Two-pronged attack from ACAS and judiciary NEW PLANS TO DEFEAT MINERS

A VICIOUS two-pronged attack has been launched to break the seven-month-old miners' strike. Threatening the strike from one side is the Tory Bonapartist state and its judiciary, while on the other it is the ACAS trap laid by the Labour and TUC leaders.

And despite their pledges of support at the TUC Congress in Brighton just four weeks ago, leaders of nine power supply unions yesterday failed to agree on a response to the miners' appeal for support.

The right-wing leaders of the electricians' union and the power engineers' association were later accused of thwarting attempts to put a squeeze on power stations.

● THE JUDICIARY: Yesterday the High Court in London ruled that the Yorkshire and Derbyshire area strikes are illegal. The class-war verdict applies to the strike nationally as well.

Banned

In two separate judgements, Mr Justice Nicholls outlawed the strikes in both areas, ordered Yorkshire NUM to hold elections of branch officials, banned the same area from implementing new disciplinary procedures, and declared that the NUM instruction to Derbyshire miners to strike and not to cross picket lines is also unlawful.

In his sweeping political verdict, Nicholls said the miners' union was acting illegally because it had not held a national strike ballot.

The law requiring compulsory secret ballots only came into force three days ago when Part II of the Trade Union Act 1984 became effective. But Judge Nicholls is seeking to impose it retrospectively on the NUM whose strike began 29 weeks ago.

Yesterday's unprecedented judgements illegalising the strike represent the most dangerous move yet made by Thatcher's Bonapartist dictatorship to smash the NUM as an independent trade union.

It gives blanket powers to the national paramilitary police to use any amount of violence to crush miners' pickets and it paves the way for legal actions for colossal damages against the NUM to bankrupt it.

● ACAS: The 'conciliation' machinery is a built-in institution of the Bonapartist state. It is an instrument of the state and as such it is no more 'independent' than the High Court.

Cabal

Behind the pressure on the NUM to go to ACAS is the TUC right wing. And in the midst of this cabal resides the ultra-right-wing leadership of the EETPU, who have decided to comply with the Tory anti-union laws lock, stock and barrel.

They are ably assisted by the Stalinists and muddle-headed 'lefts' who are frightened to death of the revolutionary implications of the miners' strike.

All sides are using the vote in support of the miners at the Brighton TUC Congress as a licence to pressure the NUM into negotiations. ACAS is the trap selected to bring the maximum pressure to bear on the leadership of the NUM for an outright Tory victory.

Thatcher called for just such a victory when she spoke to an audience of policemen in Yorkshire earlier this week.

The miners' strike has become a political confrontation between the NUM and the Tory Bonapartist government which represents the state machine and its judiciary.

After seven months of 'solidarity with the miners' — no matter what the good intentions behind the call — it is not enough. It has a hollow ring, and many miners are getting fed up with the 'solidarity' speeches from the TUC leaders but downright treachery taking place on the sidelines.

Failure

This was underlined by the failure of yesterday's meeting of nine power unions to reach agreement on implementing the TUC Congress policy of supporting the miners.

The obstructionist course adopted by the right-wing EETPU and power engineers' association was expected.

But this appears to have been used by other unions to remain neutral or worse, do nothing.

Following yesterday's legal verdicts imposed by the state against the NUM, it is clearer than ever that the strike can only be won through the organisation of a General Strike.

This means that all those unions which say they are in 'solidarity with the miners' must come out on strike with the miners. The evasions must stop.

The campaign to organise the General Strike is part and parcel of the organisation of the struggle for workers' power, the only guarantee of the defence of trade unionism and basic democratic rights.

The miners must win — Organise the General Strike!

KITCHEN CLOSED AT HOSPITAL

THE KITCHEN of the Stanley Royd psychiatric hospital, which was hit by a mystery outbreak of food poisoning, was closed yesterday after salmonella organisms were found in the drains.

A total of 28 patients died during the outbreak last month at the Wakefield hospital.

Measure

Area health administrator Alun Pritchard said yesterday: 'It has been decided as a further precautionary measure to deep clean the main kitchen area in Stanley Royd hospital following the discovery of traces of salmonella in the kitchen drainage system.'

'The kitchen was closed down today and will remain closed for three days, opening next Monday, for the cleaning operation to take place using a high-pressure steam process.'

'Cuts spread food poisoning'

WORRIES are growing about the spread of salmonella poisoning among patients and staff at Rainhill psychiatric hospital at Prescot on Merseyside.

Yesterday a further staff member was told to stay away from work when traces of the infection were found.

Six people are now in isolation and a further seven are being investigated, although NUPE publicity officer Geoff Finney said yesterday that there were some difficulties finding the exact number involved.

'The position is still being monitored' he said: 'We are trying as much as possible to keep a careful

He said there were no other case of food poisoning at the 1,000-bed hospital.

During the outbreak, more than 300 patients and staff showed symptoms of salmonella-type food poisoning.

Officials believe the organism was carried into the wards by infected roast beef used as part of a salad tea, but the source of the infection had them baffled.

■EIGHT cases of mild salmonella poisoning were confirmed at the Carlton Hayes psychiatric hospital at Narborough, near Leicester, yesterday among elderly patients.

■A CARDIFF hospital yesterday reported a 92-year-old woman was 'very seriously ill' after an outbreak of salmonella poisoning. Four other patients at Whitchurch psychiatric hospital are suspected of having the illness.

eye on things in order to stem the infection.

'Unfortunately, we have members who have been told to stay away from work because tests show the presence of salmonella in their faeces.'

'We try to co-operate, but we must point out that conditions at this hospital are very bad despite the efforts of the staff.'

'Due to the policies of the government, mental hospitals have had their funds cut.'

'We have not got the numbers of staff that we need and the environment that we are working in is deteriorating.'

'We point directly at the effects of the government's health policy.'

LOTHIAN NHS PLEDGE

A PLEDGE by the Lothian health board in Scotland to maintain in-house services has been hailed as major boost for the fight against privatisation in the NHS by Scottish area official of NUPE John Lambie. He said the board should be congratulated for 'not acquiescing to political pressures. 'This decision establishes a platform for the whole campaign against privatisation in the NHS in Scotland,' he added.

£8,000 Monthly Fund

Final weekend for September Fund!

THIS weekend is decisive for completing the £8,000 target for September's fund. It needs a mammoth effort to do it as we only have received £2,524.40 so far. Please pull out all stops and rush in every amount you can.

Action by the police against miners' picket lines have been more brutal than ever. The Tories have intensified their use of the police and the law courts in order to make every effort to intimidate and break the resistance of the miners.

But the only reaction is to strengthen the determination of the workers to fight back. This is a battle to the end.

The News Line speaks out clearly that now is the time to mobilise the whole of the working class and organise the General Strike to defeat Thatcher once and for all. It is for this reason we ask you to put all your support behind our paper.

Go all-out immediately and raise every donation you can to help complete our September fund this weekend. Post it to: The News Line September Appeal Fund 21B Old Town, Clapham, SW4 0JT

Two important meetings

Big power support

JOHN LYONS, . . . electricity power engineers' leader, who is accused of thwarting the TUC Congress backing of the miners

LEADERS of the electricians' union and the electricity power engineers were accused yesterday of preventing a joint agreement among power unions to back the miners.

After a two-and-a-half hour meeting in London the nine unions issued a statement regretting that they had been unable to reach a joint decision on the NUM request.

National officials of two of the biggest unions in the industry — the transport union and the general and municipal workers — said their members would still be urged to support the TUC resolution backing the miners which calls for a ban on the movement of coal and oil and the use of imported coal.

BY SIMON VEVERS

Fred Howell, of the transport union, claimed that his members had not handled new supplies or transferred stocks at power stations since the end of March.

Agreement

He said: 'I believe that we would have got a joint agreement if the electricians and the power engineers had been willing to support the TUC General Council's statement of support for the miners.'

'It is a disappointment that we haven't got a united decision. But the TUC decision is quite clear and our union is backing the miners.'

Howell said the T&GWU would now try to halt the movement of oil, which is being used in ever-increasing amounts to try and break the NUM strike.

Frank Cottam, of the GMBATU, said he would be reporting back to his executive which would decide what to do next.

AUEW official Ken Cure said he would do the same and added that the union's executive would probably call a delegate conference of engineering union members in the power industry.

Right-wing leader of the electricity power engineers John Lyons and Fred Franks of the electricians' union both attacked the TUC resolution, claiming that it was 'imposed from outside'.

Divisions

Lyons said there were divisions among the unions because of 'the imposition on them from outside of instructions that are clearly repugnant to workers in the electricity supply industry'.

Although his attack on the NUM at the TUC Congress in Brighton was roundly condemned, he claimed that he was speaking for the majority of power workers.

Franks launched a tirade against both the NUM and the TUC to try and justify the union leadership's stab-in-the-back to the miners.

He said: 'We are not going to be used to discipline the Notts miners. I don't think the ordinary members wish to get involved in this dispute.'

'We are not going to have our industry organised by an outside body.'

BAILIFFS DUE AT MERSEY YARD

BILLY ALBERTINA, leader of the occupation committee, addressing a meeting at the Cammell Laird shipyard, Birkenhead, where bailiffs are expected this weekend

LEADERS of 17 unions in the Confederation of Shipbuilding and Engineering Unions will meet next week to discuss the sit-in at Merseyside's Cammell Laird shipyard, where 40 men face going to jail.

The talks have been called by the General Municipal and Boilermakers and Allied Trade Union.

At midnight tomorrow, bailiffs are expected to enforce an eviction order on the 40 workers occupying a gas accommodation rig and a destroyer following Wednesday's ruling by Mr Justice Glidwell that the men will be jailed for a month for contempt if they do not move by then.

Liverpool district Labour Party has condemned the threat to imprison the workers and called for a mass picket from Monday.

Action

The meeting also called for industrial action to be called by 'leading bodies' and demonstrations of support for the workers if they are sent to jail.

Liverpool Labour Party district president Tony Mulhearn said last night: 'In the event of any member of the Cammell Laird sit-in being arrested, we would be calling for the trade union movement to organise industrial action in support of that worker to seek his release.'

'If the city came to a halt that would be ideal from our point of view as it would bring maximum pressure to bear.'

Michael Murden, the company's managing director, was told by Tory Defence Secretary Michael Heseltine that the yard was not being considered for £1.5 million of sub-contract steel work — because of the sit-in.

Murden placed a two-page advertisement in two local papers reiterating Heseltine's attack on the occupation, even though other orders were lost before the men occupied in defence of their jobs.

Fines for hit and run man

A HIT-AND-RUN driver who dumped a little girl's body in a field was fined a total of £500 yesterday and banned for three years.

Unemployed Allan Lock, who has never passed a driving test, said he expected to be jailed and was surprised at the leniency of the sentence.

Mrs Agnes Brown, a gypsy, was seriously injured when Lock's car crashed into her as she was walking along the road with her two-year-old baby, Mary, in her arms. The child died of her injuries.

Lock could have been fined up to £8,000 and sent to jail for six months.

Mrs Brown, who was in court with her husband, John, said: 'The magistrates were far too lenient. I intend to take a civil action against Mr Lock to get compensation for my personal injuries.'

THE COMMANDER of HMS 'Jupiter', the Exocet-carrying frigate which crashed into London Bridge in June, is to face a court martial. Navy sources said yesterday the charge against commander Colin Hamilton is yet to be arranged.

A YOUNG couple spent ten days in custody over Christmas because a taxi-driver lied and accused them of planting a hoax bomb where the Princess of Wales was about to visit. Arthur Ashmore, 39, of Manchester, who pleaded guilty yesterday to attempting to pervert the course of justice, was made the subject of a hospital order under the Mental Health Act.

for the miners' struggle

Massive vote for NACODS strike

NACODS pit deputies have voted by 82.5 per cent for all-out strike action. Union leaders announcing the result yesterday said the strike would go ahead, but the date is still to be set pending talks with the Coal Board.

Cheers greeted the news of the voting by 50 Yorkshire NACODS members who lobbied the Doncaster headquarters of the union.

Strike action by the deputies' union could bring the entire coalfield to a halt by removing safety cover from pits where scabs are still working.

Later in the day, the executive said it intended to take action in line with the strike vote which has been called over Coal Board closures and a letter of August 15 instructing supervisors to cross NUM picket lines with police protection if they were to be paid.

A short statement agreed by the executive was read out to reporters. It said: 'The executive intends to take immediate steps to give effect to the conference and members' decisions.

'Before taking a decision on the timing of the strike, the executive want talks with the NCB and ACAS (the government's arbitration body) about their current differences with the Board, which include the need for a new colliery review procedure to deal with the management proposals on the future of the pits.

'We have consulted the general secretary of the TUC, and NACODS are contacting ACAS immediately. We meet the Coal Board early next week.'

The executive members refused to comment further on the strike decision. The decision to wait for talks with the Coal Board before announcing the date for the strike will have concerned several members of the Yorkshire area of the union who lobbied the meeting earlier.

They made it clear they believed that the strike should begin on Monday, and that any discussions with the Coal Board should be held while the strike was in progress.

However, they greeted the news of the unprecedented vote with enthusiasm.

Geoff Millard, NACODS secretary at Kellingley colliery, where BACM managers are doing deputies' work, told News Line: 'This is an excellent result. What we have got to do next is make sure our national executive use the vote to the best advantage of the Association.'

■ THE FULL voting figures were 11,658 in favour of all-out indefinite strike, with 2,470 against.

Petrol could be 20p cheaper

THE GOVERNMENT can afford to cut the price of petrol by nearly 20p a gallon without upsetting its budget plans, it was claimed last night.

The reason — an unexpected 'windfall' of an extra £1 billion this year in taxes from North Sea oil.

The claim was made by analysts at the Royal Bank of Scotland in their latest estimate of North Sea oil output and its value.

A cut in the price of petrol and diesel would help shield Britain from the effects of the strong dollar, help industry contain costs and help the government achieve its budget target of 4½ per cent inflation by the end of the year, they claim.

Forecast

The analysts say they have always regarded the Tories budget forecast of £10.2 billion from oil revenues this year as 'on the cautious side' and estimate the final figure will be nearly £11.5 billion.

This is because of three factors: the strength of the dollar, in which oil is priced; the fact that oil output is likely to be at the top of the range of Treasury forecasts; and because oil prices have so far held firm despite the dollar's strength.

The bank adds that on the spot market, oil prices in sterling are now 12 per cent higher than they were at the beginning of the year.

THE WORLD of the theatre, cinema and television paid tribute to Dame Flora Robson at a memorial service in London, yesterday. She died in July, aged 82, in her home town of Brighton. Many of her friends from the theatre and those connected with her often unpublished charity work gathered at the actors' church, St Pauls, Covent Garden, to pay tribute.

Gromyko is hopeful 'full stop'

WASHINGTON — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and President Reagan yesterday agreed their talks held hopes of easing US-Soviet tensions. 'I'm hopeful, full stop,' Gromyko told reporters during an informal meeting for the benefit of the press and TV at the Oval Office in the White House.

Later the veteran Stalinist bureaucrat, who has built a 40-year career negotiating treacherous deals with imperialism, lunched privately with Reagan for two hours.

It was the first meeting with a senior Soviet bureaucrat for Reagan who is campaigning on the most right-wing, anti-communist Republican presidential ticket since Barry Goldwater in 1964.

Gromyko met Secretary of State George Shultz and his counterpart in former President Nixon's government, Henry Kissinger, before his visit to the White House.

West European diplomats and newspapers yesterday emphasised Gromyko had 'left ajar the door to better ties' although he had 'bitterly attacked US conduct' in NGA full-time official Len Walker was yesterday found not guilty of assaulting a 22-year-old policewoman during the mass picketing outside Eddie Shah's Warrington print shop last year. Warrington Crown Court heard Walker, a life long Quaker, pacifist and vegetarian, deny that he was present at the picket line when the alleged assault took place.

MEMORIAL MEETING IN GLASGOW TOLD:

NO TIME TO HESITATE

GLASGOW — Now is no time for hesitation and doubt, Comrade Mickie Shaw told a Workers Revolutionary Party memorial meeting in Partick burgh hall.

She and WRP Central Committee member Alex McLarty said that the world socialist revolution — 'the goal that inspired Comrades Andy MacGillivray and Stuart McAuslan', in whose memory Thursday evening's meeting was being held — is underway.

Mickie, of Runcorn WRP, who along with Robert Shaw, Scottish organiser of the Trotskyist movement in the late 1950s and 1960s, knew both comrades throughout their years in the party, said cadres of their quality are not easily replaced.

'Cde Stuart had the potential to become an outstanding leader in the socialist revolution,' she said, while 'Cde Andy's rich and varied experience and his devotion to the Party' provided vital lessons especially for the youth.

'To honour their memory and recognise their contribution, everyone here must make a resolve: active members must take up Party tasks with greater determination, those inactive must take up the struggle again, and those who have not already joined must join tonight.'

Both comrades had died in Glasgow within a week of one another in the last month. Andy at the age of 69, and Stuart only 34.

Cde Shaw also spoke of the tragic loss of Stuart's young brother Billy, who died in similar circumstances six years ago. Cde Billy had joined the Young Socialists and the Party while still at school.

Alex McLarty, said:

ANDY MacGILLIVRAY

STUART MCAUSLAN

scientific theory,' McLarty explained.

Andy MacGillivray had learned this through the experience of joining the Communist Party in Glasgow in the period after World War II. He belonged to 'a wave of people coming out of the army looking for a new world.'

The crisis of Stalinism and the conscious intervention of the Trotskyist movement in the 1950s convinced the best elements in the Communist Party, such as MacGillivray, 'that Trotskyism is the real continuity of the socialist revolution,' McLarty said.

The correctness of Andy's and Stuart's fight against Stalinism was confirmed above all by the calling off of the docks strike in an attempt to isolate the miners and block the General Strike.

'The ruling class could not get the docks strike called off themselves,' McLarty said. 'They had to rely on the Stalinists and reformists to do it for them.'

Court attacks closed shop

EMPLOYEES dissatisfied with a union's performance could opt out of the 'closed-shop' system at work, an employment court judge ruled yesterday.

A worker's objection to belonging to a union did not have to be in the nature of a moral objection, Mr Justice Bristow told the Employment Appeal Tribunal

BASQUE ANGER HITS FRANCE AND SPAIN

PRESIDENT Mitterrand's Socialist Party government has sparked a violent upheaval on both sides of the Franco-Spanish border by extraditing three Spanish Basques from the French region to stand trial in Madrid.

In Alegria De Alava, northern Spain, three Spanish civil guards were killed and two wounded in a bomb blast early yesterday.

Civil guards from Vitoria, east of Bilbao, set off the bomb when one of them stepped on a tripwire while investigating a railway line after an anonymous telephone call warning that a bomb had been planted.

A regional government commissioner, Ramon Jauregui, said on national radio the bomb was 'apparently very powerful'.

No-one has claimed responsibility but the police have blamed the blast on the Basque separatist movement ETA.

Barricades were set alight in the southern French town of Bayonne on Thursday, when a demonstration by supporters of the Spanish Basque separatist movement was attacked by police firing teargas canisters.

At the frontier post of Hendaye-Irun, France, more than 2,500 trucks jammed the highway for the third day yesterday, refusing to run the Bayonne-Saint Sebastian route.

FROM NICOLE VERNIER IN PARIS

The Hendaye-Irun post has been closed since Tuesday in protest against a number of incidents in which French trucks returning from Spain have been burned and drivers fired upon.

The truckers said they were not satisfied by assurances from Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez in Madrid that they would be protected in the Spanish Basque region.

Target

They said they had become a target since a French naval vessel fired on a Spanish fishing boat in the Bay of Biscay last March.

Spanish Basques have won overwhelming support in the French Basque region since Gonzalez and Mitterrand stepped up their dirty war of repression along the common border of the two countries.

Mitterrand has placed his gendarmerie at Gonzalez's disposal and has agreed to deport Spanish Basques seeking refuge in France to a number of South American and African countries.

It is a reversal of a French policy adhered to by successive governments, until Mitterrand's, to reject any extradition request from Madrid since ETA was formed 25 years ago.

French Prime Minister Laurent Fabius argued this week that extraditions were justifiable because Spain was 'now a democracy'.

Gonzalez made a sham offer earlier this year of talks with the ETA which rejected the unacceptable condition that the Basques surrendered their arms before the talks.

The determined campaign for Basque self-determination has escalated in recent months under the reactionary conspiracy hatched up by Gonzalez and Mitterrand.

Violent action this week by riot police, who fired teargas and launched smoke bombs to quell demonstrations, has been met by fierce resistance in Pamplona, San Sebastian and Bilbao.

Barricades

In Bilbao on Thursday, where teenagers erected barricades and set them alight, police were stunned by a barrage of missiles and effective street-battle know-how that kept them at bay.

The protesters also raided banks in the city before withdrawing.

Bomb blasts have rocked the border towns of both countries throughout recent months and outraged French Basques have occupied town halls to protest against extradition procedures.

Historic hatreds have been provoked by Gonzalez and Mitterrand's manhunt of the Basque national minority's leadership.

Mitterrand has begun laying random charges of murder, extortion and terrorism against presumed suspects.

Legal niceties have been thrown aside as French police level various charges against untried refugees.

The drive against the Basques coincides with mass sackings and slump programmes that are devastating heavy industry in both countries.

Police out in force

JOHANNESBURG — South Africa's black townships have again erupted as police used teargas to disperse black youths stoning cars.

In townships east, west and south of Johannesburg police said youths ignored school to take to the streets, hurling stones and damaging buses. They set light to a government vehicle and looted delivery vans containing bread and soft drinks.

Meanwhile a visiting delegation from neighbouring Mozambique has said that a peace pact between the two countries signed in March this year is in danger.

South African Foreign Minister Pik Botha held talks with the Mozambican government and with Mozambican counter-revolutionaries of the MNR in Pretoria in an attempt to get the two sides to form a coalition government.

Botha embassy protest

A PICKET outside the South African embassy was organised to show 'disgust at the racist regime's murderous rampages', demonstrators said yesterday.

The picket was called by the Black Consciousness Movement of Azania to highlight the brutal repression of opponents of the new bogus constitution and elections.

'Resistance in the country has been met by police whippings of unarmed men and women', said BCM. 'Forty men, women and children including one child only six years old, were killed by police bullets in the Sharpeville area two weeks ago.'

Killed

'Last week, nine black miners were killed who were striking for better wages and another man was shot in Soweto this week.'

Molefe Pheto, secretary of BCM in the United Kingdom said the picket was against the repression that was unleashed 'ever since the beginning of the so-called elections, which as far as we are concerned are dummy elections, excluding the majority of the people from their rights.'

'It is against the whippings that went on during that period.'

'It is against the banning of the Biko memorial meetings, funerals and other meetings to do with the present furore in the country.'

Argentina deal in trouble

BUENOS AIRES — The Argentine Central Bank admitted yesterday it did not have the money to make a major repayment due at the end of the month.

The disclosure came in the wake of a warning from trade unionists that they expected the government to fully compensate them for bearing the brunt of its 'anti-inflation' drive.

Trade unionists said President Raul Alfonsín had held wage rises to 16 per cent, while prices had soared at least 25 per cent in August — the first month of the drive.

Since September 15, Argentine banks have been rolling over on a day-by-day basis $750 million in principal payments on a $1.1 billion loan that the government has failed to repay.

Argentine Central Bank President Enrique Garcia Vasquez, in Washington for more talks with IMF officials and bankers, told the 'Ambito Financiero' newspaper that the country did not have the reserves needed to pay the $900 million.

He said: 'In reality, we would like them to give us $1 billion from the bridge loan that was suspended last year and with that, yes, we would meet our obligation.'

Peronist economist Robert Lavagna said Alfonsín must compensate workers for higher taxes, price rises and increases in public tariff rates if he wanted to reach the goals of his agreement with the International Monetary Fund this week.

Alfonsín returned from New York yesterday, after talks with leading bankers but has failed to dispel lingering doubts about how Argentina will pay $900 million of interest due at the end of this month.

A general strike early this month has been followed by a series of other strikes designed to tell the government the more than 700 organised trade unions would not tolerate an austerity drive.

Under an ambiguous agreement with the IMF, Alfonsín has agreed to halve the inflation rate from 649 per cent at 300 per cent, impose a squeeze on government spending and place strict limits on the public sector deficit.

He has also promised the trade unions he will increase spending on welfare services, health and education and cut the military budget.

Mystery village blast

ISLAMABAD — At least 80 people were killed and 40 injured in a blast that ripped through a Pakistani village market, five miles from the Afghanistan border on Thursday.

Police could not explain the explosion at Tri Bazaar, Kurram administrative district, a government statement said.

Eighty bodies had been found in the ruins of the shattered buildings and rescue teams were looking for more victims.

A Radio Pakistan report said the blast damaged a large number of shops and a health centre.

DIPLOMATIC CONSPIRACY OVER SOUTH LEBANON

THERE IS something foul afoot in the Middle East. When Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko spends an hour and a half in secret talks with Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, it does not bode well for the Palestinian revolution or the struggle of the oppressed Arab masses.

To cover his tracks, the Soviet Tass news agency put out a statement saying that Gromyko told Shamir that Israel's approach was 'short-sighted' and that it would have to renounce its 'aggressive, expansionist course'.

No one need take this seriously. This is purely for consumption in the capitals of the Arab world where the Soviet bureaucracy fraudulently poses as 'a friend of the Arabs'.

The Tass account of the 90-minute meeting differs substantially from Shamir's impression. The Israeli Foreign Minister and alternative Prime Minister said the talks with Gromyko had been 'relevant and candid' and 'very good'.

There is no mystery about these good relations. They have existed since the founding of the Zionist state. The Soviet bureaucracy was one of the first countries in the world to grant diplomatic relations to Israel and was also one of the first to exchange ambassadors.

The Gromyko-Shamir meeting in New York coincided with the sweep through various Middle East capitals by Richard Murphy, US assistant Secretary of State. He visited Beirut, Damascus, Tel Aviv and Cairo last week and held talks in Israel with newly-appointed Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

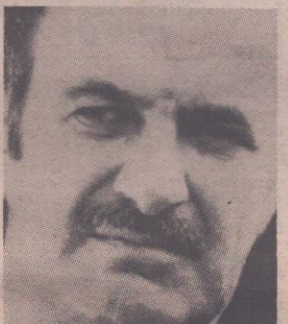

At the conclusion of his shuttle, Murphy said the Israeli government was 'certainly interested' in withdrawing from Lebanon provided that adequate security arrangements could be made.

He said securing Israel's northern border is 'an American goal we share with the Israelis and in fact I think that's a goal with which there is no disagreement in the area'.

In other words, this is a goal shared by the Syrian regime as well.

The essential truth of this was underlined last week when Peres gave an interview to 'Davar' newspaper. He said the Israeli withdrawal no longer depended on a simultaneous Syrian withdrawal from East and North Lebanon.

'An Israeli withdrawal depends on one thing only, namely ensuring security arrangements for the Galilee,' he added.

In an Israeli Radio interview Peres went further. He said Israel could reach a tacit understanding with Syria on Lebanon, 'as it had several times in the past on other issues'.

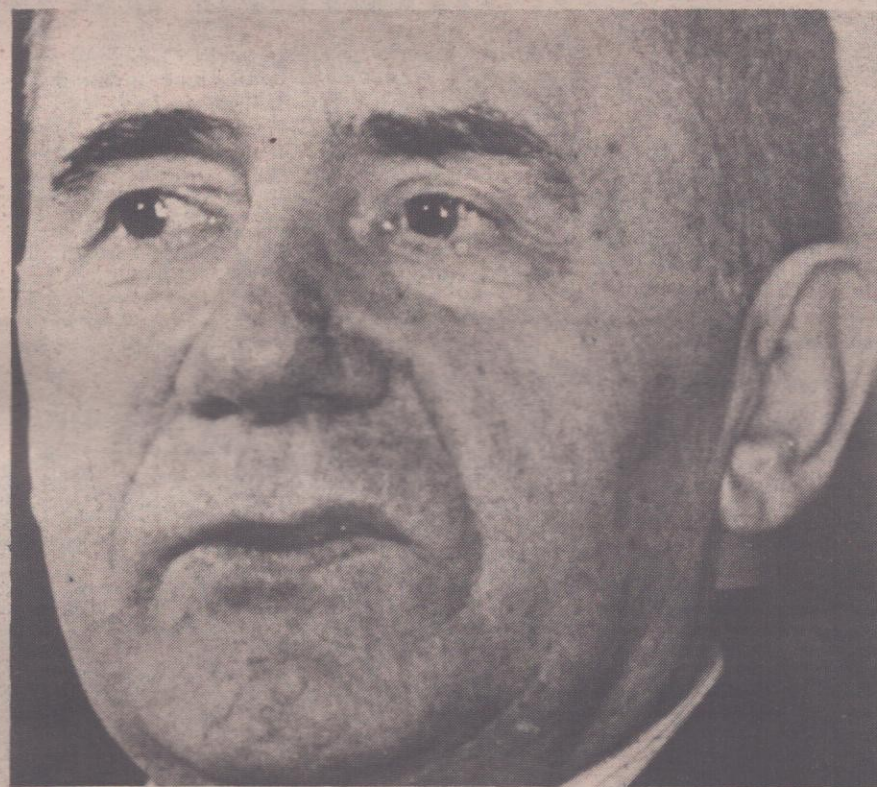

'If Syria's interests and ours are not in contradiction, then a limited understanding could emerge. That, more or less, is how I see the future.'

The Peres statement reinforced what Shamir had told the 'New York Times' in a remarkable interview on the eve of the UN General Assembly session. Shamir said he would be asking the US government to act as a go-between with Syria to help organise the withdrawal of Israeli troops from the south.

Shamir's statement showed that the Israelis have a high opinion of the political influence that Washington has with the Syrian regime. This conflicts with the superficial impression given by the Assad regime that it is determinedly anti-American.

Two other developments provided evidence that the Syrian regime is ready to give security guarantees to Israel in a withdrawal agreement:

● President Amin Gemayel said in an interview with 'Der Spiegel' last week that President Assad was ready to accept a Lebanese-Israeli security treaty on the south. Gemayel would not have made the statement unless he had the green light from Damascus;

● UN under-secretary-general Brian Urquhart who has just completed a Middle East shuttle said that 'the Syrians appeared to appreciate Israel's need for security arrangements' in the south. Urquhart spoke of 'a mood of realism all over'.

What kind of 'security arrangements' are the Zionists and Washington demanding? They involve the permanent deployment of the so-called South Lebanese Army (SLA), which is an Israeli-trained, armed and financed militia.

Terror

It will replace the late Major Saad Haddad's force, except that it will rove deeper into Lebanese territory. The SLA is little more than a terror squad of the type that the Israelis have trained in El Salvador and Guatemala. Ten days ago a unit of the SLA stormed into a southern village and murdered 13 Shi'ite Moslems and wounded dozens more.

The Syrian involvement in any 'security agreement' will be to prevent Palestinian and Arab nationalist forces from conducting military operations in the south and over the border into Israel. It will also help keep the peace by restricting the political activities of anti-Zionist organisations.

Casey sacks Mexico analyst

WASHINGTON — A senior Central Intelligence Agency analyst resigned because CIA director William Casey insisted he must revise a report on Mexico to support Washington's policy.

'The New York Times' and the 'Washington Post' both said analyst John Horton confirmed that he left the CIA in May after the disagreement.

The 'Times' quoted intelligence officials as saying Casey wanted the report to portray Mexico's economic and political problems as a threat to its internal stability and an indirect danger to the security of Central America and the United States.

When Horton refused to revise the report on the grounds that intelligence data did not support such an alarmist conclusion, Casey had it rewritten by another analyst.

'There is pressure from Casey on subjects that are politically sensitive to jigger estimates to conform with policy,' Horton was quoted as saying.

The 'Times' quoted officials as saying Casey wanted a tougher report from Horton, in part to help to persuade the White House to approve a programme of covert and economic pressure on the Mexican government to gain its support for US policies in Central America.

But Reagan rejected the programme in May because the de la Madrid government appeared to be already backing away from its support for the Sandinista government and the liberation forces in El Salvador.

Sagan's Nuclear Winter confirmed

WASHINGTON — Detonation of less than one per cent of the world's nuclear weapons could plunge the Earth into a deadly, icy darkness from which there would be no escape, according to American astronomer Carl Sagan.

Sagan won international attention when he first warned of the 'Nuclear Winter' effect a year ago. In the magazine 'Parade' he said that his original study had been corroborated in part by scholarly investigations in the United States and the Soviet Union.

'Even neglecting the more than 30,000 tactical nuclear weapons in the world, there are some 18,000 strategic and theatre weapons. Fewer than one per cent of them could probably trigger a nuclear winter,' he said.

Sagan said neither superpower could cripple the other with a surprise attack without destroying itself as a result.

'The destruction of more than 1,000 missile silos, airfields, submarine facilities and other urgent strategic targets would, through dust and soot, probably lower the temperature and cause an unprecedented agricultural catastrophe.'

'It would take about ten days for the pall of fine particles to drift back from the target nation to the aggressor nation, soon thereafter devastating both,' he said.

The nuclear winter theory holds that a nuclear war would raise an enormous pall of smoke and dust that would darken and cool the Earth, plunging temperatures for years.

Sagan said he had been told by Y.P. Velikhov, vice president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, that he had provided extensive briefings on nuclear winter to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and Defence Minister Dimitri Ustinov.

SAGAN

'I wish I had been able to assure Dr Velikhov that US secretary of state Shultz and Secretary of Defence Weinberger had received comparable briefings,' he added.

Shipyard struggle

FERROL, Spain — Hundreds of shipyard workers staged sit-ins and clashes with police in northern Spain in protest against government cut-backs in the shipbuilding industry.

At least two people were arrested and 15 others hurt — nine of them policemen — in street fighting between police and workers in the cities of Bilbao, Ferrol and Oviedo.

Workers from three shipyards took over the floor of the Bilbao stock exchange and disrupted trading while seven protesters staged a sit-in at the headquarters of the Asturias regional government in Oviedo.

The 'restructuring' plan calls for early retirement for some 10,000 workers and an undetermined number of lay-offs.

KINNOCK ACCUSED ON RE-SELECTION ISSUE

LABOUR leader Neil Kinnock was yesterday accused of plunging the party into a 'quite unnecessary and intense struggle' over the proposal to change the method of re-selection for sitting Labour MPs.

Martin Flannery, former chairman of the Tribune Group, spoke out in a message to his Sheffield Hillsborough party members as delegates began to gather in Blackpool for the Labour Party conference next week.

The constitutional change could deprive trade unions of any say in the selection of a candidate for seats where there is a Labour MP.

The move, strongly backed by Kinnock, would put the selection issue in those constituencies to a ballot of the entire membership.

BY JOHN SPENCER

The Transport and

'An unnecessary and intense struggle'

General Workers' Union has already warned that its 1.4 million votes will probably be cast against it on Monday afternoon, and other unions are unhappy about the proposal.

An attempt to have the proposal shelved at the National Executive on Wednesday resulted in a 12-12 tied vote. It will be considered again when the NEC holds its pre-conference meeting on Sunday.

Flannery said: 'This was the most clumsy thing to do and Mr Kinnock and whoever is advising him have plunged the party into a quite unnecessary and intense struggle.'

'Whatever happens at the party conference that struggle is bound to continue. And, whether Kinnock wins or loses, the Labour Party will certainly be the loser.

'This is clearly an attempt to protect right-wing Labour MPs who are threatened with deselection. We all know the signs,' said Flannery.

Benn may have been poisoned

THERE is a 'very real possibility' that Labour MP Tony Benn was deliberately poisoned when he fell ill in 1981, according to a book published on Thursday.

Author Sydney Higgins claims that one of the doctors who treated Benn believed that an attempt had been made on his life.

Benn was taken to hospital after collapsing during the election campaign for Labour's deputy leadership.

He was found to be suffering from acute polyneuritis, a disease of the nervous system, commonly caused by alcohol or metal poisoning.

It was known at the time that Benn discussed the possibility of arsenic or other heavy metal poisoning with his doctors, though the MP himself was always sceptical.

At a press conference yesterday to launch the book, 'The Benn Inheritance' (Weidenfeld and Nicholson, £12.95) Benn maintained his scepticism, saying: 'If they want to get rid of me they will have to do it with British Rail sandwiches.'

But Higgins maintained that he had seen a 'written statement' showing that doctors did consider poisoning a serious possibility.

Police gather outside the North London Polytechnic during demonstrations in May against National Front member Patrick Harrington

Lecturers won't have to name names

STUDENTS who took part in demonstrations earlier this year to stop a National Front member attending their London college have been saved from having the accusing finger pointed at them by their lecturers.

A High Court judge in London yesterday ruled that 14 lecturers at the North London Polytechnic need not comply with a court order that they identify students photographed at the May demonstrations.

After the demonstrations the National Front man, philosophy student Patrick Harrington, was given police escorts to go to the college.

Mr Justice Kennedy said it was in the interests of college harmony that the lecturers should no longer be made to comply with the identification order.

The aim of the order had been to pinpoint students who were in breach of an earlier court order banning demonstrations.

But the judge warned that if there was any further trouble of a similar nature at the college, the order might be resurrected and other lecturers might also be called on to help with identification.

Damage

The lecturers had opposed the identification order, claiming that it would involve breach of confidentiality, could damage their relationship with the students, that identification might involve giving information which they had gained other than in the course of their college duties, and that they were scared there would be National Front retaliation against those they identified.

Though the judge said he did not accept the lecturers' arguments, he said he was prepared to discharge the order after taking into account the time that had passed since the demonstrations.

The lecturers were awarded their costs against Harrington but that order will not be enforced unless Harrington, who was legally aided, comes into money.

The judge refused leave for Harrington to appeal, commenting: 'I think this case has gone on long enough.'

House prices

HOUSE prices rose by an average of 0.6 per cent in the third quarter of this year, making the annual increase 7.2 per cent, according to figures from the Abbey National Building Society.

The biggest increase in the quarter was in London, where prices rose by 3.5 per cent — an 11.3 per cent rise over the year.

Equipment for the handicapped

NEWLY-Developed equipment designed to make it easier for the severely handicapped to do office work was demonstrated yesterday.

It was developed for Eileen Armstrong, a Gateshead Council Special Programme worker, who has only partial use of one hand.

Eileen demonstrated the special computer keyboard at a full meeting of Gateshead council.

The standard computer keyboard is considered to be the wrong size and shape for any physically handicapped people and most alternative devices are most costly or impractical, said a council spokesman.

THE MINERS' STRUGGLE

Judge says NUM strike is illegal

BY PENNY BLOOR

THE SEVEN-MONTH national miners' strike is unlawful, a High Court judge ruled yesterday in a historic judgement which coincides with the introduction of phase two of the Tory 1984 anti-union laws.

But miners' leaders insisted that the strike was in line with union rules and will go on.

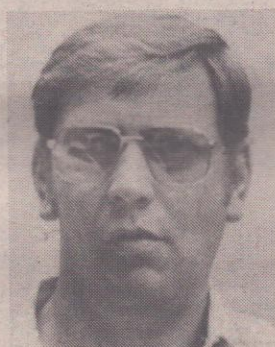

NUM president Arthur Scargill said the judgement, which was not unexpected, was 'only the latest in a series of judicial moves against the British working class representing yet another attempt by an unelected judge to interfere with the affairs of an independent and democratic trade union'.

NUM general secretary Peter Heathfield described it as 'another political judgement in a whole series of political judgements'.

Mr Justice Nicholls said the strike would remain unlawful until the

TAYLOR

FOULSTONE

NUM called a national ballot, although he did not order the union to call the ballot, as asked for by the two miners who brought the case.

Earlier, the same judge ruled on a case brought by three strikebreakers that the Derbyshire pit strike was also unlawful.

But North Derbyshire NUM secretary Gordon Butler said the strike would continue. 'I'm not surprised in the present judicial climate that a judge should make this decision,' he said. 'Irrespective of what the judge said, or the judicial interpretation of our rule book, they cannot take away the right of any individual to strike.'

The case against the national and Yorkshire NUM was brought by two miners who have, till now, been on strike, Ken Foulstone, 45, and Bob Taylor, 33.

Return

But both Foulstone and Taylor, accompanied by Nottinghamshire scab leader Chris Butcher, alias 'Silver Birch', said after the judgement yesterday that they will return to work on Monday.

All picketing has now been declared 'unlawful' and 'unofficial' after yesterday's High Court ruling

The question of whether the court should order a ballot will come before the full trial of the national and Yorkshire NUM, possibly next month, in the action brought by Foulstone and Taylor.

'The NUM's action will not be lawful unless and until it does hold a national ballot which shows a majority in favour of strike action,' the judge said.

It was 'self-evident' that the strike was not a lawful national action because an NUM rule on balloting had not been applied, he claimed.

The judge barred the union from describing the strike as 'official'.

He ordered the Yorkshire NUM to hold elections for branch officials and committee members, to hold regular branch meetings and not to implement the NUM's new disciplinary system.

He also barred officials whose terms of office had expired from taking part or voting at the meetings.

Barred

He barred the Yorkshire area union from electing delegates to attend national union meetings until elections had been held and also banned the implementation of resolutions and rule changes, until after the elections.

The new disciplinary rules passed at a special conference of the NUM in July were void and should not be implemented at all, he ruled. His decision followed a judgement by Vice Chancellor Megarry in July.

The court orders illegalising the strike remain in force at least until the full trial of the union.

Scargill commented afterwards: 'The Yorkshire NUM will obviously be dealing with elements of this judgement relating to them, but on behalf of the national union I wish to make it clear that the 1981 individual ballot vote giving an 86 per cent majority for strike action in Yorkshire was and is official.'

'The NUM will continue to recognise that ballot vote and will continue to recognise strike action in Derbyshire as official as well.'

NUM president Peter Heathfield said: 'I'm not at all surprised by the judgement. It's yet another political judgement in a whole series of political judgements rather than legal judgements the NUM has had to contend with in the past four months.'

Ignored

Commenting on the judge's ruling that union rules had been breached, he said: 'He's obviously completely ignored that the strike was initiated under Rule 41 from the areas and there was spontaneous reaction elsewhere. How a strike that's been operating very effectively for seven months can be described as illegal is bewildering.'

Chater tears down notice of shareholders' meeting

CHATER

'MORNING Star' editor Tony Chater this week tore down a legal notice from Communist Party shareholders calling for a special general meeting of the People's Press Printing Society next month.

It was pinned to the 'Morning Star' noticeboard on the ground floor of William Rust House by the party's national organiser, Ian McKay, on Wednesday morning.

The notice gave the agenda for the special shareholders' meetings and included the resolution which calls for Chater's removal as editor and his replacement by diplomatic correspondent Chris Myant.

To have legal proof that

BY ALEX MITCHELL

the notice had been posted as required by PPPS rules, McKay and party press officer Nina Temple took a photograph of it attached to the noticeboard.

But immediately he heard that the notice was on display in the building, Chater rushed downstairs and tore it down.

This is believed to be the first time that a Communist Party document has been removed from the 'Morning Star' noticeboard.

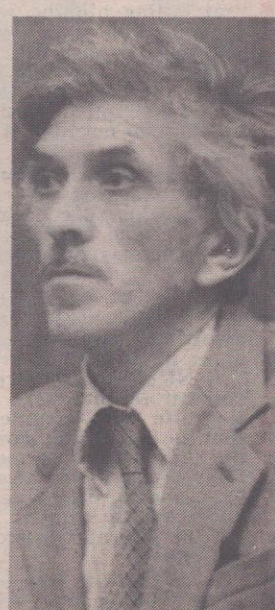

According to the PPPS rules, the notice has to be displayed at the registered office of the co-operative society at 75 Farringdon Road. But they do not specify how long it must be on display.

McKay's notice was visible for about five minutes before it was snatched away by Chater. It gave details of the eight sectional meetings that will be held around the country, declared the agenda and published the four resolutions which will be voted on.

The policy of the Chater group at the 'Morning Star' is to boycott the eight shareholders' meetings which start in London on October 26. The Chater-dominated PPPS management committee has ruled the proposed meetings 'out of order' and called its own extraordinary shareholders' meeting next January.

Asked how they would deal with the decisions of the Communist Party-called special general meetings, a 'Morning Star' source said: 'We will have to take legal advice on that question.'

British Miners and the Capitalist Crisis

by DAVE TEMPLE

A Workers Revolutionary Party/All Trades Unions Alliance publication

£1 + 25p p&p

'Nowhere are the class antagonisms more sharply defined than between the miners and the ruling class. They run deeper than any mine shaft in the country.'

Crucial to understanding the struggle of the miners today, this pamphlet analyses the decline of the coal industry in the course of this century. Tracing the history of the struggle against closures and increased exploitation, it shows why only socialism can solve the crisis, and examines the problems of leadership in the miners' union.

Cowardly Labour compromise

WITH very few exceptions, Labour's professional left-wingers have accepted the National Executive Committee statement on the miners' dispute and are getting ready to spend next week in an atmosphere of sentimental unity with Neil Kinnock and the right-wing on the pretext that this will help the miners.

One left-wing NEC member said yesterday that she wanted to see 'a united front 103 per cent behind the miners, from now until victory'. There was 'absolutely unanimous' agreement on the NEC statement and it would be wrong to create difficulties by emphasising party leader Kinnock's opposition to so-called picket violence.

The 'Morning Star' industrial correspondent, Mick Costello, brought back much the same line from a private briefing with the Labour leader. He wrote yesterday: 'Now that the side-issue of "violence" in picket line confrontations is to be taken separately, the party's leader will be able to concentrate on the need for the Plan for Coal to be implemented.'

This is a typical Stalinist distortion. At Wednesday's meeting the NEC removed from its statement every reference to the methods of state coercion used by the Tories against the NUM. The passage concerned, dropped under pressure from Kinnock and the right wing, accused the government of using the police more as a means of implementing their policy on pit closures than in order to uphold the law.

The section which was cut out was not published, and some lefts on the NEC would have been happy if it never saw the light of day. But the original version was published, for its own reasons, by 'The Times' yesterday. The missing section includes the following description of the state attack on the NUM:

'Freedom of movement has been interfered with by the creation of road blocks. This has involved a huge extension of Common Law powers — to prevent an unspecified breach of the peace at some unknown time, at some unknown place.

'And it has affected not only pickets: other people have been prevented from going to court, calling at their union headquarters, visiting their relations or even returning to their homes.

'The police have actively attempted to help the NCB by preventing picketing. They have arrested pickets on picket lines on comparatively minor offences, using ancient laws ("Watching and besetting") or because of cries of "scab" (insulting language): used bail conditions to help keep pickets away, some even from addressing meetings: and shown more interest to have pickets bound over to keep the peace than pursuing charges to conviction.

'Three-quarters of all the charges have involved obstruction; only a tenth have been connected with violence and assault. People collecting money and food for the miners have been harassed and arrested. Collections have been confiscated. Food deliveries have been hindered.

'Police anti-riot tactics have intensified the violence. Police in riot gear, charging police horses, dogs set loose, truncheons drawn — all have been seen on the picket lines. And the decision to keep the gates of the mines open "at all costs" taken as much by the government as by police officers, has been a major factor in this.'

The Thatcher government, its police, its courts and its entire state machine is bent on the single object of smashing the miners' strike and destroying the NUM in order to stamp out trade unionism altogether. Nobody with a grain of honesty can say that this is a 'side-issue'. It is the central issue!

Yet so subservient are the Labour lefts to the capitalist state that only one NEC member, miners' MP Dennis Skinner, opposed the decision to drop this section of the statement. Not surprisingly, the meeting went on to ensure that Tony Benn, the safe 'left bogeyman', would present the statement to conference.

This rotten arrangement is a blow against the miners' struggle. Unity on this basis is the unity of the graveyard. The working class, with the miners in the forefront, are in a life-and-death confrontation with the Bonapartist state.

By his public condemnations of the miners' pickets Kinnock has lined up with the state against the strikers. Anyone who seeks to cover up this reality is deceiving the working class, and there is no greater crime.

ORGANISE A GENERAL S

Tories issue threats over Silverwood

HOME Office minister Giles Shaw threatened action against the national leaders of the NUM yesterday following the violent confrontation outside Silverwood colliery, near Rotherham, in the early hours of yesterday morning.

BY PAUL FELDMAN

Eight policemen were taken to hospital, one with a suspected broken arm.

Pickets were said to have pelted the officers with stones and wooden planks. Two police dog vans were overturned. Five arrests were made.

Richardson said: 'I certainly deny the accusation that there was a conspiracy to ambush the police.'

'Pickets from our pit came to picket as usual. The police were trying to stop the pickets from going to their place of work as normal, and this, as I understand it, was the reason for any trouble.'

He said that he had left his home at 1.50a.m. to cross the road leading to the pit and had to wait five minutes for all the police vehicles to go by.

'The police claim there was a barricade at which they were ambushed but,' said Richardson, 'the barricade itself was only a few twigs and it was alongside a railway line where it would have been impossible to congregate to ambush anyone.'

He claimed police had deliberately held back an ambulance, which took 20 minutes to reach the injured.

Eyewitness Sam Franklin, a member of Sheffield Police Watch, said police used excessive violence.

They released dogs against Home Office recommendations, beat pickets with truncheons, ignored first-aid calls and smashed windows of pickets' vehicles.

During the clash a police dog ran out of control, snapping at miners and policemen alike.

The number of pickets eventually grew to more than 3,000, but they began to disperse after two scabs were escorted into the colliery at 3.30 a.m.

As the main body dispersed, a large group gathered near the pit and attempted to build several more barricades with wrought iron fencing, bus stops, concrete posts and garden walls.

Convoy

Supt Peter Lodue, whose Range Rover was the second vehicle in the convoy, described the incident as 'the most diabolical thing I have seen during this strike'.

He added: 'It was a planned ambush as far as I'm concerned.'

Tory minister Shaw made a direct threat to NUM president Arthur Scargill and other union leaders.

He said: 'What I think is proved beyond doubt was that the incident was planned, probably by the NUM, probably by the national officers of the union.'

He was supported by Eldon Griffiths, parliamentary adviser to the Police Federation, who this week called for the use of plastic bullets against pickets.

Griffiths said: 'If, as it appears, it was an ambush deliberately planned in advance, with or without the knowledge of miners who took part in it, there could be a case for the police to bring charges of conspiracy against those leaders of the NUM who persistently have incited their members into such onslaughts on the rule of law.'

Wave of sackings threatened

EDINBURGH — Instant justice, instant dismissal. This is the two-way punishment inflicted on Bilston Glen striking miner Iain Watson.

Iain was part of an official six-man picket outside the pit when he was charged with aiming a kick at a car speeding through, at 8.15 a.m.

The next morning a letter arrived on his doorstep telling him he was sacked. The letter was postmarked and franked at 10.15 a.m. the previous day — two hours after the alleged offence for which he has still not appeared in court.

But Iain's case is only one of 15 sackings of strikers in the surrounding area . . . and a dramatic increase is expected soon as many cases reach court.

As many as 300 are awaiting court appearances in the Lothian area and NUM central strike committee members at Dalkeith are convinced that as their cases come up, they will all be sent their P45s right away. The board either send observers to courts, or get the information from the police.

It is part of the coal board's unrelenting drive to try to provoke a return-to-work movement at Bilston by any means.

'That's what I call intimidation,' says Brian Hunter, of Dalkeith central strike committee. 'That is intimidating wives and children when you sent letters into homes telling them the husband doesn't have a job any more.'

More than 300 NUM strike committee members from all over Scotland attended a meeting in Dalkeith on Wednesday to discuss the legal onslaught on miners.

Fines for breach of the peace and resisting arrest have ranged as high as £275, while one miner was fined £550 for breach of the peace and breach of bail conditions. This compares with comparatively small fines in similar cases where those convicted were not miners.

And sheriffs in Dunfermline have rejected every one of 130 requests from charged miners for legal aid. In Kilmarnock, only nine out of 46 were granted legal aid.

At Kilmarnock, too, pickets have travelled long distances after being ordered to appear there — only to discover after waiting all day that there was never any possibility of time being found for their case to be heard anyway.

A section of the large all-union demonstration supporting the Square, Glasgow, two weeks ago . . . but no call to action was

Stalinis

PICKETING at Ravenscraig steelworks has been virtually abandoned, miners many parts of the Scottish coalfield have been shocked to discover.

The decision to lift round-the-clock picketing was made by Scottish area leaders of the National Union of Mineworkers: area president Mick McGahey; area president George Bolton; and area secretary E Clarke.

BY CHRIS CORRIGAN

Most NUM strike centres were kept unaware of the decision, however.

Convoys involving hundreds of lorries are now running scab coal into the giant Motherwell plant each day at a rate higher than at any time during the miners' strike.

It is one of the largest ever strike-breaking operations mounted in Scotland.

Coal supplies by train are being blacked by the rail unions.

The ISTC steel union is handling every ounce of the weekly 35,000 tonnes of the specially-imported scab coal . . . despite the union's own hysterical policy of recent years of opposing imported steel.

But NUM picket lines are only occasionally mounted at Ravenscraig these days. In fact this has been the case for the last six weeks.

The responsibility does not lie with the NUM strike centres near Motherwell. They are acting on instructions from NUM area leaders in Edinburgh.

Centre

The only strike centre covering the plant is Bellshill, a few miles from Motherwell. Several other centres who used to regularly send pickets no longer do so.

STRIKE TO BACK THE MINERS

Miners packed into George Square

Mass picket at the Ravenscraig steelworks about four months ago. Now picketing has been stopped.

sts call off Ravenscraig picketing

'We were told to play it cool and keep a low profile,' Dan Fraser, a leader of the Bellshill NUM strike centre, said on Thursday night.

'We were told to leave it go and see how the talks went. We were told this by Edinburgh,' said Fraser.

The only picketing now taking place is by a handful of strikers at the back gate, for two or three hours a day at most.

This runs counter to NUM policy nationally. South Wales steel plants, for example, are still picketed 24 hours a day.

When News Line informed several strike centres in Ayrshire yesterday about the Ravenscraig position, committee members were staggered by the news.

Ayrshire miners have been continuously picketing, for 24-hours a day, at Hunterston railway sidings and at Hunterston docks, from where the scab coal shipments are being transported 40 miles by road to Ravenscraig.

Contrast

The McGahey-Bolton-Clarke policy is in sharp contrast to the firm stand made by NUM president Arthur Scargill immediately following the docks strike deal which approved coal quotas to enable normal production at Ravenscraig.

'We do not expect anyone to make deals which result in people crossing our picket lines. As far as we are concerned no deal has been made at Ravenscraig with the NUM. There will continue to be a picket line at Hunterston and Ravenscraig as far as we are concerned,' said Scargill, after attending the transport unions' co-ordinating committee in London on Thursday September 19.

Discontent has been increasing amongst NUM strike centres in Scotland over the last two months because of a general policy in the coalfield of concentrating on occasional

GEORGE BOLTON

Saturday demonstrations instead of effective picketing.

In fact, picketing has been scaled down everywhere. Mass pickets in particular have been discouraged and have not been organised by area officials.

MICK MCGAHEY

Yet the forces are there, as shown by the substantial turn out by miners on major demonstrations, such as in Glasgow two weeks ago.

Miners and other trade unionists who packed George Square, Glasgow, however, heard Mick Bolton, who is chairman of the Communist Party of Great Britain. Both were fully aware throughout of the negotiations, which lasted a full four days in Glasgow, to call off the docks strike on terms guaranteeing Ravenscraig huge amounts of coal.

The chief architects of that deal were two other Stalinists — Transport and General Workers Union regional secretary Hugh Wyper, and Scottish TUC general secretary James Milne.

Contact

Wyper, Milne, McGahey and Bolton are in regular contact with each other. Indeed, almost all the top T&GWU, ISTC, STUC and NUM officials in Scotland were present at the Glasgow demonstration and rally on Saturday, September 15... that is, the day before the docks deal was concluded in Glasgow.

McGahey place most emphasis in his speech on the 'ready availability' of himself and other NUM officials for talks to end the dispute.

There was no call to action.

McGahey is a leading Stalinist, as is George

EDUCATION

NUT protests Tory grip

THE government's approach to teaching quality is 'authoritarian and centralist' says the National Union of Teachers in 'Teaching Quality', the union's response to a government White Paper of the same name.

It expresses concern over the 'government's bid to take central control over the structure and content of all initial teachers courses'.

Government talk about concern for improving the quality of teacher training courses and of classroom tuition has a hollow ring without any plans to increase resources, the NUT says.

Although the union has long called for closer involvement of serving teachers in teacher training, this could not be done successfully unless staffing levels were improved to release teachers for this work.

Control

'The union is deeply concerned at the government's bid to take central control over the structure and content of all initial teacher training courses.

'Although the newly-created Council for the Accreditation of Teachers Education (CATE) will advise the Secretary of State on whether to approve teachers training courses, the final decision will rest with him.'

The NUT also rejects the government's plan to reduce the number of teachers: 'The savage contraction of secondary training places will leave

SAVAGE CONTRACTION OF TEACHERS' JOBS

THE National Union of Teachers says the Tories had seriously underestimated the demand for teachers in the mid-1980s and 1990s.

Responding to the Tories' White Paper 'Teaching Quality', the NUT also claimed that Department of Education projections on future teacher numbers had been influenced by the Tories' own whims to keep the demand as low as possible.

The government figures are based on an estimated an inadequate base for expanding teacher output once the demand for secondary teachers rises again in the 1990s.

'The government's plans also ignore increased demand for nursery places and for higher numbers of 16 to 19 year olds remaining.'

The White Paper spells reduction in demand for secondary teachers in the 1980s, mainly due to a falling school population.

But the NUT said it was seriously concerned that the 'savage contraction' of secondary training places will leave an inadequate base on which to expand output to meet the increased demand expected during the 1990s.

The White Paper, published last year, set out the government's plans for the teaching force in England and Wales.

out attacks on teachers' conditions and education provision. The government urges local education authorities to adopt a tough managerial style.

This would involve using short-term contracts, redeployment and assessment of teachers' performance to whip them into line.

Teachers looking for £4,000 rise

PROPOSALS for a new pay deal for English and Welsh teachers have been announced by the 120,000-strong National Association of Schoolmasters/Union of Women Teachers.

The country's second largest teaching union wants a major reshaping of pay scale in its claim for next year.

Increments

This would create a new main grade starting at £8,000, rising by ten annual increments to a maximum of £16,500, compared with around £12,363 now.

Teachers would enter the profession at £7,100, compared with the pre-pay minimum of £5,442.

Those taking on additional responsibilities would get an extra allowance of £1,325.

The union accepts that reforming teachers' pay levels will take time. And it says if a salary structure working party fails to deliver an agreement in time for April next year, it will seek an interim award for 1984.

General secretary Fred Smithies says his union recognises that the management will demand a parallel agreement on a new contract for teachers.

A spokesman for the National Union of Teachers pointed out that all the unions had agreed that reform proposals would get nowhere without an assurance from the management that there would be no attempt to oblige teachers to carry out what up to now had been voluntary duties.

Proposals

'We are not prepared for a trade-off on those lines,' said the NUT spokesman.

The schoolmasters' proposals will come before a meeting of the unions next month where the NUT holds the largest vote. It will be drawing up its own policy for next year at Scarborough today.

Drought exposes Bronze Age houses

MUSEUM staff are racing against time to study a piece of history exposed by the summer drought. An ancient settlement, believed to date from the early Bronze Age, was discovered at Cow Green reservoir in Upper Teesdale, when the water level dropped.

Rains

But autumn rains are rapidly filling it again and staff from Bowes Museum, Barnard Castle, Co. Durham, must complete their studies within days before the site is submerged beneath 10 to 20 feet of water. The settlement, which could date from up to 3,000 B.C., includes at least three houses and one or two farms. It lay under peat, but reservoir waters washed this away before it was exposed during the long dry spell.

Denis Coogins, the museum's antiquities assistant, said: 'This is likely to be quite an important find. The shape of the buildings is something I haven't seen before and the whole settlement is not exactly like anything anywhere else. Also, it is at almost 1,600 feet above sea level, which is very high for settlements anywhere in the country. It is fascinating to consider people were living and working in an area which has since been covered by peat.'

Winning Post

Follow Starkey at Ascot

GREVILLE STARKEY, who starts the 14th suspension of his career on Monday, can sign off for his seven-day 'holiday' by taking both ASCOT'S major prizes with Sackford (2.35) and St Hilarion (5.05) today.

Ever cheerful, Starkey seems to be unable to keep out of trouble for long. His most recent misdemeanour came at Newbury when the local stewards suspended him for seven days for 'careless' riding on Sabona.

That was a race Starkey should have won, but he got himself into a tight corner and forced his way out of it.

Only last month, 44-year-old Starkey was banned for two weeks for 'reckless' riding on Rousillon in the Sussex Stakes at Goodwood.

He has now had a total of 113 days enforced leave.

The Group Two Queen Elizabeth Stakes has all the makings of being racing's answer to the 'dream mile'. Chief Singer is the star turn, but how can you rule out Kates or Teleprompter?

All three will have their supporters but it would be no surprise if Starkey galvanised Sackford back into the form that saw him take this event 12 months ago.

Lightly-raced this season, Sackford, who has been sold to a New Zealand stud, has been impressing in home work at Pulborough. He has finished fourth in both his races this season — in the Lockinge and Hungerford Stakes — and he will come to this £32,000 added event a fresh horse.

A second Haslam dies

TERRY Haslam, the elder brother of Ron Haslam, the 500cc Grand Prix rider for Honda from Langley Mill, near Nottingham, was killed in a crash in Holland yesterday.

Haslam crashed during practice for a European sidecar race due to be held today at the Drenthe circuit near Assen in north Holland.

Terry Haslam was the second of Ron Haslam's brothers to die in motorcycle competition accidents. Another elder brother, Phil, was killed in race at the Scarborough circuit in Yorkshire in the early 1970s.

Yesterday Haslam's sidecar outfit, which is sponsored by his younger brother, smashed through straw bales and hit a spectator fence after the front brake jammed. Haslam, 42, and married, was killed instantly, reports said.

His passenger, John Gainey, was rushed to hospital in nearby Assen with a bruised kidney and sprained knee.

● A WARNING that major sports grounds could be closed by property speculators came from a leading London councillor yesterday.

'I believe clubs who do not own their own grounds are vulnerable,' said Peter Pitt, chairman of the Greater London Council's Arts and Recreation Committee.

Pitt said he was alarmed by the closure of White City stadium this week by its owners Stock Conversion, who plan to develop the 16-acre site.

Pitt said: 'The stadium, which in the past served as a venue for the Olympic Games, the World Cup and international athletics meetings, as well as being a major centre for greyhound racing, now looks like being turned into a huge supermarket. Others will follow unless action is taken now to counter the speculation.'

He added: 'If we subsidise opera, music and ballet, there's a strong case for subsidising sport from the public purse.'

NAREY OUT FOR IBROX CLASH

DAVE Narey and Dave Bowman — both sent off for violent conduct when clashing at Tynecastle on Wednesday — will be badly missed by their respective sides in the Scottish League's top games today.

International defender Narey would have been a key player in Dundee United's match against Rangers in front of a big crowd at Ibrox.

Rangers are desperate to bring missing fans back to fill deserted-looking terraces, and much pressure will be on the home side today to prove they can re-establish Premier Division supremacy.

Manager Jock Wallace commented yesterday: 'It will be a big day at Ibrox tomorrow with perhaps 30,000 in the ground, and we want to show the fans how keen the competition is for places is just now.

'I am pleased with the way we have been playing and that is underlined by the fact we have scored six times in two games against defensive teams.

'There have been four changes in two matches and with the reserve team hitting the net 10 times in two games against Aberdeen and Morton you can see things are going nicely,' said Wallace.

Confidence by supporters in Rangers' recovery is more fragile, however, and they will be hoping no cracks appear on the first day that the players' shirts sport the name of the club's new sponsors — a double-glazing company.

Hearts meanwhile face Aberdeen at Pittodrie without the services of Dave Bowman, who was ordered off in the Skol Cup incident with Narey.

● CELTIC, like Rangers, sport the same glass firm's name on their shirts for the first time today, but have a less testing fixture against Dundee at Dens Park. With the European tie against Ghent next week

TOUGH AT THE TOP

Spurs 'drop' three internationals

ENGLAND internationals Clive Allen, Danny Thomas and Gary Mabbutt yesterday became the victims of the squad strength that has taken Tottenham to the top of the First Division for the first time in 20 years.

Full-back Thomas and midfielder Mabbutt are axed for the home game against Luton after helping Spurs thrash Halifax 5-2 in their midweek Milk Cup tie.

BY A SOCCER CORRESPONDENT

Allen, substitute at the Shay, joins Thomas, plus recuperative pair Ossie Ardiles and Glenn Hoddle in the reserves at West Ham.

Graham Roberts,

another England man, returns after suspension and Mike Hazard is reinstated in a re-shuffled midfield, with manager Peter Shreeves declaring: 'I've been faced with some tough decisions, but solving them is not a problem.'

The fight for first team places is a major point in Shreeves' favour as Spurs bid for their first League Championship since 1961.

'We are going well at the moment, but there is a danger the players might start "leapfrogging" and looking down the fixture list instead of concentrating on the game in hand,' admitted Shreeves.

Aware

'I've made the players aware that we must take one game at a time.'

Mabbutt is substitute today, with Garth Crooks again preferred to Allen up front.

'We have an important European game next Wednesday and Allen could do with a game,' said Shreeves, whose side head the table on goal difference from Arsenal and Nottingham Forest.

Luton goalkeeper Andy Dibble has recovered from a hip injury, while former Crystal Palace winger Vince Hilaire could win the vote over fit-again David Moss.

MARK LAWRENSEN . . . Fit to play for Liverpool

■ LIVERPOOL'S three casualties — Mark Lawrenson, Kenny Dalglish and Ronnie Whelan — are all fit for the visit of Sheffield Wednesday.

It means that the League Champions will field the team that drew 1-1 with Manchester United at Old Trafford last weekend.

Wednesday include their latest new signing, John Ryan, who arrived at Hillsborough from Newcastle during the week.

■ MANCHESTER United's line-up at West Bromwich is still in the balance. Republic of Ireland defender Kevin Moran, recovered from a bruised shin, replaces Billy Garton, but Gordon Strachan and Norman Whiteside face late tests.

Alan Brazil and Arnold Muhren stand by for what manager Ron Atkinson sees as a tough encounter. 'Albion seem to be a bit of a bogey team for United,' said Atkinson. 'When I was in charge at the Hawthorns I can't remember dropping a point against them.'

Albion have striker Cyrille Regis back after suspension.

■ NOTTINGHAM

CYRILLE REGIS . . . Back for West Brom

Forest's Trevor Christie, recovered from a calf injury, ends a two-game absence at home to Norwich.

Ex-England goalkeeper Joe Corrigan, on loan from Brighton, returns to the 'big time' in goal for the Canaries in place of the injured Chris Woods.

■ IPSWICH 'keeper Paul Cooper is doubtful for the visit of Aston Villa. Jon Hallworth, 18, is in line to make his debut, while Villa recall experienced duo Dennis Mortimer and Brendan Ormsby.

■ SOUTHAMPTON could be without David Armstrong for the third successive match at home to QPR, whose manager Alan Mullery is confined to quarters with a virus.

■ COVENTRY have Martin Jol and Kenny Hibbitt back at home to unchanged Arsenal, with goalkeeper Tony Coton making his Watford debut in the FA Cup final repeat against Everton.

Bottom-of-the-table Watford wait on Welsh international Kenny Jackett before finalising their side.

Everton's 13 — Andy Gray is again missing — includes £100,000 defender Pat Van Den Hauwe.

GRAHAM ROBERTS . . . Returns to Tottenham's defence

FALDO FLOORED

Favourites Ballesteros and Norman through

SEVERIANO BALLESTEROS and Greg Norman kept on target for their big confrontation with comprehensive wins in the Sun-tory World Matchplay golf championship at Wentworth yesterday.

The two giants, who have both won the title in the last four years, are now just one match away from the final tomorrow.

Ballesteros, who beat Norman eight and six when they last met in the quarter-final three years ago, ended Britain's interest for yet another year when he eliminated Nick Faldo four and three.

'Nothing in my game was really impressive or solid,' said a disappointed Faldo, who was runner-up to Norman 12 months ago.

Byes

The Australian put out 48-year-old Gary Player three and two as all the four seeded players, given byes and able to rest the previous day, came through safely.

American Masters champion Ben Crenshaw beat Toru Nakamura of Japan, three and two and now meets Ballesteros, while West Germany's Bernhard Langer triumphed two and one against American Corey Pavin to qualify for the other semi-final against Norman.

'Those of us playing for the second time were more tired physically and mentally,' said Faldo. 'It's a long way round this course twice in a day. This gave the seeds a big advantage and it is significant that they all won.'

'I think everybody should start at the same time, which means having 16 players instead of 12.'

Ballesteros is now 15-8 favourite to lift the crown for the third time on the Wentworth course.

The British Open champion turned on the pressure against Faldo after reaching the halfway stage one up. He played the next 15 holes in five under par, missing only one green, to collect six birdies and the British No.1 couldn't match the Spaniard's high standard.

Faldo, still tinkering with a new swing, made a few bad mistakes and never really threatened to avenge his defeat by Ballesteros in 1977. 'Sevy has a great repertoire of shots and a lot of finesse,' said Faldo afterwards.

Gallery

Ballesteros's father, Baldomero, was among the gallery and rates the game a simple one to play. 'He watches me and says it is easy, but that's because he never plays it,' said the Spaniard. 'As long as I get to the final I don't really mind who I meet. But it would be a great match if it is Greg and me.'

Norman, who plans to jet back to his native Australia after the tournament to fish and hunt crocodiles, wild buffalo and pigs, could find himself the hunted when it comes to the final tomorrow.

SEVY BALLESTEROS . . . Easy win over out-of-form Nick Faldo

Davis Cup woe for Brits

JOHN LLOYD and Colin Dowdeswell threw Britain a lifeline at Eastbourne yesterday afternoon when they combined to win the doubles in the Davis Cup relegation tie against Yugoslavia.

However, Britain's future in the competition still hangs by the faintest of threads as they need to win both of today's reverse singles to avoid the drop into the qualifying zones next year.

Lloyd and Dowdeswell beat Marco Ostoja and Slobodan Zivojinovic 6-3, 9-7, 6-1 in 95 minutes to cut the arrears — but the real damage had already been done earlier in the day when Lloyd failed to overcome the power of Zivojinovic in his singles match, unfinished at 5-5 in the fifth set, from Thursday because of rain.

The 21-year-old Yugoslav giant scarcely came under pressure for 27 minutes when the match resumed yesterday morning and he won 4-6, 7-5, 5-7, 6-3, 10-8 in three hours 27 minutes with one break of serve in the 17th game proving enough.

Surprise

Probably the result was more of a surprise to the crowd at Devonshire Park than to Lloyd for the tall Slav had also beaten him in the Canadian Open last month.

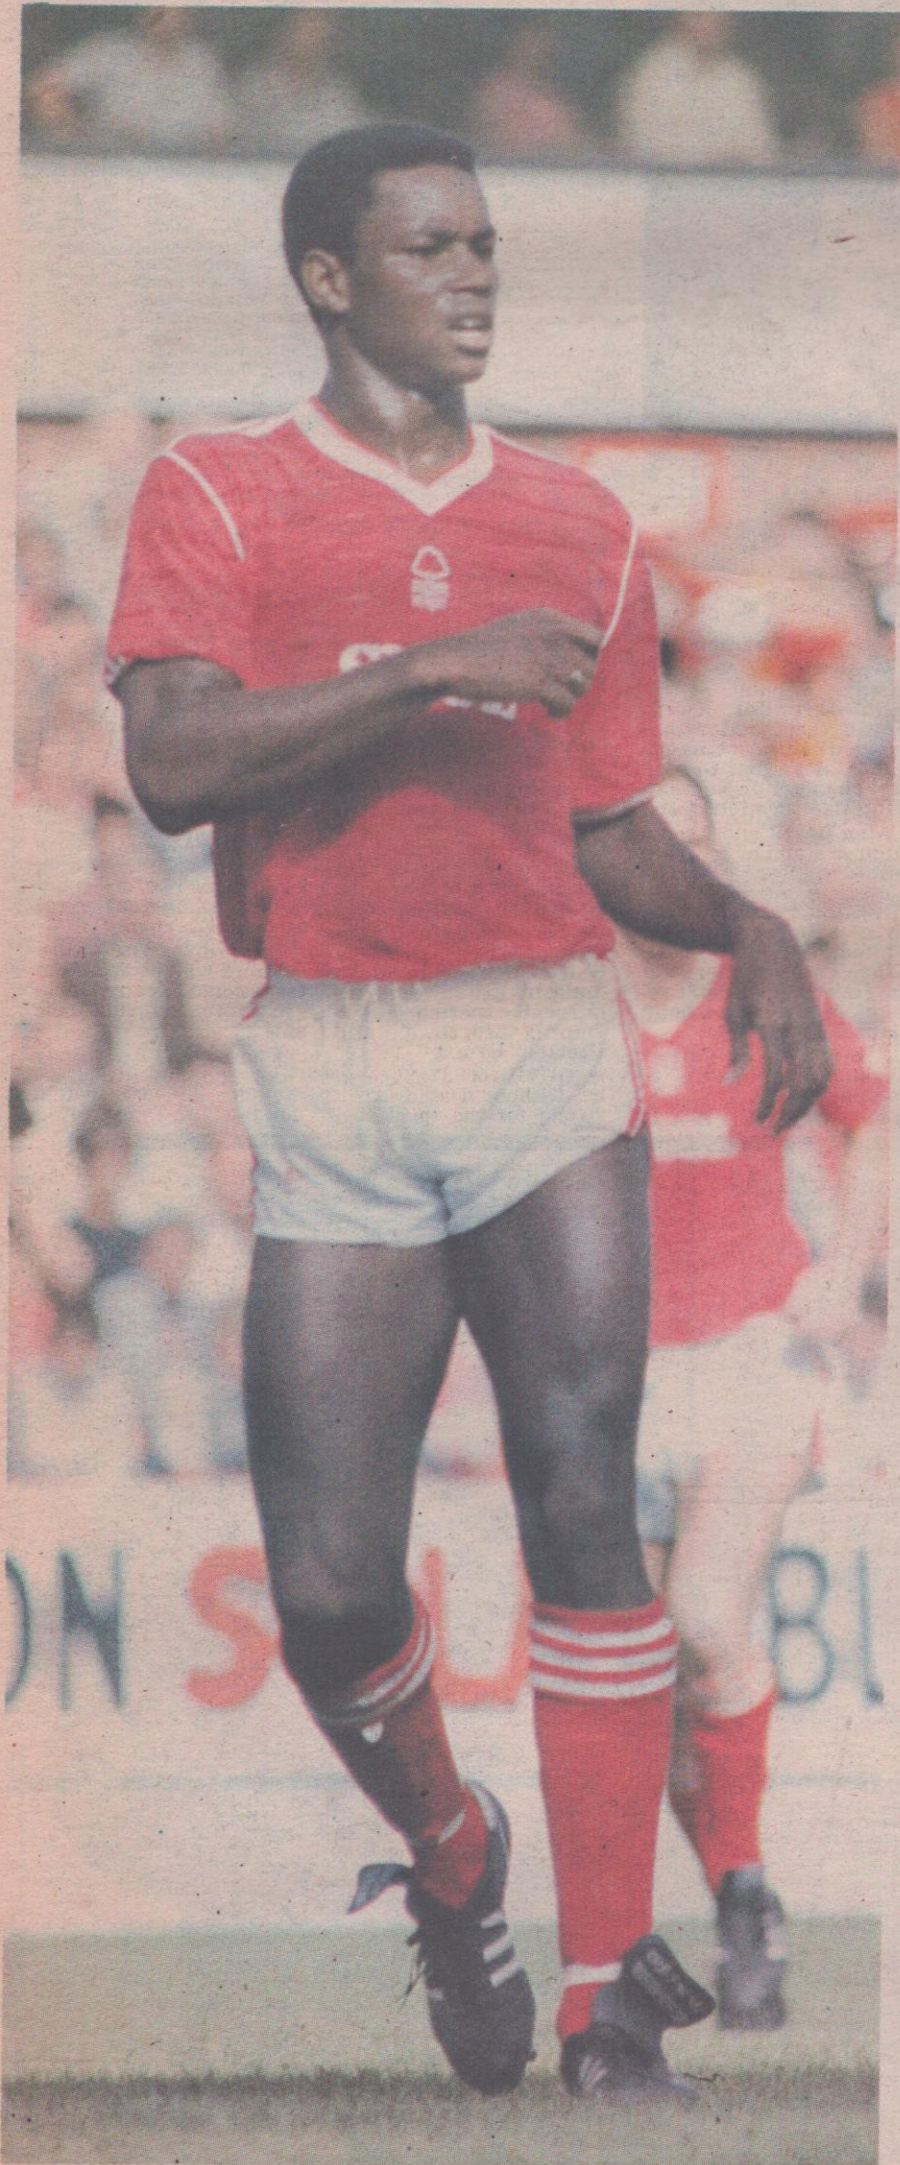

But Zivojinovic's win gave Yugoslavia a 2-0 lead and not since 1930 when Britain beat Germany at Queen's Club, London, has a team come back from such a position to win a Davis Cup tie.

● HENRIK SUNDSTROM scored an upset victory over Ivan Lendl to give Sweden a 2-0 lead over Czechoslovakia in their Davis Cup world group semi-final in Baastad yesterday.

Sundstrom, down two sets and trailing 0-3 in the third, clawed his way back from 0-40 in the fourth game to win 4-6, 3-6, 6-3, 6-1, 6-1.

Sweden, beaten finalists last year, got off to a winning start when Mats Wilander beat Tomas Smid 7-5, 7-5, 6-2 in the opening singles.

● WEST GERMANY led Rumania 2-0 after their opening singles matches in West Berlin last night in the same competition whilst Japan were two up against Pakistan in Rawalpindi and India were ahead by the same number of rubbers against Denmark in Aarhus.

CHRIS FAIRCLOUGH (left), Forest's Player of the Year, will be in action for Brian Clough's outfit at the City Ground this afternoon when they entertain Norwich City. STEVE MacKENZIE (above), the former Manchester City player, will need no pre-match talk from West Brom manager Johnny Giles as he prepares to face his once deadly rivals, Manchester United, at the Hawthorns this afternoon.
