade will fall on deaf ears when they reach Wall Street and the City of London.

The world's capitalist bankers and the imperialist governments are in no mood, and certainly no position, to ease the economic pains being suffered by the colonial and semi-colonial countries.

After two days of discussions, the leaders of 11 states at the Cartagena meeting decided to temper their defiance of the Western bankers with further appeals for help.

In retrospect, the debtors' summit, the first of its kind ever held, will be seen as another chapter in the build-up to massive defaults throughout the Latin American region.

Dread

The bourgeois nationalist politicians who congregated here are all staring state bankruptcy in the face. All dread the revolutionary developments in the working class and the rebelliousness of the peasantry.

BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT

On one hand they face the squeeze of their own masses, on the other the ruthless pressures of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the Western bankers.

But they faithfully resisted the idea of a joint moratorium on debt repayments or on regional default. But significantly they did not object to the Bolivian government's decision to suspend its debt repayments to the banks.

Observers from Wall Street remain mortally afraid of political events in Argentina where the Alfonsín government is being carried forward by a surge of anti-IMF and anti-imperialist sentiment.

In just one week's time, the Buenos Aires government is due to meet the next instalment on its huge $44.4 billion debt. Most sources say that the deadline will come and go without the payment being met. It will be the world's biggest default.

This will oblige more than 100 creditor banks to place their Argentina loans into a 'non-performing' status, and that means shifting the loans into the debt column of the banks' balance sheets.

Steps

US bankers are tightlipped on what the consequences will be. Some are optimistically saying that the banks have already taken steps to weather an Argentine default, while others are saying this is merely bluff.

The truth is that a default on loans that size will only encourage other debtor nations to resist the bankers' demands leading to a generalised repudiation of repayments. This landslide development would hit the world banking system with such force that it could not survive.

This was the awkward reality on the agenda at Cartagena. But the participants collectively decided that they could not think the unthinkable.

Or as the London 'Times' editorial said yesterday: 'There is no need to be talked into a crisis mentality when quiet but prudent measures, one at a time, could more effectively preserve confidence in the system which we all want to survive.'

Do we?

ROTTERDAM — Agents in the oil market are predicting another oil price drop in the near future.

A glut of oil has filled virtually every storage tank in the Rotterdam and Europort harbours.

The downward movement of the oil prices has reassured itself with a vengeance in recent days, despite the Gulf war.

Spot market prices for oil have fallen by $1.50 a barrel to $28.80 a barrel, well below the official price of $30 a barrel.

Level

The level of reserves around the Rotterdam oil industry centre is at least 40 per cent above normal, with well over 90 per cent of capacity used up.

Countries seeking to unload more tankers in Europe include Saudi Arabia, which has built up its stocks in preparation for a killing on the market if the Gulf war affected oil supplies.

But the temporary increase in oil prices caused by worries over the Gulf war has been wiped out despite the continued threat to oil shipments from the Gulf.

Engineering and carworkers in IG Metall are continuing strike action in the Frankfurt area, while union leaders and employers are engaged in arbitration. Our picture shows trade unionists at the VDO engineering plant in Frankfurt on the picket line demanding the 35-hour week.

Genscher quits post

BONN — Liberal Free Democratic Party (FDP) leader and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher will step down as party leader by early next year.

Genscher, who said last month he would resign by 1986 and that he would not lead his party into another general election, was forced to announce his resignation after an FDP executive meeting.

The FDP executive, facing a revolt over coalition plans to introduce an amnesty for people who broke tax laws on party donations, apparently demanded an earlier resignation after they lost all seats in the European Parliament election last week.

Support grows for Uruguay strike

MONTEVIDEO — A one-day General Strike in Uruguay called for next Wednesday, June 27, has won the support of opposition parties.

The General Strike call is to demand the release of opposition leader Wilson Ferreira Aldunate, and demand a return to democratic rule.

At a joint meeting, the Blanco and Colorado parties, the civic union and the outlawed Leftist Broad Front backed the call for the strike, first made by a group of unions.

In a communique published in the press in defiance of a ban on news of demonstrations or anti-government protests, the parties urged Uruguayans to stay at home next Wednesday — the 11th anniversary of the coup which brought the military government to power.

Aldunate, the Blanco Party's presidential candidate in elections scheduled for November, was arrested last Saturday on his return from exile.

He faces trumped up charges of 'attacking the morale of the armed forces' and 'plotting against the constitution', which could carry a 30 year jail sentence.

In Chile, the Pinochet military dictatorship has renewed a state of emergency following a bomb attack in Santiago on the expiry day of the previous emergency powers order passed in March.

The government has blamed left-wing organisations, but no-one claimed responsibility for the explosion, which killed a train conductor and injured a passenger.

● The Chilean regime is reported to be supplying deadly cluster bombs to Iraq under a $35 million contract. Iraqi planes loaded with the first instalment of an order of 5,000 bombs left Santiago yesterday.

Mystery blast at Soviet port

WASHINGTON — The 'Washington Post' newspaper has reported a major explosion at the Soviet Barents Sea port of Severomorsk, near Murmansk on the Kolskij peninsula last month.

The 'Post', quoting intelligence sources, said the blast occurred at the ammunition dump in mid-May and was so powerful that intelligence agencies initially had suspected a nuclear explosion.

That suspicion had since been discounted but the blast may have destroyed between one-quarter and one-third of the Murmansk fleet's surface-to-air missile stockpile, the paper said.

'It did a hell of a lot of damage,' it quoted an official whose designation it did not reveal. The Pentagon had declined to comment on the explosion, Reuters newsagency said.

US analysts and private analysts have said the explosion was likely to have been due to an accident rather than sabotage.

Another unnamed US official was quoted as saying the explosion occurred in the wake of the biggest Soviet military exercise in the Atlantic Ocean, involving dozens of warships steaming around Norway's North Cape.

The official was reported to have said the exercises may have been the reason for stockpiling such a large quantity of munitions in one place.

'The losses they sustained would seem to have violated normal prudence in storing the weapons,' the 'Post' quoted him as saying.

He cited a 1980 explosion in which a US Titan missile went up, hurling an unexploded atomic warhead several hundred feet into a field.

The official said he doubted the Soviet northern fleet's fighting ability was seriously affected.

The northern fleet, one of four fleets in the Soviet Navy, consists of one aircraft carrier, 148 other surface warships, nearly 200 submarines and 425 warplanes, according to the latest US estimates.

'Morning Star' censors McLennan

BY ALEX MITCHELL

COMMUNIST Party general secretary Gordon McLennan has issued 'the strongest possible protest' against the decision by the 'Morning Star' management to sack two veteran writers — George Matthews, the paper's former editor, and science correspondent Bill Wainwright.

'The victimisation of long-standing party members who have given great service both to the party and the "Morning Star" because they support the party's executive committee, is intolerable,' McLennan said.

'This decision should be reversed immediately and the comrades reinstated in their positions.'

But his four-paragraph statement has been banned from publication in the 'Morning Star'. The business committee of the People's Press Printing Society said in a terse statement published in yesterday's 'Morning Star':

'We do not think that it would be fair to publish this statement as it would require to be accompanied by an explanation that could cause personal embarrassment to the individual concerned.'

Journalists at the 'Morning Star' found the reference to 'personal embarrassment' incomprehensible. They also said it was not clear whether the 'individual concerned' meant Matthews or Wainwright, both ex-members of the party's executive committee and party members of 40 years' standing.

Informed

Last week Wainwright, a former assistant editor of the 'Morning Star', was informed that because he had signed a statement supporting the executive committee of the Communist Party on relations between the party and the PPPS, his employment would be terminated.

On the same day Matthews, who for some years has contributed regular opera reviews, was informed that, apart from those already in the pipeline, no further contributions from him would be published because of his opposition to the management committee of the PPPS.

McLennan's press release said: 'There should be the strongest protest against the dismissal of Bill Wainwright from his position of science correspondent of the "Morning Star" and against the editor's decision that no further contributions from George Matthews, the paper's opera critic, should be published.'

'No criticism of the work or contribution of these two comrades has been made. Action has been taken against them because of their support for the position of the executive committee of the Communist Party on relations with the PPPS.'

'In its statement in the "Morning Star" on June 20 the PPPS business committee spoke of "conciliation and comradely dialogue". Once again the actions taken are in complete contradiction to the words.'

Although official Communist Party statements have been delayed and edited in the past, this is the first time that the general secretary has been banned altogether from the pages of the ailing Stalinist daily.

Since the annual general meeting of the PPPS two weeks ago relations between the party and the 'Morning Star' management have plunged to a bitter and acrimonious level.

The next meeting of the party's full executive committee on July 14 is expected to issue a call for a special meeting of PPPS shareholders in the autumn.

Petition

It is understood that under PPPS rules it requires 50 shareholders to petition for a special meeting. At such a meeting all 15 places on the management committee are thrown open to election.

But as the party executive slowly lumbers towards adopting its counter-attack, it can be confidently assumed the PPPS has already decided to reject it out of hand. On the best legal advice, of course!

Director Joseph Losey dies

AMERICAN film director, Joseph Losey, maker of more than 20 major post-war movies, died at his London home yesterday aged 75.

He had been ill for only a short time and had completed his latest film 'Steaming' — which will feature the late Diana Dors — just four weeks ago.

Losey, who was blacklisted and left America during the McCarthy era, will perhaps be best remembered for 'The Go-Between', which won the Golden Palm Best Film award at the 1971 Cannes Film Festival.

The director, who leaves a widow, Patricia, and two sons from an earlier marriage, was born in Wisconsin, and educated at Harvard University, before going straight into radio and theatre production.

He directed his first Broadway play at the age of 23 and subsequent stage productions included Bertholt Brecht's 'Galileo Galilei' with Charles Laughton in 1947, which was the first appearance of Brecht's play on the American stage.

Losey later defended

Brecht during the McCarthyite witch-hunts.

In the 1930s, Losey directed many plays, including 'The Living Newspaper' for a year under the New Deal in 1936 and a play about the Spanish Civil War called 'Who Fights This Battle?'

In 1935 he visited Moscow where he did a production of Clifford Odets' play 'Waiting for Lefty' and studied under Eisenstein.

Losey remained close to the Communist Party throughout this period, like so many other American artists.

But the hysterical McCarthyite 'anti-American' witch-hunts were just getting under way — and Losey soon found himself a victim.

In 1952, while in Europe after making 'The Big Night' with John Barrymore Junior, Losey was blacklisted without explanation.

After being refused any further work in the US, he came to Britain and made his home in Chelsea.

In 1972, Losey directed

JOSEPH LOSEY

'The Assassination of Leon Trotsky', with Richard Burton as Trotsky and French actor Alain Delon as the Stalinist assassin Ramon Mercader.

The film was a travesty of history and an apology for Stalinism. It was the subject of a campaign by the Socialist Labour League, forerunner of the Workers Revolutionary Party, to explain the truth about Trotsky's death.

INTERVIEW BY PENNY BLOOR

DAVID KITSON, released from a South African jail on May 11 after serving 19 years and seven months in jail for his activities with the African National Congress, spoke to News Line the day after he arrived in London. Kitson was reunited with his family on Tuesday at Heathrow. His ex-wife Norma, and children Amandla and Steven, have been in the forefront of a campaign here in Britain for his release.

Kitson was born 64 years ago in Cape Town of British-born parents. After the war he came to England and studied for an engineering career. He returned to South Africa in 1959 to join his wife and son and 'when the time came' volunteered to work with Umkhonto We Sizwe, the armed wing of the ANC.

He became a member of its high command after the arrest and imprisonment of many of its leaders at Rivonia in 1963. Kitson was arrested and detained on June 22 1964. First he spent 131 days in solitary confinement under the 90-day law, then was brought to trial on October 1 and sentenced to 20 years.

Kitson served 19 years and seven months and was released seven months early, days before the South African Prime Minister P W Botha came to Britain.

How did you become involved in the struggle against apartheid?

It's been a life-long thing — years of practice. I became active in politics when I was a student, 45 years ago roughly, and moved to the left because the South African Communist Party at the time was completely devoid of any racist attitudes.

There was a Labour Party in South Africa at the time but it was a party that represented the aristocracy of labour.

I was conscious of the injustice of racial discrimination. It was before the war, there was the fascist danger, large unemployment, everyone was looking for answers and a lot of people found answers by reading Marx, including me.

You said in your statement to the press that the struggle for national liberation continues to grow. Could you expand on this? What news of this were you getting while in jail?

I didn't hear very much about it when I was in prison. Usually what happened is some sort of explosion like widespread strikes by black workers in 1972, would filter through.

Of course there were the Soweto riots which impinged on us.

About 18 months ago, again, things started to take a new turn which I wasn't conscious of inside prison. But when I got out, friends of mine took me round and explained the situation to me.

Roused

They've started new constitutional discussions to try and include Indians and South African coloureds in the constitution. This has roused a lot of opposition because Africans are left out completely.

There are various activities going on in South Africa. Perhaps the two main ones are the activities of the Release Mandela committees, of which there are many, and the activities of the United Democratic Front which has launched a campaign to collect signatures in South Africa in opposition to the new constitution.

Writing on the wall for Botha regime — says DAVID KITSON

David Kitson with his family after his arrival in Britain last Wednesday morning

They are having meetings all over the place and more and more organisations are joining the UDF. It's opposing the constitution and espousing the Freedom Charter drawn up by the ANC and it's winning a lot of support all over.

All sorts of organisations are discussing whether they should now adopt the Freedom Charter.

At the same time there is a lot of trade union activity in South Africa. Some of the trade unions feel that in the South African circumstances the trade union struggles that are usual for this country — dealing with betterment of conditions under the system — are not enough. They are denied political expression and they must give political expression to the trade union movement.

At the moment in Atteridgeville, the African township associated with Pretoria, 6,000 schoolkids are on strike. This is because the schools offer a curriculum which is designed to teach Africans to keep their place.

What is the role of British workers and trade unionists in the fight against apartheid?

The fact is that I am a member of a British trade union. I know that my own union, (AUEW/TASS), has always been conscious of the fact that the lot of British workers is bound up with people living in areas where British imperialism holds sway.

British trade unions are involved with the lot of workers in places in particular such as South Africa because of the investment there and the large trade between Britain and South Africa. There is £11 billion invested by British companies in South Africa.

You said in your statement to the press that oppression will never be reformed away. What kind of fight is necessary? How is the struggle to develop in South Africa?

It is developing along two fronts — firstly the armed struggle of the ANC — which in a way is the catalyst that has impelled the Botha regime to try and engage in reform because they could see the writing on the wall, although they want to get away with as little as possible.

On the other hand there is growing mass action against apartheid amongst all sorts of people, in particular African people in the cities.

Forces

Apartheid has to be overcome basically because of forces internal to South Africa.

I think they have to be forced into change.

At the moment South Africa is trying to put on a pleasant face. My release is an example. I was released unconditionally. A few years ago people who were released were banned and listed and their movement circumscribed.

Did you know about the non stop 86-day picket in 1982 outside the South African embassy to demand your removal to another prison?

Yes because from 1980 on we were allowed to receive newspapers.

Moved

It received quite a lot of attention in the South African press and in fact after we moved, one of the officials told us that the activity had hastened the move a lot. It must have driven them mad.

And of course, it encouraged us greatly. We, of course, also campaigned to be moved.

You have probably heard about the attempts by the police to ban the regular continued Friday pickets outside South Africa House being carried out by the City Anti Apartheid group. Do you think there is a connection with Botha's visit?

I should imagine he tried to get Thatcher to agree that the ANC should be stamped out in this country, and certainly they find these pickets a great embarrassment.

We have heard that the South African ambassador has implored people to get it stopped, so I suppose Botha did the same.

Call from AMA

LOCAL authorities should now work together to find ways of limiting the damage that could be done by the Rates Bill, Cllr Jack Layden chairman of the Association of Metropolitan Authorities, (AMA) told the full Association at its meeting this week.

The Rates Bill, to which the Association has been implacably opposed, has completed its House of Lords stage and is now due to go back to the House of Commons for Lords' amendments to be considered, he said.

The Rates Bill will be law by July and Layden called for the AMA to 'give a lead to member authorities in what I might call a damage-limitation exercise'.

native Fife in Scotland in a short procession from his home in Low Cross Court in Knottingley to the nearby Kellingley social club.

They then joined the thousands of miners who had gathered with banners fluttering in the strong wind in Pontefract Park for the march to the crematorium.

Respects

Thousands of people lined the streets of the mining town or stood at their windows to pay their respects to Green and demonstrate also that they stood four-square behind the struggle which he gave his life to.

Old women wept openly as the giant procession snaked its way slowly through the town centre led by a colliery band.

Scargill was at the head of the first group of mourners which included national and local NUM officials, Labour councillors and MPs.

Behind came the huge contingent from Kellingley pit, carrying the branch banner draped in black as a mark of respect to Green who had worked there for nearly 20 years.

Then came a large contingent from the Scottish coalfield, including miners from Blairhall where Green worked until the local colliery was closed down.

Walking with them was Betty Cardwell, who knew Joe Green for 36 years both while he lived in Scotland and after he was forced to travel to Yorkshire in search of work.

She told News Line: 'Joe lived for the union and was a tremendous fighter. He would never give up. And he would have been proud to know that Arthur Scargill was leading such a procession as this at his funeral.'

Stalwart

Kellingley NUM delegate Howard Wadsworth described Green as a 'stalwart' of the picket line and revealed that he should never have been there because his arm had been crushed in a pit accident.

But that had not deterred the indefatigable Green. 'He was there because he knew what pit closures were all about,' said Wadsworth.

Pontefract and Castleford Labour MP Geoffrey Lofthouse, a former NCB manpower officer, recalled recruiting Green after the closure of Blairhall colliery.

Green was on the picket line because he remembered well the problems of 'uprooting oneself for jobs in other areas', said Lofthouse, who placed responsibility for the violent clashes during the strike squarely on the Thatcher government.

As the mass of mourners, stretched across the road, reached the entrance to the crematorium, they halted for a moment. Green's stepbrothers, Bernard and George

Carr, stepped forward and, together with Kellingley branch officials, guided the coffin up the narrow pathway to the accompaniment once again of a lone piper.

Tributes

During the short service the miners stood in respectful silence. Some looked at the many floral tributes, including one from the Jones family, with the simple message 'You'll never be forgotten'.

Other wreaths were from relatives, close friends, NUM branches and other local trade unionists — each one a fitting tribute to the stalwart of the picket line who gave his life for his union.

WORKERS REVOLUTIONARY PARTY POLICY, LECTURES AND MEETINGS - JOIN UP NOW

The case for Community Councils

EVERY trade unionist and worker must come to the aid of the miners in their struggle for jobs against the capitalist state, the Thatcher dictatorship and the National Coal Board.

The working class as a whole and their professional allies must share the burdens and sacrifices of the fight which the miners are waging in defence of the most basic of rights — the right to work and to organise freely in trade unions independent of the state.

Trade union branches, shop stewards' committees, trades councils and other labour movement organisations must take the initiative now in the setting up of Community Councils which will act immediately to meet the needs of the miners.

Thatcher and the state are out to smash up pit communities, driving families into destitution and starving the miners back to work. Their aim is not only to destroy the miners' union, but all trade unions.

Miners are, therefore, fighting on behalf of the whole working class. They cannot be left to shoulder the burdens of the strike alone. All workers must ensure that the miners can continue the struggle under the best conditions, and that a common front is presented to the class enemy.

As well as the trade unions, the Community Councils must draw in representatives of every section of the working class and their middle-class and professional allies involved in the anti-Tory fight — miners' wives, youth groups, voluntary organisations and local Labour councils.

At the very same time the Tories are attacking the miners, they are also establishing a central government dictatorship over local Labour councils, threatening cities like Liverpool with financial destruction and abolishing seven authorities covering the major industrial areas of England. Community Councils will take responsibility for the defence of local councils, jobs and services.

There are immediate and practical tasks which flow from the defiant resistance of the miners to the provocations of the NCB, an unprecedented military-style police operation directed by the Home Office through Scotland Yard and the organised harassment by social security, gas and electricity bureaucrats.

The Workers Revolutionary Party believes that the tasks of Community Councils, which should extend beyond mining districts, will be to:

- Provide food for families and children of those on strike. No miner to be starved back to work by the Tories.

- Pay urgent bills for electricity and gas, calling on workers not to carry out cut-offs as an act of solidarity with the strike. Raise funds for new clothing and footwear for strikers.

- Ensure that no miner is evicted by local councils for not being able to pay rent or rates. Make certain that medical supplies are paid for so that miners and their families can get the treatment prescribed.

- Arrange for the care of the elderly dependent on support from miners' families, ensure nursery provision so that miners' wives can participate fully in winning support for the strike.

- Organise the provision of free legal representation for miners who need it. Provide accommodation for miners from other areas.

- Watch out for and organise against provocateurs. Organise the defence of union offices and funds from state attacks.

- Rally other workers to support and back up miners' pickets and organise marches and rallies.

LABOUR COUNCILS must be asked to:

- Provide free school meals and transport for miners' children.

- Make office accommodation in council offices available to miners, with facilities for printing and communications.

- Make sure that no evictions take place because of mounting debts. Wipe out rent and rate arrears.

- Provide free public transport for strikers and their families. Make all council facilities available free to miners. Lay on entertainments and outings for miners' families.

- Resist having to foot the bill for the cost of the Downing Street directed police operation against the miners' union.

This is the best way to answer the challenge of the capitalist state, and the Tory dictatorship. Community Councils — as Soviet-type organisations — will give the working class confidence in its own independent strength to defeat the class enemy and provide the basis for the successful struggle for power which has now been joined.

Winning Post

The Miller to grind opposition

TOM Jones has an impeccably bred bunch of two-year olds just starting to show their form, and his Sulaafah (2.00) can win the Erroll Stakes at ASCOT today.

This son of Riverman, who cost 200,000 guineas as a yearling, showed plenty of promise on his debut when finishing third to Great Reef at Doncaster.

Sulaafah seems sure to have improved, and should be capable of beating his owner's other runner, Al-Yabir.

Geoff Lewis's improved

three-year-old, Dealaway, seeks to win his fourth race off the reel in the Churchill Stakes but may not be able to contend with Irish challenger The Miller (3.35).

The old combination of Lester Piggott and Vincent O'Brien have already had one winner this week and they can triumph again.

At AYR, Mark Usher's course specialist Portogon bids to repeat his success of last season in the Long John Scotch Whisky Handicap, but the grey may have trouble conceding 16lbs to Singing High (2.30).

Jimmy Fitzgerald's four-year old looked as though she was approaching peak form when fifth behind Bare Essence at York last week.

She has taken a considerable drop in the weights this season and ought to be good enough in this £8,000 added event.

Humberside Lady (2.00) may continue Geoff Huffer's recent fine form by landing the Scottish Farm Dairyfoods Handicap. The three-year old has gone from strength to strength this season after winning a Thirsk 'seller' in April, and scored at Leicester last weekend.

Estoc, wearing blinkers for the first time, looks a big danger, but Humberside Lady could win again.

Greemont (1.30) and George Duffield may beat Smiler in the Roman Warrior Shield while Spaced to Run (4.00) will be hard to catch in the Longhill Maiden Stakes.

Watch Tower (2.15), worst drawn at number one in the six-furlong Philip Cornes Nickel Alloys Stakes qualifier at REDCAR has the class to overcome this handicap and beat 23 rivals.

Michael Stoute's colt made a promising debut behind Old Bailey, Lobbit and Coincidental at Kempton earlier in the month and if he turns out to be half as good as the winner, will win races.

Higham Grey may find the concession of 31lb to Megiddo (3.45) too tall an order in the Staithes Handicap.

Silent Sun (7.35) who failed by a length and a half to concede 3lb to the subsequent Ribblesdale Stakes

Porto men look to stop France

BY A SPORTS LINE
CORRESPONDENT

PORTUGUESE trainer Fernando Cabrita is hoping that club side Porto's success against French star Michel Platini last month can be repeated in today's Marseilles semi-final.

The winners of today's match will play either Spain or Denmark, who clash in the second semi-final in Lyons tomorrow, in the European Championship final in Paris next Wednesday.

So far the tournament has been dominated by the name of one man — Platini. But Cabrita believes that Portuguese club side Porto demonstrated that Platini need not necessarily be a match winner in last month's European Cup Winners' Cup final in Basle.

Although Juventus, including Platini, won that match 2-1, Cabrita considered the Frenchman's contribution limited.

'Porto showed in the Cup Winners' Cup final against Juventus that Platini can be shut out of a match,' Cabrita said. 'And when you stop Platini, your own chances rise automatically.'

With Portugal's defence largely composed of Porto players, it promises to be an intriguing contest despite most of the world viewing the game as a one-sided contest.

French manager Michel Hidalgo, too, acknowledged the effectiveness of the Portuguese defence when asked whether France were looking forward to an easy match today.

'Whoever maintains that has no idea what he is talking about,' Hidalgo said. 'Above all the Portuguese defence has been completely restructured.'

'The Portuguese have already shown what excellent football they can play. It will certainly be our most difficult game,' Hidalgo concluded.

France (probable): Joel Bats, Patrick Battiston, Maxime Bossis, Yvon Le Roux, Jean-Francois Domergue, Jean Tigana, Alain Giresse, Michel Platini, Luis Fernandez, Jean-Marc Ferreri and Didier Six.

Portugal (probable): Manuel Bento, Joao Pinto, Eurico Gomes, Lima Pereira, Alvaro

Magalhaes, Antonio Frasco, Manuel Diamantino, Antonio Sousa, Fernando Chalana, Rui Jordao and Fernando Gomes.

● LIKE France, Denmark are widely regarded as firm favourites to beat Spain in Lyons tomorrow. But like Hidalgo, Danish trainer Sepp Piontek is also taking a cautious line.

'Spain have not been given the credit they deserve,' said Piontek. 'They are always technically sound but they have also played good football in France and showed they had a lot of character against West Germany.'

Spain, under the guidance of the wily Miguel Manoz — who led Real Madrid to their memorable European Cup triumph in 1960 — came through their group unbeaten with draws against Portugal and Rumania and that dramatic triumph over the West Germans.

Denmark (probable): Ole Qvist, Ole Rasmussen, Morten Olsen, Ivan Nielsen, Soren Busk, Frank Arnesen, Jens-Jorn Bertelsen, Klaus Berggreen, Soren Lerby, Michael Laudrup and Preben Elkjaer.

Spain (probable): Luis Arconada, Jose-Antonio Senor, Andoni Goikoetxea, Antonio Maceda, Jose Camacho, Victor Munoz, Ricardo Gallego, Julio Alberto, Rafael Gordillo, Carlos Santillana and Francisco Carrasco.

LUIS ARCONADA . . . Spain's veteran goalkeeper will hope to have as good a game against the Danes tomorrow as he did against West Germany in midweek

VIVE PLATINISSIMO

MICHEL Platini celebrated his 29th birthday on Thursday and nobody need be surprised if the French maestro coaxes the ball into singing 'Happy Birthday to You' to celebrate the occasion in the European Championship semi-final against Portugal in Marseilles today.

The soccer sorcerer has pulled off just about every other trick, beguiling opponents and enchanting fans with his skills and prompting the invention of a new word — 'Platinissimo' — to express the range of his virtuosity.

The two hat-tricks he has scored in the European finals — in the wins over Belgium and Yugoslavia — have underscored this range, the player using his left foot, right foot and head to claim the goals on each occasion.

Platini, who established his world class in Italian exile, has returned to France in triumph and is within two matches of leading them to their first major soccer trophy. Portugal are the semifinal obstacle.

'When you have a Platini in your side, everything seems simpler,' French coach Michel Hidalgo told the sports daily 'L'Equipe'.

'With him I become a spectator and he makes me live magical moments. He seems to play with remote control. Even his feet are intelligent.'

This has been a golden season for the rangy 29-year-old midfielder. He helped Juventus win the European Cup Winners' Cup and the Italian League and has become the first French European Footballer of the Year in a quarter of a century.

Goals

During this tournament he has celebrated his 50th appearance for France and become the nation's leading marksman of all time, his 33 goals taking him well past the tally of 1958 World Cup hero Just Fontaine.

A Brazilian magazine named him 'best current footballer on the planet' — testimony to his powers as an all-round player, a creator as well as scorer of goals.

In French terms he links the invention of Raymond Kopa — the 1958 European footballer of the year, and triple European Cup champion

He played in the 1978 and 1982 World Cups but reckons he was too young to make a great impact in the first and was hampered by injury in the second.

Now the boy, who earned his accuracy with with Real Madrid — and the shooting power of Fontaine.

Platini allies the technical skills of ball control, distribution and marksmanship with fine positional sense, timing, anticipation and an uncanny eye for a half-chance.

His two seasons in Italy, in each of which he has been the league's top marksman, have added an element of toughness to his game, exemplified by the sliding tackles which underline his assumption of defensive responsibilities.

It has also brought home to him the Italian soccer philosophy that victory is what counts above all — an approach opposed to the emphasis on playing with style and flair which is at the heart of Hidalgo's creed.

Platini scored on his international debut in March 1976 — a 2-2 draw against Czechoslovakia, which was also Hidalgo's first match in charge of the side.

freekicks — such as the one which beat the Yugoslav defence this week — by threading shots past dummies set up by his ex-footballer father, is a player at the height of his powers with few, if any, peers.

While Karl-Heinz Rummenigge, a predecessor as European Footballer of the Year, gloomily surveyed the wreckage of West Germany's European ambitions, Platini contemplated new peaks.

Yet Platini might never have graced the stadiums of the world. As a teenager he was rejected by French First Division Metz after a lung test disclosed 'very feeble respiratory capacity (and) cardiac insufficiency'.

Others, however, were more far-sighted. Platini helped his first club, Nancy, win the French cup and later gained a League championship medal with St Etienne.

After the World Cup in Spain, he set out for Italy, seeking a new challenge and a fortune in the land his impoverished ancestors had left in the hope of a better chance in industrial eastern France.

France can be hard on its sporting heroes, and Platini's detractors accused him of being distant and arrogant before he moved to Italy.

Platini himself stresses the role of his teammates. 'If I score goals it's because they give me good balls,' he said after his second three-goal coup this week.

He is also reluctant to overestimate his abilities. 'I don't have and never will have the physical qualities of (Dutch star Johan) Cruyff and (Argentinian Diego) Maradona, and the god Pele cannot be equalled. One shouldn't even dream of it,' he told an interviewer before the championship.

But his team-mates are full of admiration. Goalkeeper Joel Bats said Platini seemed to be 'blessed by the gods'. Defender Luis Fernandez told 'L'Equipe': 'We are just as happy to play alongside Platini as those who played with Pele and Cruyff.'

Analyse

Platini's self-assessment? 'I see fast and I see accurately. I analyse the whole situation. I have the chance most often of choosing the right solution and having the skill to apply it. I have a very good right foot, and a good little left foot and I'm not bad with my head either. I can defend too.'

Platini, father of two, plans to play in the United States when his contract with Juventus runs out in two years.

Concerning young players, he says: 'Today they want to be professional footballers. Me — I just wanted to play. I wasn't after anything. I let myself be carried by a wave.'

GOAL-HUNGRY PLATINI . . . Most observers believe that France's 'new' competitiveness arose with Platini's lessons from Juventus

JOHANN CRUYFF

Coe faces stiff test from Elliott

SEBASTIAN Coe is fit for his showdown with Peter Elliott at the AAA championships to decide who grabs the final Olympic 1500-metres place.

Coe has been having twice-daily treatment for a right thigh strain which kept him out of his own meeting at Loughborough last weekend.

Although he is still having physiotherapy, Coe has been able to train normally this week and is in good shape for tomorrow's confrontation at Crystal Palace.

He said: 'I finally decided to run because I need a race right now. I need some hard competition but I'm bound to feel cautious.'

'I want the chance to prove I should be chosen for the event I won in Moscow four years ago,' he added.

Both Coe and Elliott have already been selected for 800 metres in Los Angeles and are making a determined bid for an Olympic middle-distance double.

Elliott, fourth in last year's world championship 800 metres, feels he is ready to join Steve Cram and Steve Ovett in the 1500 metres, but Coe still looks the better medal prospect now that he has fully recovered from last summer's glandular illness.

Graham Williamson, who lost out to Cram four years ago in a similar head-to-head clash, also makes a late challenge but the 24-year-old Scot is battling for fitness after recent injuries and looks set once again to play a supporting role.

The Olympic selectors meet at the end of the championships, but there is a possibility that some places may be left open until the July 14 deadline.

Cram, the world 1500-metres champion, uses the 800 metres as part of his preparation, but will not be given an easy ride.

The 23-year-old Geordie tackles 1976 double Olympic champion Alberto Juantorena from Cuba — he ran 1 min 44.88 secs in Florence last week — and James Mays, who was knocked out in the heats of the American trials this week despite running 1 min 45.2 secs.

Cram, who has led the world rankings over two laps since 1982, also expects a tremendous battle from the other British runners.

Gary Cook, Rob Harrison and Chris McGeorge know a fast time could be good enough to claim the final 800-metres place — because Cram does not want to double up with the 1500 metres.

Olympic champion Ovett has already staked his claim with two wins at the distance this week and will be watching on the sidelines tomorrow.

Other interesting clashes come in the sprints where Mike McFarlane, winner of the 100-metres trial, will be going for a place in the 200 metres.

Cameron Sharp, the European silver medalist, makes his first appearance since recovering from a back injury and runs in both sprints.

Kathy defeats Lloyd to put record straight

JORDAN DOES IT AGAIN

KATHY JORDAN proved here at Eastbourne yesterday that her victory over the world No.2 player Chris Evert Lloyd at Wimbledon last year was no fluke.

Jordan, the No.4 seed, defeated her American compatriot Evert Lloyd, seeded No.2, 6-2, 6-4, to reach the final of the £125,000 Carlsberg Women's tennis championships.

She will meet the world's No.1 player Martina Navratilova in today's decider.

Navratilova won a wonderful three-set match against West Germany's Claudia Kohde, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4.

After a week of perfect conditions in which to play tennis, centre court at Devonshire Park yesterday was cursed by swirling winds which should have made it nigh on impossible for the players to reach any great heights.

But both semifinals yesterday were filled with fine, skilful tennis.

For a while, in the afternoon, it seemed that Kohde, the lanky West German 20-year old, just might pull off the shock of the week.

Pressurise

'Serve and volleying magnificently and then coming into net to pressurise her illustrious opponent at every opportunity, Kohde rushed into a 3-1 third-set lead.

'That's when I thought I might have won the match, but I didn't have any luck after that,' the West German said afterwards. 'I had no set game plan going into the match.

'I just knew I had to get my serve in and then get on top of the net as soon as possible. I knew that Martina could not pass me every time.'

Indeed, at 4-2, Kohde had a break point on Navratilova's serve, but unluckily the wind carried her drop shot out of court.

'If I had lost that one then I could have still

Matthew Nugent reports from Eastbourne held my head up high,' Navratilova was to say afterwards.

'Considering the conditions, I think we both played some very good tennis. Of course, the wind didn't help, but it was the same for both of us out there today.'

For Jordan, yesterday's result certainly proved a point.

'When I beat Chris at Wimbledon last year a lot of people thought it was a flash in the pan,' Jordan said. 'I didn't get the credit for it, but I haven't really looked back since then.'

Jordan is looking forward to her tussle with Navratilova — a player she has never beaten in her previous ten meetings.

'Many people believe that I'll be going into tomorrow's match at a big disadvantage,' Jordan said.

'That would be the wrong attitude for me to adopt. I'm going in there tomorrow, not thinking that I can win just one set, but possibly the match.

KATHY JORDAN . . . Thrashed Chris Evert Lloyd at Eastbourne yesterday

'If you go into a match with Martina with that kind of defeatist attitude, then you will always lose out.'

Yesterday, Jordan certainly had the right attitude when she faced Evert Lloyd. She played with confidence throughout and admitted later that even when she was well ahead in the second set — she took a 3-0 lead — the pressure of another possible victory over the world's No.2 never got to her.

For Lloyd, with Wimbledon just over the horizon, the future, at this point anyway, looks a little blurred. She never played with any kind of authority and now, maybe, the only serious challenge to Navratilova's supremacy at Wimbledon will come from the younger set like Jordan.

This afternoon could be a real pointer.

Lords Test set for new faces

WHOLESALE changes are unlikely when the England selectors name their team this weekend for the second Test against the West Indies starting at Lord's next Thursday.

Despite the innings and 180-run defeat at Edgbaston, Peter May's panel don't seem likely to panic and few changes are expected.

However, England must find an opener to replace the injured Andy Lloyd, who only left hospital yesterday.

And although Chris Smith, out of favour since returning from New Zealand and Pakistan, is back in form with two half-centuries in the past week, Yorkshire's Martyn Moxon is tipped to get the job.

The 24-year old from Barnsley made a stylish 50 under pressure in the Benson and Hedges semifinal against Warwickshire on Thursday, watched by selectors Alan Smith and Phil Sharpe.

But if England wish to avoid exposing Moxon at this stage, then Chris Broad of Nottinghamshire and Wilf Slack of Middlesex, both prominent in the averages, are possible candidates.

NORMAN COWANS . . . Back to his best and hoping to deliver for England if selected

With England unlikely to field two new openers, Graeme Fowler, still short of runs, lacks nothing in courage and should be retained.

There should be a shake-up in England's fickle middle-order this time as Derek Randall looked totally at sea when promoted to third man at Birmingham.

However, it would be a travesty if the Notts favourite is dropped after his better-than-average efforts during the winter tour, so a place should be found for him down the order.

The prime candidate to go is Allan Lamb, who has scored only one half-century for England in his last 11 Test innings, with eight scores of 20 or under.

He has had an unbroken run in the side since his debut in 1982 but should be replaced by Hampshire's in-form Mark Nicholas, who has been under close scrutiny since making an unbeaten 76 for the MCC against champions Essex at Lord's in the season's opening game.

The attack should remain basically the same with an extra seamer replacing Nick Cook to take every possible advantage of the sometimes evident Lord's ridge.

Neil Foster, 12th man in the first Test, isn't taking wickets at the moment but he could win a last-gasp reprieve if Essex take the field (and wickets) against the West Indies at Chelmsford this morning.

There is a strong case for recalling Lancashire's Paul Allott, who hasn't been summoned since last year's World Cup. He is fourth in the averages with 41 wickets.

To complete the 12, Norman Cowans, now back in fine form for Middlesex, would give England the option of his extra pace.

To sum up, that would make the possible England line-up something like this: Graeme Fowler, Martyn Moxon, Mark Nicholas, David Gower, Ian Botham, Derek Randall, Paul Downton, Geoff Miller, Derek Pringle, Paul Allott, Bob Willis and Norman Cowans.

MARK NICHOLAS . . . Worthy of Test call-up for England this weekend
