

TORY monetary and privatisation policies took a hammering yesterday in international and domestic financial markets, while a debt-ridden major bank announced crisis moves to rescue a loss-making offshoot.

A day of economic disaster for the Thatcher government saw:

- The pound plunge to another new low against the dollar and other currencies.
- A rise in interest rates on the London money market.
- Oil prices continue to slide, with OPEC calling an emergency meeting.
- A continuing fall in share prices on the London Stock Market.
- Fears about proceeding with the sale of British Telecom.
- Lloyds announcing it was buying out the debt-ridden Lloyds International concern. This will need an Act of Parliament.

LAWSON... False confidence

Banquet

But at the end of the day, Chancellor Nigel Lawson told a bankers' banquet that his economic policies were on course!

He said: 'I look forward to the next year with confidence.'

The pound slumped to $1.1825 on European markets from an overnight close of $1.2005, even though the dollar was showing only a slightly firmer trend elsewhere.

Sterling also fell back against other currencies, with this index equalling its record low.

The pound, which closed at $1.1860, has lost more than 4 cents against the dollar since last Friday.

Interest rates in London started to rise to keep pace with the high yields offered to investors who keep their funds in dollars.

The new factor undermining the pound was the threat of an oil price war, with OPEC holding an emergency meeting in Vienna on October 29.

Pound and shares plunge, interest rates up A DAY OF ECONOMIC DISASTERS

Falling oil prices reduce the revenue to the British Treasury, worsen the balance of trade deficit and add further pressure to the pound.

Norway cut its price by $1.50 a barrel on Monday and the British North Sea Oil Corporation (BNOC) reduced its contract price by $1.35 on Wednesday. OPEC members sell at $30 a barrel.

The market price went lower still yesterday, with North Sea oil selling for $26.75 in Europe.

Nigeria, a member of OPEC, seems certain to retaliate. It produces oil of a similar type to the North Sea variety. 'I don't see how a cut can be resisted,' an oil analyst in Lagos said.

Spiral

An OPEC spokesman said: 'Any downward spiral of oil prices would have far-reaching adverse effects not only on OPEC countries and their development requirements but also the world economy.'

On the Stock Market, shares — which fell 28 points on Wednesday, their biggest one-day fall — resumed their slide. By mid-day the index was down 10 points, but profit-taking resulted in a 4 points fall overall.

The 'Financial Times' index has slumped 50 points since the miners' talks at ACAS broke down, leading to concern by financiers over next month's flotation of British Telecom.

Stockbrokers said the selling price for the biggest sale of state assets in history would now be cut. The Tories hoped to make as much as £4,000 million from the privatisation, but it may only bring in £3,500 million.

The Tories have already had one disaster this year, with the sale of Enterprise Oil shares proving a flop.

Meanwhile, the precarious state of debt-ridden British banks was also revealed.

Lloyds announced it was seeking a merger with Lloyds Bank International (LBI) whose pre-tax profits dropped 42 per cent in the first six months of this year after writing off bad loans to Latin America.

Jury is ready

BOSTON — Vanessa Redgrave's court action against the Boston Symphony Orchestra began in the Massachusetts District Court yesterday.

She is seeking damages for the cancellation of her appearance in a production of Stravinsky's 'Oedipus Rex' because of her support for the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO).

Her suit says the breach of contract is a violation of her constitutional right to freedom of speech.

The jury was empanelled yesterday for the start of a trial expected to last two weeks.

Hospital porters stay out

PORTERS at St Thomas's Hospital in south London were picketing outside the main building yesterday for the third day running after talks broke down over the suspension of some workers without pay. The porters were sent home without pay on Tuesday when they refused to carry out instructions by management to do work they felt was unreasonable. The members of the health service union COHSE were later due to be joined by members of NUPE. About 50 workers are involved in the dispute.

NUM WELCOMES NACODS STRIKE

LEADERS of the miners' union yesterday welcomed the decision of the pit deputies' union NACODS to go ahead with an all-out strike from next Monday.

But NUM general secretary Peter Heathfield reacted angrily to Energy Secretary Peter Walker's claim that the NCB had no closure hit list. 'If there is no hit list, why doesn't Mr MacGregor withdraw the pit closure programme?' Heathfield demanded.

After the NUM executive had met in Sheffield, Lancashire area NUM general secretary Sid Vincent told reporters: 'We're happy that NACODS are going on strike. They should have been out with us a long time ago. It's their pits and their jobs that are at stake, too.'

Rumours

There was no official statement following the meeting from NUM president Arthur Scargill, but Vincent said the executive was insisting that NUM members respect NACODS picket lines.

A number of scab officials in the Nottinghamshire area have indicated that they are trying to get NACODS members locally to ignore the strike call, despite the union's 82.5 per cent mandate for a total stoppage.

Vincent claimed that he had heard rumours behind the scenes that the NCB would like further talks with the NUM.

He refused to be specific about who could initiate further talks. He suspected that talks could begin again under the auspices of the conciliation service ACAS, but he added: 'Mr MacGregor doesn't want to know anyone.'

BY SIMON VEVERS

The Lancashire NUM leader insisted that a settlement could only be reached when the pit closure programme was withdrawn 'or else our lads will have been on strike eight months for nothing'.

He said the union's uncompromising stand had not and would not alter in the face of Tory attempts to bring the NUM to its knees.

Claim

Northumberland miners' president Dennis Murphy said: 'I'm very very pleased that NACODS are coming out. It's late in the day, we felt they should have come out earlier. Nevertheless we're glad that they're going to join us in resisting the destruction of this industry.'

Nuclear base sparks win

ELECTRICIANS who walked out of the top-secret Faslane nuclear submarine base on the Clyde have won their fight to have a colleague reinstated.

The Ministry of Defence announced yesterday that the worker at the centre of the dispute would be given a six-month trial period to 'prove his competence'.

A union spokesman said immediately that the decision meant an end to industrial action. Over 2,500 civilian workers at the base also threatened on Wednesday to walk out.

Five unions voted to join a strike by 350 electricians, who walked out in protest at the sacking earlier this week.

LABOUR'S foreign affairs spokesman Donald Anderson came back from South Africa yesterday to explain why he failed to persuade the Durban Three to leave the British consulate.

Anderson made the trip as Neil Kinnock's personal envoy. It was no part of his role to escort the three from the embassy 'like Jesse Jackson', he said.

Anderson, a former diplomat, read out a seven-page statement prepared by the three, A.J. Gumede, Billy Nair and Paul David.

They entered the consulate last month together with C. Sewpershad, M.J. Naidoo and Mewa Ramgobin who have since been arrested after leaving the building.

They were challenging an attempt to put them in detention without trial on the personal order of Law and Order Minister Le Grange.

Options

They offered the South African government three options: lift the detention orders; scrap the provisions under which named people are silenced by law; or allow the three to take up an invitation to New York from the UN special committee on apartheid.

The statement said that if they were allowed to go to New York they would

W. Yorkshire march against transport cuts

MEMBERS of the local government union NALGO from West Yorkshire Metropolitan County Council and Passenger Transport Executive (PTE) branches are holding a protest demonstration in Wakefield today along with T&GWU busmen and craft unions.

The protest coincides with a visit to West Yorkshire PTE headquarters by Tory Transport Minister Nicholas Ridley.

Philip Stott, for the county council joint trade union committee, said: 'The combined effect of the government's plans to abolish the met counties, the buses' White Paper deregulation proposals and the ending of government grants to public transport which helps maintain services and keeps down fares spells the destruction of public transport as a social service which meets the needs of local communities.'

'The government's plans would also mean the loss of over 1,000 jobs in the PTE alone. We are determined that this will not be allowed to happen and will be demonstrating to Ridley our resolve to oppose these plans by all means at our disposal.'

Rally

The demonstration will assemble Burton Street, Wakefield, at 2p.m. and proceed via the town centre to the PTE headquarters in South Parade, where a rally will be held.

Pensioners' organisations intend to make a presentation to Ridley when he leaves the PTE headquarters at about 4.30p.m. Ridley has also agreed to meet deputations from the county council and joint trade union committee.

Why consulate three won't leave

BY JOHN SPENCER

British government to 'translate its mere verbal condemnation of detention-without-trial and the apartheid system into powerful and effective action which we believe is well within the might of Her Majesty's Government'.

It registered 'extreme displeasure at the unashamed and immoral refusal of the US government to assist unless our very lives are threatened by a "mob"'. It also condemned the 'conspiratorial silence of the French and German governments in the face of our urgent appeal'.

Anderson spoke of his admiration for Tory Foreign Office Minister Malcolm Rifkind and said he was sure Britain would not dare evict the three men.

Opinion

'Does anyone seriously believe that Mrs Thatcher would force these men out of the consulate in the face of opinion in this country and all over the world?' he asked.

'Our country would be an international pariah if they tried to do that. Our country would not dare to do that.'

Rifkind yesterday summoned the South African ambassador Denis Worrall to his office.

According to a spokesman, he hoped that the Pretoria government would honour its commitment that four defendants facing arms smuggling charges would attend a court hearing in Coventry on Monday.

Health strike

HEALTH workers at Hampstead's Royal Free hospital in north London have called a 24-hour strike in the area on October 24 against privatisation of ancillary services.

The members of the National Union of Public Employees (NUPE) have asked for support from the district joint shop stewards' committee, which voted at a meeting to back the strike.

GLASGOW TORIES DEFY CASH CURB

GLASGOW — By 43 to five yesterday, the district council voted to defy Whitehall cash limits by spending £2.3m on essential housing repairs.

'This money is for removal of asbestos, dampness and other hazards from people's houses and we feel very strongly about that,' Jean McFadden, leader of the Labour-run council, said after the vote.

BY CHRIS CORRIGAN

Spending cash above government-dictated levels contravenes Section 94 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973.

Consequences for councillors who backed yesterday's vote can be one of the following: being barred from office; surcharged individually for the cost of the 'illegal' contracts; or even jail.

Scottish Secretary of State, George Younger, had let it be known that Glasgow would be confronting the government if councillors refused to knuckle under to his spending limits.

Blocked

The Scottish Office earlier this month blocked a move to transfer £6m from the city's private-sector housing budget to the public sector.

District council chief officers arranged before yesterday's vote for a roll call to be taken — a legal requirement to identify individual councillors who are party to unlawful acts.

But McFadden told reporters yesterday: 'I would defend our decision by saying the kind of contracts we have entered into are to the benefit of the citizens of Glasgow.'

'Whether that is illegal or not is a matter for interpretation by the courts.'

The £2.3m is to finance an immediate programme of work to alleviate dampness in thousands of homes and to remove asbestos from council houses following a determined campaign by tenants in many parts of the city.

The tiny Tory minority on Glasgow district council had demanded that the Labour group increase rents to pay for the repairs. But a rents freeze in the city was a Labour election pledge last spring and the group is sticking to its promise.

Decision

Housing convenor Jim McLean said the government may well interpret the decision as against the law. But he said the first interest of councillors had to be the health, safety and welfare of the constituents.

One Labour councillor emerging from the Labour group meeting, prior to the full council, commented: 'They can't seize my assets — I've transferred my push bike into the wife's name.'

● MORE than 50 tenants from Bellshill demonstrated outside Motherwell district council offices on Wednesday demanding removal of asbestos from the heating systems of 700 homes.

Beagle accord signed

ROME — The Argentine and Chilean regimes yesterday signed a protocol signalling agreement on a treaty to resolve their territorial dispute over the Beagle Channel.

The Beagle Channel accord was reached with the mediation of the Vatican, the official spokesman, Father Romeo Panciroli, said.

Copies of the treaty, which includes maps, were to be initialled in Buenos Aires and Santiago and made public today.

The heads of the delegations, Marcello Del Pech, of Argentina, and Ernesto Videla, of Chile, signed the one-page protocol at the Vatican yesterday.

Anti-police Bill disc

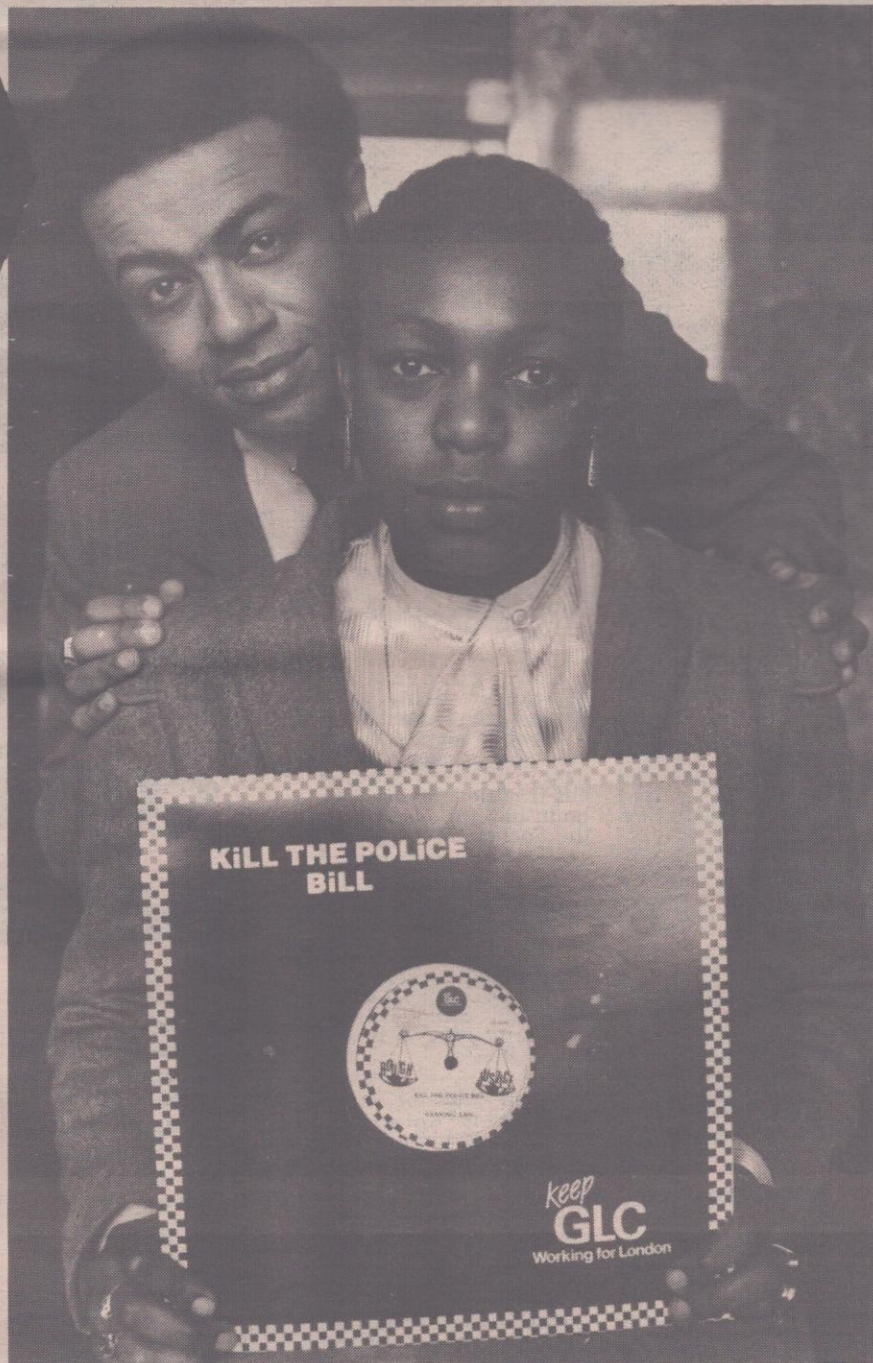

'Kill the Police Bill', a 12-inch reggae single, was launched yesterday by Paul Boateng, chairman of the GLC's Police Committee, and Ranking Ann, who 'toasts' the lyrics on the record. The record is part of the GLC's campaign against the Bill. They both hope the record — which explains what the Bill entails — will be played widely in youth clubs and on the radio. The record should be available in stores from today.

Bed cuts condemned

THE health service union NUPE has condemned proposals being considered by the South-West Thames Regional Health Authority to close 1,665 acute beds over the next ten years.

In a letter to the chairman of the authority, NUPE full-time official Ian Scott accused the authority of planning to implement Tory policy of closing hospitals and forcing people to use private medicine.

The proposals include a reduction of acute beds in the region from 6,864 to 5,199, a fall of 23.5 per cent.

Part-time firemen lose pension rights

A TEST-case claim aimed at getting pension rights for 16,000 part-time firemen failed in its final stage before the House of Lords in London yesterday.

A committee of five law lords, headed by Lord Fraser of Tullybelton, cut short the hearing of the case after hearing legal argument on only one of the two points raised.

No formal decision was announced and Lord Fraser said only that the law lords would give their opinions 'in due course'.

The fact that the law lords felt that they did not need to hear further argument in support of Suffolk county council's appeal from a High Court judge's ruling that the firemen were entitled to pensions indicates that the council's appeal is likely to succeed.

During the two-day hearing, the law lords had been told by Eldred Rabachnic QC, for the firemen, that 11 of the 15 fire engines which attended last week's Brighton hotel bombing, had been manned entirely by retained or part-time firemen.

They were an 'essential' force without whom the fire services could not function. Some 62 per cent of all fire stations in England and Wales, 79 per cent in Scotland, and 89 per cent in Northern Ireland were manned by part-timers, he said.

The county council had contended that hours spent 'on call' by part-time firemen should not be taken into account in deciding whether they could be regarded as 'whole time' employees entitled to pension rights.

A victory for the firemen would add a total of £3 million to the county council's annual bills.

Edward Alcock, a shopkeeper, of High Street, Debenham, Stowmarket, Suffolk, who has been a retained fireman with Suffolk county council for eight years, is chairman of the Suffolk county committee of the Retained Firefighters' Union, which backed his case.

He said later: 'Effectively this paints us as volunteers.'

'The only way we get a pension is by being killed or injured. That's the qualification we have to meet.'

SWAN HUNTER shipbuilders confirmed last night that as many as 2,000 jobs will be axed, and well before the Tory government's plans to privatise the four yards.

Swan Hunter planning and methods director Ian McDougall said Hebburn and Walker yards were earmarked for mothballing and the jobs were likely to be 'slashed' in February.

The confirmation came after a union official had warned that more than a quarter of the 7,500 shipbuilding jobs on the Tyne would soon be destroyed unless a major contract was won.

Bob Welford, secretary of the Confederation of Shipbuilding and Engineering Unions at the four yards, said he had written proof that management planned to post redundancy notices to between 1,800 and 2,000 workers in the next few weeks.

He was speaking as shop stewards prepared to address workers at a series of mass meetings yesterday.

Welford said: 'Management has told us not to rock the boat or it could jeopardise Swan's chances of winning more orders but the time for talking is over and we now need action to press our union national negotiators and union executives into showing some leadership in the fight for the future of the industry.'

He said they had been

Tyneside yards face 2,000 job cuts told there would be only enough work for between 60 per cent and 65 per cent of the labour force after the end of the year.

'It's the first time management has come forward with a statement and actual figures,' Welford said.

Losses

'My greatest fear is that this could be only the beginning. We believe there could be even more job losses in the middle of next year.'

Union representatives suspected official notice of the job cuts might come as early as next month.

The men were due to be asked to vote on whether they supported a recommendation from the union executive to fight compulsory redundancies and privatisation.

McDougall blamed a 'chronic shortage of new orders'. Even if the Ministry of Defence placed orders for long-awaited Type 22 frigates with Swan Hunter, it could only soften the blow, he said.

● THE Ministry of Defence is covering up plans to cut more than 1,200 jobs in the Royal Ordnance factories, according to Labour Whip and MP for Blaydon, John McWilliam.

Chief Whip re-elected

RIGHT-WINGER Michael Cocks was re-elected as Labour chief whip in a parliamentary Labour Party ballot announced yesterday. He has held the job since 1976.

Cocks, MP for Bristol South, gained 120 votes. His rival, Sheffield left-winger Martin Flannery, got 44 votes.

In October last year Cocks secured 113 votes at the third attempt in a three-cornered battle.

John Evans, the former parliamentary secretary to Michael Foot, gained 63 votes and Flannery 29.

But Cocks could still face problems with his own constituency party, which may not re-select him as its candidate.

Cocks's problems have been worsened by the defeat at Labour's Blackpool conference of a move to change the re-selection rules.

Nigeria jails ex-governor

LAGOS — A former Nigerian state governor of western Oyo state, Bolga Ige, and his deputy have been jailed for 21 years each for corruption.

LA PAZ — Bolivian President Hernan Siles Zuazo has named new ministers to four posts left open in a Cabinet reshuffle last week.

NO BENEFITS FOR HALF OF FRENCH UNEMPLOYED

MORE than half of the unemployed people in France receive no benefit whatever, according to the leader of the country's largest trade union.

Henri Krasucki, general secretary of the CGT, has told Prime Minister Laurent Fabius that more than 1.3 million jobless people are receiving no help.

The official figure for unemployment in France at the end of September was 2,415,900.

Krasucki told Fabius in a letter this week 230,000 people were deprived of unemployment benefit under the terms of a measure introduced by Economy and Finance Minister Pierre Berégovoy in November 1982.

Government legislation introduced on April 1 has cut the period of eligibility for assistance.

It has hit particularly hard youth who have worked for less than six months and unemployed workers between the ages of 51 and 54.

Since the Mitterrand government took office in May 1981, 14,000 jobs have been destroyed in the steel industry and by the end of the year 10,000 jobs will have been axed throughout the Renault network.

In the past 12 months, 328,400 workers have been added to the list of unemployed; an increase of 15.7 per cent.

It is the rising anger of the working class in the face of this onslaught that prompted Krasucki to write his letter to Fabius. The letter is, however, far from a declaration of war.

FROM NICOLE VERNIER IN PARIS

Having described the unemployment situation as 'intolerable', Krasucki, who is also a member of the political bureau of the Stalinist French Communist Party, politely requests that those whose unemployment benefit has run out should be paid £25 a week.

This would hardly cover the cost of two meals a day in France at the moment, much less rent or anything else.

Request

Krasucki correctly describes his request as being 'nothing excessive' and himself admits that it is less than the official subsistence level.

Yet, he finds it necessary to apologise even for this. 'I understand, however, that even this modest demand would require resources,' he tells Fabius.

He closes the letter with an appeal for a 'humanitarian' approach and for 'social justice'.

The letter has had no noticeable effect on the policies of the government.

During a visit to the south west of France last week, Mitterrand

French workers march against unemployment affirmed that his programme of job destruction and reduction of living standards will continue.

He accused workers who demonstrated during his visit against unemployment and the broken promises of the government of trying to intimidate him.

Mitterrand went on to say: 'I will continue to act in the same way and I will be guided only by what I consider to be the national interest.'

The monetarist policies of the Socialist Party government will mean the destruction of a further 100,000 jobs in the nationalised sector alone.

The government attacks on living standards have resulted in the five public service unions calling a national strike next week in a sector that has traditionally been the main base of support for the Socialist Party.

Mitterrand looks for coalition partners

PARIS — President Mitterrand is making overtures to sections of the Gaullist opposition in what some commentators see as an attempt to find coalition partners for his Socialist Party government.

For several months this year he has been negotiating a 'cohabitation' with former Gaullist Prime Minister Jacques Chaban-Delmas, according to 'Newsweek' magazine.

'Today Chaban is one of the rare people in public life who calls Mitterrand by his first name or uses the intimate "tu" form of address with the president instead of the more formal "vous".'

'Last week that old relationship began to look like Chaban's ticket back to power — and Mitterrand's political life-raft.'

'Newsweek' claims Mitterrand sacked his coalition Communist Party partners as a result of the talks with Chaban-Delmas.

'Chaban agreed to serve under Mitterrand, provided Communist (Party) ministers were no longer in the government. Their departure in July permitted Mitterrand to launch a public trial balloon,' the magazine says.

Chaban-Delmas and Mitterrand served in the post-war Cabinet of the founding father of France's Bonapartist constitution, the late President Charles de Gaulle.

Chaban-Delmas was the late President Georges Pompidou's prime minister from 1969 to 1972, when he was forced to resign in a tax scandal.

Shift

'Newsweek' concluded: 'Mitterrand may have other potential partners besides Chaban. Since the summer, the president's policies have moved from left to centre, a shift that has made power-sharing with several rightist leaders seem somewhat more plausible.'

'Former President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing and the Gaullist leader, Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac, have been touted as possible prime ministers under Mitterrand after 1986.'

Belgrade show trials

BELGRADE — The Yugoslav government is bringing to trial six intellectuals accused of 'associating for hostile activity'.

November 5 has been fixed as the day for the trial of the group whom the bureaucrats have dubbed the 'Belgrade Six'.

Accused are sociologists Vladimir Mijanovic, 38, and Milan Nikolic, 37, translator Pavluska Imirovic, 36, Miodrag Milic, 55, journalist Dragomir Olujic, 35 and philosophy student Gordan Jovanovic, 23.

They were charged after a police raid on a private Belgrade apartment on April 20. At first, 27 intellectuals, including veteran oppositionist Milovan Djilas, were detained.

The charges of 'associating for hostile activity' carry a minimum of five years jail and a maximum of 15. All six have been allowed to remain at liberty.

Meeting

One of those who took part in the April 20 meeting, university lecturer Vojislav Seselj, 29, was sentenced to eight years imprisonment by a Sarajevo court on July 9 on a charge of carrying out counter-revolutionary activity.

Public comments by officials, including President Veselin Djuranovic, suggest high-level unease that prosecution of oppositionists could tarnish the bureaucracy's image in the West.

Prime Minister Milka Planinc is an ardent advocate of close economic relations with the West and Western austerity measures to guarantee a flow of much-needed dollar credits to keep the debt-strapped economy moving.

Publicised trials of oppositionists are seen by senior bureaucrats as likely to create conditions for economic sanctions similar to Poland's and jeopardise the bureaucracy's $20 billion debt to the imperialist banks.

Warrant out for journalists

NEW DELHI — Police have issued a warrant for the arrest of an Indian journalist employed by the American news agency Associated Press (AP) for his reporting of the Punjab crisis.

AP New Delhi Bureau Chief Victoria Graham said the warrant charges Brahama Chellaney with violating press restrictions on reporting from Punjab and 'creating disaffection between communities'.

Graham said police went to Chellaney's home and the AP office twice over the past two days but the journalist was absent on each occasion.

The charges relate to his reporting from Punjab state when the army stormed the Golden Temple in Amritsar on June 6.

During the Golden Temple crisis the Indian government sharply criticised and denied AP reports of 1,200 deaths among soldiers and civilians in the army action.

The Indian government has said about 600 people died in the action.

Army hunts FMLN

SAN SALVADOR — The Salvadorean army began a counter-insurgency sweep yesterday, three days after the 'dialogue' at La Palma between President Duarte and the Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front (FMLN).

The FMLN has responded by repeating an earlier call for a nationwide transport stoppage.

Colonel Domingo Monterrosa, in charge of the eastern third of the country, launched the sweep but details were not available in San Salvador or at his headquarters.

In a reference to the La Palma talks, Radio Venceremos, the FMLN's clandestine radio, said US military aid to the Duarte regime was the main obstacle to the negotiations.

It said Washington had stationed 55 military advisers in the country and pumped more than $1 million a day into the regime's coffers to fight the national liberation movement.

'Intensify the popular struggle, all the people to defeat the imperialist intervention, revolution or death, we shall win,' the statement said.

Reforms

Radio Venceremos called for wide-ranging political and social reforms and said: 'The peace we seek is through the resolution of all these popular aspirations.'

Meanwhile Tass correspondent Igor Surguchev said the US was trying to make 'political capital' out of the peace talks which he described as a possible 'trap' for the FMLN.

Surguchev said: 'I remind you that the talks are about achieving a peaceful political settlement in El Salvador, where the armed conflict has been going on for over four years now.'

'However, the regime itself does not intend to disarm and to carry through the radical democratic reforms in El Salvador for which the patriots are fighting.'

'In these conditions, by accepting Duarte's proposal the patriotic forces could find themselves in a trap, for if they lay down their weapons the only thing to be done is to put their trust in the mercy of the present regime, which has at its disposal a ramified network of repressive organs for suppressing the opposition.'

DENG DISMANTLES MAO'S HERITAGE

BY A FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT

PEKING — The Chinese Communist Party under Deng Xiaoping is planning sweeping changes in the party's structure in a drive to dismantle the influence of the late Chairman Mao Tsetung.

Mao's policies were attacked as 'extremist' and 'wrong' in a front-page commentary this week by the party's paper, the 'People's Daily', which demanded that all members renounce the policies of the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution launched by Mao.

The paper branded as a 'disaster' the Cultural Revolution, which led to the official disgrace of hundreds of party bureaucrats.

Deng was one of those officially disgraced and removed from all leadership during the Cultural Revolution.

In an internationally publicised event, the Red Guards led Deng in a dunce's cap through the streets of Peking at the height of Mao's Cultural Revolution drive against the bureaucracy.

Deng, and hundreds of other party bureaucrats, went into oblivion after the humiliating parades through historic Tien Anmen Square, from where Mao had proclaimed the Chinese Revolution in 1949.

His return to political life and control of the party ideological and political machinery took place long after the death of the 'Helmsman' in 1969.

The 'People's Daily' commentary coincided with a party plenum which is due to release a 16,000-character resolution after it ends at the weekend.

The document will, in fact, formalise the policies Deng has put into operation in concluding his various deals with US and Western capitalism.

These changes include the introduction of 'workplace incentives', abolishing rural communes and attracting overseas capital and joint-ventures.

The plenum this week follows a year-long 'rectification' campaign. Party members were told that their membership would not be renewed unless they renounced the Cultural Revolution and undertook to support the 'new direction'.

The reason for these measures is that despite the fact that Deng has steamrollered much of the 'new direction' policies he fears 'factionalism' — an euphemism for what is regarded as widespread loyalties to the principles enunciated by Mao.

The 'People's Daily' admitted in its commentary that there was 'still a problem' with party members who 'cling to their leftist sympathies'.

The party plenum has been a justification of Deng's open-house on overseas capitalist investment and the deal with the British Tory government over Hong Kong, guaranteeing 50 years of the capitalist system.

Legal attacks on W. German trade union

NEWSPAPER employers in West Germany have begun a legal attack on the print workers union IG Druck und Papier (DRUPA).

Three strike leaders are due to appear in court in Stuttgart to answer a demand by the Stuttgart publishers society for 49,000 marks in damages.

In North-Rhein Westphalia the state attorneys have issued 50 preliminary proceedings against pickets and trade unionists who joined picket lines in solidarity with the printers, charging them with 'coercion'.

Injured

Proceedings begun by pickets against strike-breakers who threatened them or tried to run them over with their vehicles and, in at least one case, seriously injured them have been dropped by the courts.

The district chairman of the Baden-Württemberg area of the IG Druck und Papier, Werner Pfennig, the vice-chairman, Karl Lösch, and another official, Klaus Knödel, have been summonsed to appear in court on November 6.

The state attorneys have cited a mass picket outside the Möhringen print works near Stuttgart on the night of May 18 as the chief reason for the damages claim.

A strike-breaking driver drove his truck into the picket in an attempt to break it and seriously injured DRUPA district secretary Horst Bekel, who was hospitalised with a crushed rib cage and other extensive injuries.

Videla won't testify

BUENOS AIRES — Former Argentine military president Jorge Videla has said he will refuse to testify in a civilian court on charges of human rights violations.

He has claimed he should be tried by military judges who were relieved of the trial last month.

Videla and former navy commander Emilio Massera were the first of nine members of the former military junta to be questioned by judges of the federal appeals court.

It took over the cases two weeks ago after the Supreme Military Tribunal said it was unable to find any proof that military leaders had systematically violated human rights.

Videla told the Federal Appeals Court he should be tried only by the Supreme Military Tribunal as he had defended the nation from guerrillas as commander of the army.

He said he would not appoint a defence lawyer, present arguments or in any way participate in the trial to avoid legitimising their proceedings.

Manila civil war 'warning'

MANILA — The Philippines is on the brink of civil war because of the 'insensitivity of the government', Jose Concepcion, chief of the National Movement for Free Elections (NAMFREL), warned yesterday.

He told a meeting of businessmen: 'Over the past few months, we as a nation have succeeded only in moving closer to the drawing of demarcation lines, the hardening of positions.'

'The people cannot be expected to endure patiently the economic hardships imposed on them unless there is an end to the disregard of the people's grievances and aspirations, an end to its arrogance of power.'

The commission inquiring into the assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino said yesterday the withdrawal of testimony by a key witness was a desperate attempt by the military to discredit it.

The witness, Celso Loterina, who testified at secret hearings, wrote to the commission earlier this week and accused it of forcing him to implicate the military.

His letter was delivered to the commission by the driver of Colonel Balbino Diego, chief legal and operations officer with the Malacanang Palace security command.

Loterina, a ground engineer with Philippine Air Lines, accused the commission of breaking an undertaking to keep him anonymous and to help him and his family go to the United States, according to commission spokesmen.

NALGO vote to continue strike action

MEMBERS of the local government union NALGO on strike at St Helens Metropolitan Borough Council in Merseyside have voted overwhelmingly to continue their action.

The strike by 1,400 NALGO members began on October 3 when the council suspended eight members in the treasury department who had refused to move offices when the council tried to impose a restructuring plan without consultation.

The council's plan was to reduce 11 departments to seven without trade union agreement. Now 1700 members of NUPE are also on strike in their support.

Ernest Baxendale, north west organiser of NALGO, said: 'Despite talks, the council is still not prepared to observe the agreed trade union procedures which would be essential if any differences arise through restructuring. This strike is to protect the basic right of trade unions to protect their members.'

'Our members are very worried about the council's proposals. Qualified staff do not know what jobs they will be offered if restructuring goes ahead and the union should have the right to consultations with the council.'

WEATHER

ALL districts will have showers, frequent and heavy at times in the west, perhaps with hail and thunder. Showers will be more scattered in sheltered eastern areas. There will also be sunny intervals. South-east England may be rather cloudy with showers or longer periods of rain. Temperatures will be near or rather below normal. There will be strong, local gales and south-west veering west winds in many areas.

Sacked after joining union

TWO sacked men and their supporters picketed the Motor City car showrooms in Long Lane, Aintree, Liverpool yesterday. Both Tony Crawford and Graham Wright were sacked last week after joining the T&GWU transport union and recruiting 16 of their fellow car cleaners, mechanics and painters.

When the local T&GWU official contacted management about their wages, both lads were immediately sacked. The remaining workers were given a rise.

Advised

The others still in the union have been advised by union officials to return to work after a brief strike last week to avoid being sacked themselves.

The picture shows Tony Crawford and Graham Wright (second and third from the left) with unemployed supporters Jeff James and Ian Murphy.

Research council cuts

THE MEDICAL Research Council has warned universities that it will have to make major cuts in grants and post-graduate student awards.

It blames the seriousness of its own financial position on Tory government cuts.

In a letter to the committee of vice chancellors and principals, the MRC says that funds for project grants will be 7.5 per cent below last year's and programme grants will be cut by 25 per cent.

The letter says these cuts will mean that 'many good applications' will go unfunded.

Research and advance course studentships will be reduced by 30 per cent from October 1985.

A spokesman for the council said that latest figures available showed there were 140 programme grants and 1,436 project grants existing in January 1983. There were also 282 research studentships and 103 advance-course studentships.

Although the council's science budget for 1984-1985 had risen 3 per cent to £117 million, it represented a reduction in real terms.

THE TUC has urged the government to scrap its proposals to change university statutes so that university teachers can be made redundant or dismissed for financial reasons.

Threat to adult education

COLLEGE lecturers in Birmingham today submit their angry response to a document calling for the city's adult education service to be moved from the council's Education Department to the Leisure Services Department.

The move could lead to cuts and fee increases, the union says, and would cut a lot of people off from education.

Response

Vivian Yates, secretary of the Birmingham adult education branch of the lecturers' union NATFHE, said: 'The response we have put forward outlines the damage that the proposed transfer to Leisure Services would have. Not least of the dangers is that adult education classes could become liable for VAT, with the consequent increase in fees.'

'The great strength of adult education in Birmingham at the moment is that its street-level provision gives a link from the individual to the group to the neighbourhood to the community. Adult Education aims to provide easy access for everyone.'

The document outlining the changes will not go to full council until December, because of a vigorous campaign against it waged by the lecturers.

THE MINERS' STRUGGLE

Police doing 'political job' on picket lines

TRANSPORT union general secretary Moss Evans yesterday accused police on miners' picket lines of doing a 'political' job.

Their role was putting the individual freedom of workers above the collective freedom of workers seeking to better their lot, he said. In a speech to the T&GWU's Scottish delegate conference in Motherwell, he said Britain had become a 'nation divided' through Tory policies and anti-union laws.

'Never has there been such a vicious approach to ordinary working people,' he said. 'This is not tub-thumping or rabble-rousing — it is a fact.'

'If you put it on a pedestal, that individual freedom must take precedence over everything else, why should you bother paying taxes, keeping to the speed limit on motorways or paying bus fares? You can't do it because it would be chaos.'

Freedom

As well as individual freedom there was also the collective freedom of workers to act as they saw best for the benefit of the vast majority.

'I am not bashing the police, but they have been given a political job, never mind what MacGregor says and Mrs Thatcher.'

'They are doing a job which is political — they are ignoring completely the collective decision, the collective freedoms, in the interests of dubious individual freedom, and they are appealing to the nation on this line. It is wrong.'

shire police committee chairman George Moores who told a meeting in Grimethorpe that police were acting like Nazi stormtroopers.

Right-winger Jill Knight, MP for Edgbaston, and Anthony Beaumont-Dark (Birmingham Selly Oak) both claimed Moores should resign.

And predictably, they were joined in this demand by the chairman of the Police Federation, Leslie Curtis, who no longer troubles to conceal his hatred of the Labour Party and his partiality for Mrs Thatcher.

Serve

It was Curtis, only a few weeks ago, who claimed that the police would find it difficult to serve under any future Labour government.

SOUTH YORKSHIRE Police Committee chairman George Moores (left) has come under some vicious Tory attacks for hitting the nail on the head about police training and police attitudes to the mining communities, where their heavy presence is being used to brutalise and intimidate whole villages

Miners rally at Ravenscraig steelworks

'DON'T burn scab coal,' said leaflets distributed by miners who gathered several hundred strong in the Lanarkshire steel town of Motherwell yesterday.

Many picketed the gates of Ravenscraig steelworks while others campaigned in the main shopping precinct.

It was by far the largest mobilisation in the Ravenscraig area by the NUM since mass picketing was called off there nearly four months ago.

Miners came from a number of NUM strike centres and the leaflets were produced by the Woodmill strike centre, Dunfermline.

'The coal and steel unions have a long history of mutual support,' said the leaflets. 'The interdependent nature of our two industries makes this necessary. Without coal mines, there is no Ravenscraig. Without Ravenscraig, there are fewer coal mines.'

Yesterday's NUM presence in Motherwell came a week after it was divulged that 1,000 jobs are under threat at Ravenscraig because British Steel plans to close its 'finishing end'.

Plight

Harry Steele, NUM chairman at Cardowan colliery until its closure, commented: 'The steelworkers should have been on strike with us a long time ago.'

Speaking in a personal capacity, Steele pointed to the plight of Polkemmet pit, which became badly flooded in August and which the coal board may close permanently.

'Polkemmet supplies all its coking coal to that plant. Without Polkemmet there will be no Ravenscraig. Without Ravenscraig there will be no Polkemmet.'

'Anyone with an ounce of brains can see what is going on. There is no way that British Steel will spend huge sums of money on bringing the necessary coking coal from all over the world to keep Ravenscraig open.'

'Also, as the steelworkers tell us themselves, once the finishing end of that plant goes, the whole of Ravenscraig will be in jeopardy because of the cost of sending steel all the way down to England and Wales to be finished.'

'The question no-one will answer is: what happens if both Polkemmet and Ravenscraig close? That's not a village being hit. That's an entire area with, I'd estimate, 30,000 jobs at stake.'

British Miners and the Capitalist Crisis

A Workers Revolutionary Party/All Trades Unions Alliance publication

£1 + 25p p&p

'Nowhere are the class antagonisms more sharply defined than between the miners and the ruling class. They run deeper than any mine shaft in the country.'

Crucial to understanding the struggle of the miners today, this pamphlet analyses the decline of the coal industry in the course of this century. Tracing the history of the struggle against closures and increased exploitation, it shows why only socialism can solve the crisis, and examines the problems of leadership in the miners' union.

This is Bonapartism

THE PLATFORM at London's International Press Centre looked as if it had been arranged by the political department of Hammer Films: Prime Minister Thatcher, ex-director-general of the Institute of Directors Walter Goldsmith and 'Stockport Messenger' boss Eddie Shah.

The occasion fumed with reaction. It was the annual presentation of the 'Free Enterprise Award' by the ultra-right Aims of Industry organisation. Top prize went to Thatcher with Goldsmith and Shah winning awards for best support.

In making the award, Aim's chairman John Lyle spoke as if Thatcher possessed superhuman powers, praising 'the courageous way you literally rose from the ashes of the Grand Hotel at Brighton to carry on with business as usual'.

The fact that this threesome SHARED the award is entirely appropriate. After all, they were JOINTLY involved in the legal onslaught on the National Graphical Association (NGA) at the end of last year. It was the result of carefully mapped out Tory strategy. Thatcher knew Shah well before his name sprang to national prominence. They met at a Stockport Tory Party function on October 14, 1983, the day Shah's group won its injunction against the NGA under the Tory anti-union laws.

How then did the Institute of Directors become involved? 'The Observer' explained on December 4, 1983: 'The Institute had been looking for an expected, the Tories and the judiciary brushed aside the protest...

Printers and other trade unionists who took part in the Warrington mass pickets were shocked by the savage violence used by the police. But what they didn't know was the identity of the extra-parliamentary forces who conspired to get the para-military 'support units' there in such numbers.

'The Observer' again: 'The large numbers of police on duty last Tuesday night were partly the result of behind-the-scenes consultations between Shah, the Institute of Directors and the Home Office.'

The paper boasted: 'The Institute's most effective intervention in the dispute took place last Monday. Mr Shah contacted the organisation in London, expressing his fears that mass picketing might blockade his Warrington plant during the printing of last week's issue of his local newspaper.'

'Institute director-general Walter Goldsmith contacted Mr Leon Brittan, the Home Secretary, at once to warn him of the danger. At 6p.m. on Monday night Mr Brittan vigorously informed the Chief Constables in the area to step up protection of Mr Shah's plant.'

In other words, Shah could pick up his telephone, talk to the Institute of Directors, who in turn had instant access to the Cabinet, who could then order Chief Constables to set loose the uniformed

'Orgreave' at power stations

BITTER battles, reminiscent of those outside the Orgreave coking plant, would be provoked if attempts are made to shift coal into power stations, predicts Fryson miner Malcolm Cartwright.

From his picketing post outside Ferrybridge 'C' power station in North Yorkshire, Cartwright pointed across the road and told News Line: 'I can see another Orgreave here if they start trying to get coal in.'

'It could happen in another four weeks' time because coal stocks must be getting low and then they'll be bringing out the horses to chase pickets around those fields.'

Cartwright said the breakdown of talks at ACAS was entirely predictable. 'I'm not a bit surprised because of the Coal Board's attitude throughout the last eight months.

'But it's made us even more determined now to see it through. We've not sat outside here for seven-and-a-half months to go back without a victory.'

Trick

'They've thrown everything at us. We've seen the attitude to the DHSS, the use of the police, even the appointment of MacGregor. They've tried every trick in the book.'

'But personally I don't think they reckoned on the resilience of the Yorkshire miners and their colleagues in Scotland, Kent, South Wales and elsewhere. Unlike 1926 when miners in different areas were isolated, we've been able to get together, to make links.'

Cartwright's two sons, both on strike at Fryson, and his wife who has just been laid off because of a dispute at Rowntree MacIntosh in Pontefract, share his determination.

'Whether Christmas is coming or not, I've told my wife that she isn't to cross the picket lines, no matter what. And of course she won't because she's with us 100 per cent.'

Speaking barely 200 yards from where Kellingley picket Joe Green was crushed to death by a lorry, Cartwright added: 'Every trade unionist worth his sort should rally round if they jail Arthur Scargill. If they do it, there will be an outcry such as this country's never heard before.'

PRIZE-WINNERS... The Messenger group's Eddie Shah, Prime Minister Thatcher and former director-general of the Institute of Directors, Walter Goldsmith, with their 'free enterprise' awards at the Aims of Industry on Wednesday employer who would test the Employment Acts of 1980 and 1982. Its leaders were dismayed at the unwillingness of big companies to use the legislation.' Enter Mr Shah.

Who had drafted the legislation? It emerged that Sir John Donaldson, former chairman of the National Industrial Relations Court, had been a member of the secret cabal which wrote the laws for the Department of Employment. So much for parliament 'making the laws of the land'! The laws were written by unelected state bureaucrats; parliament simply rubber-stamped them.

When Lord Denning retired last year as Master of the Rolls, the Tory government replaced him with — Sir John Donaldson. On November 30, 1983, it was Donaldson who reaffirmed the seizure of the NGA's assets, ordered by a judge in the Manchester High Court.

The following day the National Union of Journalists faced severe penalties in its dispute with David Dimbleby's 'Richmond and Twickenham Times'. The union protested over the fact that Donaldson 'had been involved in discussion with the government on the drafting of trade union law' and therefore challenged his ability to be impartial.

The NUJ statement added: 'We believe that the government should reconsider its present legislation because the rights of any trade union which appeals against a High Court decision will find itself in Lord Donaldson's court.' As goons. So much for Neil Kinnock's bleat that the police are the innocent 'meat in the sandwich'!

The 'Sunday Times' showed the lengths to which the Thatcher Cabinet was committed to the Shah case when it reported: 'Having returned from the Commonwealth conference in Delhi, Mrs Thatcher devoted some attention to Shah's predicament at last Thursday's Cabinet meeting. As a result the Home Secretary, Leon Brittan, was placed in personal charge of the safety of Eddie Shah, his factory and his family.' ('Sunday Times', December 4, 1983)

What all of this shows is that the judicial attack on the NGA was organised wholly on an extra-parliamentary basis. Secret meetings, confidential memorandums, private telephone calls. It shows the operation of the 'state within the state' against the trade union movement and basic democratic rights.

When Thatcher, her political appointees in the state machine and extra-parliamentary bodies seize the instruments of class rule to use provocation, legal repression and brute force against the working class — this is Bonapartism.

By sharing a 'freedom-riders' prize with Messrs Goldsmith and Shah, Thatcher shows that one of the pillars that her Bonapartist regime rests on is the reactionary-minded sections of small businessmen. The other is the dozens of policemen who mingled in the 'free enterprise' audience wearing £300 suits which bulged in the chest to conceal loaded automatics.

Pickets brave the rain

DESPITE torrential rain 300 pickets gathered outside Brodsworth colliery, near Doncaster, early yesterday. Riot police were out in force, but the strikers refused to be provoked into any clashes. They jeered as the scab bus went into the pit yard in a police convoy shortly after 7a.m.

There were two arrests when 500 pickets surged forward to try and prevent a single scab entering Bulcliffe Wood colliery, near Barnsley. A similar number of pickets were outside the nearby Denby Grange pit and a further 300 strikers were on the gates at Woolley colliery.

Tories to back scabs' court costs

PAYMENTS towards legal costs incurred by scabs taking High Court action against the miners' union leadership may be made by the Tory-controlled Erewash borough council.

The council, which covers an area between the Nottinghamshire and North Derbyshire coalfields, will discuss the issue at a meeting next week.

It will be raised by councillor Henry Shaw who is also chairman of the East Midlands Conservative Trade Union Group.

Shaw attacked Labour-controlled councils who had given assistance to striking miners and their families.

'A moderate council like my own should be prepared to assist the many moderate miners in its areas who are working,' he said.

He claimed that the hardships endured by striking miners were 'self-inflicted'.

A council spokesman said payments towards legal costs could be made under the Local Government Act where the money would be spent 'for the benefit of ratepayers'.

■FURTHER legal actions against the NUM are being prepared by two Yorkshire miners, seeking damages for loss of earnings.

They claim they have been unable to work for 33 weeks because of the strike which has been declared illegal by the High Court.

Newark solicitor, Andrew Fearn, confirmed he had received two sets of instructions pursuing claims for loss of earnings. He said they were not from Robert Taylor and Ken Foulstone who brought the action which declared the strike unofficial.

Sutton scab list flutters

SUTTON MANOR miners in St Helen's are pleased with the response to their fly-posting propaganda campaign naming the dozen local strike breakers and including Jack London's well-known definition of a scab.

The scabs, nearly all craftsmen, have written to the branch secretary protesting at the 'slanders' and claiming they are working in accordance with the Lancashire area ballot.

The pickets unfurled a large banner earlier this week listing the scabs from the canteen roof in the pit yard. After unsuccessfully pleading for its removal, the police had to clamber up and take it down.

■BARNSELY magistrates yesterday fined 15 people — most of them striking miners — a total of £385 for picking coal from a waste tip above Grimethorpe colliery.

Three other cases were adjourned for a month and a teenager was given a conditional discharge.

Their provocative arrests by riot police on Sunday sparked off a clash in the village as miners, their wives and local youth marched on the police station.

The fines ranged between £15 and £35 and they were given eight weeks to pay.

■SOLICITORS who paid NUM president Arthur Scargill's £1,000 contempt of court fine on behalf of an anonymous client yesterday denied that they had said they were acting for Scargill when they did so.

Biddle and Co said reports that they had told the court they were acting for Scargill were based on the response of a court official to press inquiries. Court officials now accepted the statement was incorrect.

Biddles said yesterday their anonymous client had paid the fine to avoid Scargill 'establishing himself as a martyr'.

THE MINERS' STRUGGLE

The case for Community Councils

EVERY trade unionist and worker must come to the aid of the miners in their struggle for jobs against the capitalist state, the Thatcher dictatorship and the National Coal Board.

The working class as a whole and their professional allies must share the burdens and sacrifices of the fight which the miners are waging in defence of the most basic of rights — the right to work and to organise freely in trade unions independent of the state.

Trade union branches, shop stewards committees, trades councils and other labour movement organisations must take the initiative now in the setting up of Community Councils which will act immediately to meet the needs of the miners.

Thatcher and the state are out to smash up pit communities, driving families into destitution and starving the miners back to work. Their aim is not only to destroy the miners' union, but all trade unions.

Miners are, therefore, fighting on behalf of the whole working class. They cannot be left to shoulder the burdens of the strike alone. All workers must ensure that the miners can continue the struggle under the best conditions, and that a common front is presented to the class enemy.

As well as the trade unions, the Community Councils must draw in representatives of every section of the working class and their middle-class and professional allies involved in the anti-Tory fight — miners' wives, youth groups, voluntary organisations and local Labour councils.

At the very same time the Tories are attacking the miners, they are also establishing a central government dictatorship over local Labour councils, threatening cities like Liverpool with financial destruction and abolishing seven authorities covering the major industrial areas of England. Community Councils will take responsibility for the defence of local councils, jobs and services.

There are immediate and practical tasks which flow from the defiant resistance of the miners to the provocations of the NCB, an unprecedented military-style police operation directed by the Home Office through Scotland Yard and the organised harassment by social security, gas and electricity bureaucrats.

The Workers Revolutionary Party believes that the tasks of Community Councils, which should extend beyond mining districts, will be to:

- Provide food for families and children of those on strike. No miner to be starved back to work by the Tories.
- Pay urgent bills for electricity and gas, calling on workers not to carry out cut-offs as an act of solidarity with the strike. Raise funds for new clothing and footwear for strikers.
- Ensure that no miner is evicted by local councils for not being able to pay rent or rates. Make certain that medical supplies are paid for so that miners and their families can get the treatment prescribed.
- Arrange for the care of the elderly dependent on support from miners' families, ensure nursery provision so that miners' wives can participate fully in winning support for the strike.
- Organise the provision of free legal representation for miners who need it. Provide accommodation for miners from other areas.
- Watch out for and organise against provocateurs. Organise the defence of union offices and funds from state attacks.
- Rally other workers to support and back up miners' pickets and organise marches and rallies.

LABOUR COUNCILS must be asked to:

- Provide free school meals and transport for miners' children.
- Make office accommodation in council offices available to miners, with facilities for printing and communications.
- Make sure that no evictions take place because of mounting debts. Wipe out rent and rate arrears.
- Provide free public transport for strikers and their families. Make all council facilities available free to miners. Lay on entertainments and outings for miners' families.
- Resist having to foot the bill for the cost of the Downing Street directed police operation against the miners' union.

This is the best way to answer the challenge of the capitalist state, and the Tory dictatorship. Community Councils — as Soviet-type organisations — will give the working class confidence in its own independent strength to defeat the class enemy and provide the basis for the successful struggle for power which has now been joined.

Scabs threaten miner's wife

Brenda Stout speaking at a miners' rally a few days before she was attacked by police in July

A MINER'S disabled wife who was attacked by police on a picket line in July is being terrorised by anonymous abusive phonecalls from scab miners.

Brenda Stout, a member of the Bickershaw miners' wives support group in Lancashire, whose husband works at Bickershaw colliery, says she is living on a knife-edge following calls threatening to attack her son and mother.

'People don't know half what's going on up here,' she says.

'People don't know the things they are getting up to. All you see on TV is the other side.'

'There are quite a lot of striking miners that have had calls but they are frightened to come forward because of recriminations.'

'One family I know, the father was out and the mother is an epileptic. The child of 11 took a phone-call and it was a working miner on the line saying "Tell your dad to keep off the picket line or else you and the rest of your family will be dead bastards".'

'I get a phonecall every morning at around quarter to eight. They tell me "We're the men of this dispute" and "Don't forget, you've got a mother at St Helen's — on her own."'

The callers had known her maiden name, which college her son was at and a lot of other information about her family, Brenda said.

'They have threatened to kill me, threatened to smash my windows, as well as saying that my mother and son are on a hit list. Apart from all this there is abusive filthy foul language which I honestly would not dare to repeat.'

Brenda added: 'I would never dream of getting on the phone to a working miner's wife and threatening her. I just don't know which way to turn.'

In July Brenda and her husband Joe went to Bickershaw pit at 6.10a.m. to join a picket there. They were the first to arrive and were waiting on a grass verge when a policeman approached them, telling them they had to move.

He then returned with two sergeants and an inspector.

Brenda told News Line at the time: 'One got hold of my neck and I stubbed my cigarette out on his hand and he let go. The sergeant got hold of my handle bars and was kneeling the back of my wheelchair.'

'They swung the chair around and the same bobby grabbed my neck again on the pressure points. So I let fly and my right arm was fractured.'

That attack finished only because pickets began arriving at the scene and came over to see what was happening.

Agecroft strikers standing firm

THERE should be a General Strike to support the jailed Cammel Laird shipyard workers. That is the only way to prevent the wholesale jailing of trade unionists, says a young miner at the Agecroft colliery near Manchester.

Young striker Andy Robinson and his colleagues were at Agecroft strike committee rooms in the AUEW building, Salford.

'The laws they use now against the miners or anybody in dispute with management are only a few years old,' Robinson said. 'And they were brought in for the sole purpose of breaking the union.'

'That's why they are still after shutting the pits although they've lost 52 million tonnes of coal during the strike where they've planned cutbacks of 4 million tonnes per year through the pit closure programme.'

'The men scabbing on us now would even cross the picket line if they had a ballot. They're not bothered about their children's future, all they work for is the money. It's only the ones on strike who fight for jobs and a future.'

'The whole trade union movement should fight for the release of the Cammel Laird workers through a General Strike. That's the only way to answer the law and to prevent wholesale imprisonment of trade unionists. There is no law protecting the working class fighting for a future.'

'The only way the working class can protect itself against the Tory onslaught is to stand together and fight. There is no way politicians or trade union leaders can stand on the side of the law and back us as well.'

Media

Eddie Wiczorek said: 'Peter Walker and Leon Brittan blame the miners for victimisation. But they are doing it through the media.'

'If Arthur Scargill is in contempt of court, all the miners who are out on strike and all the supporters are also in contempt of court, as Arthur Scargill is our spokesman.'

'If they imprison him, they might as well imprison all of us. There is only one law and that is what the police are doing.'

'This morning at Golborne pit a police inspector, backed by numerous police, said to eight of us: "If you don't stop messing about, there will be a few heads cracked and a few lock-ups."'

'This is how they're trying to enforce the law and that's what Leon Brittan is on about.'

Darren still in hospital

DARREN PRICE, the Frickley miner knocked down by a police horsebox at Rossington colliery on Wednesday, was still in Doncaster Royal Infirmary yesterday suffering from a broken cheek bone and other facial injuries.

A spokesman for the Frickley NUM strike committee said that he was being detained for 48 hours after being readmitted to the hospital on Wednesday afternoon when he began vomiting blood.

BOOKS

A weekly review of the latest publicationsOur pick of the Booker finalists

LAST MAY, 106 novels from British publishers were submitted to the Booker-McConnell prize judging panel. By last month, each judge had read every one of the books, and shortlisted six of them.

The Booker prize is the most prestigious literary prize; not only did the winner receive £15,000, but all those on the shortlist are assured a doubling of their normal sales, with an extra bonus for the winner.

All six authors are well-established in literary circles, but as yet none are in the best-selling category. There is also a similarity in subject-matter in all but J.G. Ballard's novel 'Empire of the Sun' — Gollancz, £8.95. They all concern themselves with the world of academics.

Ballard is the most experienced of the finalists, with 19 novels, mainly science fiction to date, but this largely autobiographical novel is a new departure for him.

Interned

The story is of a boy interned by the Japanese in a prison camp after the capture of Shanghai in World War II. It is a beautifully written book, and a worthy addition to modern war literature.

J.G. BALLARD

David Lodge is a professor of modern literature, and is therefore well acquainted with the academic world he portrays in 'Small World' — Secker and Warburg, £8.95. This is an extremely humorous look at academics on the move, 'in the air, on the make.' It's funny, but not a winner.

Julian Barnes' novel,

ANITA DESAI

'Flaubert's Parrot' — Jonathan Cape, £8.50 is quite extraordinary.

To quote his publisher: 'It deals with Flaubert, parrots, bears and railways; with our sense of the past and our sense of abroad; with France and England, life and art, sex and death, Georges Sand and Louise Colet, aesthetics and redcurrant jam; and with its enigmatic narrator, a retired English doctor, whose life and secrets are slowly revealed.'

It is an unusual and impressive novel, but tricky.

While Barnes has layers of literary allusions for the reader to penetrate, Penelope Lively has created a literary world in 'According to Mark' — Heinemann, £8.95. This is one of her most introverted books. Mark is preparing a biography of a writer; he reads love letters from the long-dead author to the woman he did not marry.

But more superficially, this is itself a love story. Mark falls in love with the author's granddaughter, and through the bond of loving and losing he identifies with the author.

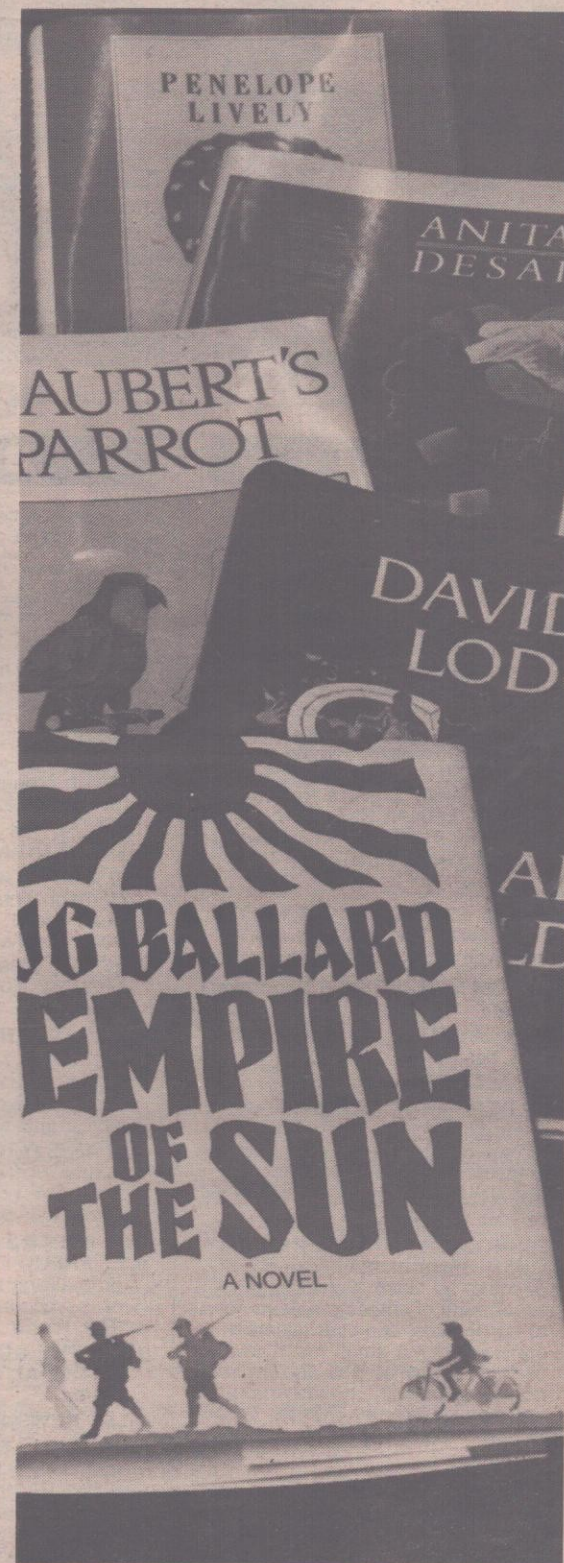

Obsessed

Anita Desai's main character in 'In Custody' — Heinemann, £7.95, is, too, a writer obsessed with another writer, in this case an Urdu poet.

The novel is in its best parts comic, as the innocent academic from a second-rate Indian college ventures among the tricksters of the old poet's seedy world.

Desai is better known for her novels about women and growing up. This is her second time on the Booker shortlist, but this is one of her least memorable novels.

Writing is a third career for Anita Brookner, established as an art historian and lecturer at the Courtauld Institute. Her first novel began: 'Dr Weiss, at forty, felt that her life had been ruined by literature.' This has now proved to be ironic, for, irrespective of last night's presentation, 'Hotel du Lac' — Jonathan Cape, £8.95, has established Brookner's reputation as a weighty novelist.

New in paperback

'The Sinking of the Belgrano' by Arthur Gavshon and Desmond Rice — New English Library, £1.95

WHEN this book first came out in hardback last year it caused a sensation. This was the first account of the murderous attack on the 'Belgrano' which confirmed the stubborn fight waged by Tam Dalyell to show it up as a political decision by the Thatcher Cabinet to ensure the Malvinas (Falklands) war went ahead.

Gavshon, as ex-diplomatic correspondent in Europe for Associated Press of America, and Rice, who had been president of Royal Dutch Shell in Argentina, could hardly be denounced as 'communists' or 'extremists'. But their account of the sinking of the 'Belgrano', drawn from a number of public and secret sources, shows conclusively that it was a deliberate act of war on the part of the Thatcher government to scuttle the Peru peace initiative.

'On Wings of Eagles' by Ken Follett — Corgi, £2.50

WHEN the Iranian revolutionaries overran the American embassy in 1979 and took 52 hostages, it was front-page news. President Carter tried to mount a rescue operation which came to an ignominious end.

What is less well known is that a year earlier, while the Shah was still in somewhat shaky power, two other Americans had been arrested and kept in jail without trial and without charges.

Getting no help from the US government, who did not want to upset their ally in the middle of a fight against the growing revolution, the head of the Dallas-based EDS company decided to take direct action to secure the release of their two imprisoned employees. He turned to a bunch of mercenaries, led by Colonel Bull Simons, who had made a name for himself during World War II and in Vietnam.

Hastily assembled and trained, Simons' group went in and got the prisoners out — which was more than the Marines could do!

Follett, who made his name writing exciting fiction, has now turned to fact for his latest story.

'CIA' by Brian Freemantle — Futura, £1.95

THIS is a journalist's overview of the activities of the CIA since its formation in 1949. It repeats so often former CIA Director Richard Helms's view that the agency consists of 'honourable men' compelled to do 'dishonourable things' that one can only conclude that this is Freemantle's opinion also.

He enjoys describing some of the CIA's most ludicrous failures — the attempted assassinations of Castro and Nasser with poisoned cigarettes, for example.

The book is a useful summary of names, dates and incidents, but it both understates the most sinister activities of the CIA, and at the same time glorifies both its job and its apparent strength, which is, after all, really as fictitious as the strength of the economic system it protects.

'Son of "Curried Eggs"' compiled by Roger Wilmut — Methuen, £3.95

COMIC classics reprinted in script form evoke the voices of the originals as you read what happened

JULIE WALTERS AND VICTORIA WOOD

the day Ron Glum got a 'sprazi up his snitch', in the words of Mr Glum — speaking 'not only as the father of a boy, but as the owner of a sixpence'. Or how Jim Hacker MP handled a bribe, or Joyce Grenfell a class of infants. A fine selection from 40 years of British humour.

'Four Films of Woody Allen' — Faber and Faber paperback, £5.95

ALSO in script form are four of Allen's quirky films, 'Annie Hall', 'Interiors', 'Manhattan' and 'Stardust Memories'. The stills are poorly reproduced, but addicts will treasure this printed version, which still has a place in the era of the video.

'Lucky Bag: the Victoria Wood Songbook' — Methuen, paperback, £4.95

WORDS, plus the words and music, pictures of Victoria Wood in action, and some advice on performance (like how to play the piano with one hand), from the highly original comedienne.

Local Suitor to triumph for Hern

LOCAL SUITOR (3.10), perhaps the best juvenile seen this season — can take the £32,500 added William Hill Dewhurst Stakes at NEWMARKET today and wipe out two years of bitter memories for West Ilsley trainer Dick Hern.

It seems amazing that Hern has never won this Classic trial. He must have thought he had the race sewn up two years ago, with Gorytus, but that horse's flop was one of the racing stories of the decade.

Gorytus, like Local Suitor, came to the 'Dewhurst' unbeaten in two races. He too, was widely acknowledged as a juvenile of exceptional merit, and hailed as an outstanding prospect.

What happened in the race is still a mystery. Gorytus trailed in last of four to Diesis, beaten in a matter of strides three furlongs from home and falling further and further behind until being virtually pulled up before the final furlong.

Let's hope that Local Suitor gets through his big test today without similar mishap.

A $2 million yearling, Local Suitor won a maiden event at York on his debut, then confirmed his class and promise by winning the Mill Reef Stakes at Newbury.

Always travelling well, Local Suitor turned on the acceleration at exactly the right moment, leaving the Henry Cecil-trained Presidium floundering.

The third horse, Bassen-thwaite, has since franked the form by winning the Middle Park Stakes.

It is always easy to get carried away with juvenile performances, and Local Suitor will not have things all his own way. Irish master trainer Vincent O'Brien will see to that as he saddles Law Society.

BY A SPORTS LINE REPORTER

O'Brien has an outstanding record in this event, having won it seven times in the past 15 runnings. Nijinsky (1969), The Minstrel (1976), and Storm Bird (1980) are among his winners.

Last year it was the turn of subsequent 2,000 Guineas winner and Epsom Derby runner-up — El Gran Senor to carry the Ballydoyle confidence.

Unbeaten

Like so many of O'Brien champions Law Society comes to the race unbeaten, having not really been stretched in any of his three victories at The Curragh.

It should be close, but Local Suitor would be a popular winner, and he just gets the vote.

Hern and Willie Carson could also land the fillies 'trial', the Rockfel Stakes, with Silko (4.10). A promising second on her debut at Ascot, Silko is expected to have improved enough to win.

fine season, and the Findon trainer may land the £6,000 added Fakenham Handicap with Sarah's Venture (2.35).

George Duffield can edge closer to his first ever century of winners by scoring on Beach Ball (3.30), in the Ilkley Stakes at CATTERICK.

Lord Derby's filly struck form at Brighton earlier in the month when beating Dramacon by four lengths over six furlongs. This extra furlong will be more in her favour and Beach Ball can thwart Thorny Rose, the only other with winning form in the race.

Mark Prescott rarely leaves here without a winner and his Bidivera (2.00), can beat Kuwait Night, who is hard to assess, in the opening Craven Apprentice Stakes.

Bidivera beat that professional loser Favourite Nephew by half a length in a Redcar 'maiden' last month and she could be on the upgrade, while Kuwait Night, though beautifully-bred, beat even more moderate rivals on her introduction at Ripon back in August.

Jamesmead (2.15), who ran his best race for a long time when two and a half lengths third to Troyenne at Newmarket last time out, should get off the mark in the Forster Stakes at LINGFIELD.

Ground

David Elsworth's colt was encountering yielding going for the first time that day, and should appreciate the give in the ground here.

Mango Man (2.45), who showed improved form to beat Try Tiffany at Brighton, can defy his 5lb penalty in the Truman Handicap.

Another who is likely to appreciate the ease in the going is Finian's Rainbow (4.15).

World Cup Review

WALES FAIL AGAIN

MIKE ENGLAND yesterday spelt out the only way Wales can still reach the Mexico World Cup Finals.

'We must win all three of our home games to stand any chance of qualifying,' said manager England after the 3-0 defeat by Spain in Seville on Wednesday night.

Defeat came five weeks after Wales' Icelandic embarrassment — and it left them bottom of their Group without a goal or a point in the competition.

England, however, insisted: 'I have been in football too long to write anybody off. We realise our task is very big and that we will have to play exceptionally well in our remaining games'.

BY A SOCCER CORRESPONDENT

The Welsh should have Liverpool striker Ian Rush in their line-up for the first time this season, for the return against Iceland in Cardiff next month.

Scoreline

If Rush had been in the side last night, I am sure the scoreline would have been different,' said England.

Wales have now won only one of nine games in the past 13-months, failing to score in their last four appearances.

England refused to chastise his squad — as happened in Iceland, commenting: 'I was very pleased with our efforts.'

'We were in with a chance until the last seven minutes, when Spain scored twice. I think the result was a little flattering for them.'

Speedy striker Alfonso

Rincon put European Championship runners-up Spain in front after eight minutes and it took some spectacular saves from goalkeeper Neville Southall to keep Wales in the hunt.

Manchester United's Mark Hughes thought he had equalised after 63 minutes — but the goal was disallowed for a push.

'It was a brilliant goal. He took it beautifully and had it counted it would have made all the difference,' said England. 'I am sure that had it been at the other end, the goal would have been allowed.'

Lead

Spain stretched their lead after 83 minutes, when Carrasco fired in 30-yard free kick after Jeremy Charles had fouled local hero Rincon.

Butragueno added a third in the last minute — and there is no question the scoreline reflected Spain's skilful superiority.

IAN RUSH

MAURICE JOHNSTON is set to follow in the footsteps of his Celtic teammate Paul McStay and set the Scottish international scene alight in the World Cup qualifying competition.

McStay was the player to grab the headlines following his devastating two-goal display in Scotland's 3-0 win over Iceland at Hampden Park on Wednesday — but manager Jock Stein reckons that Johnston's turn is not far away.

Johnston, who moved back to Scotland from Watford last week, proved himself a striker who can make as well as take goals as the Scots consolidated themselves as front-runners along with Spain in Group Seven.

Stein remarked: 'Johnston is going to improve. His linking and control on Wednesday were tremendous and he was willing to hold the ball until support arrived.'

'It was through his efforts that people like McStay, Graeme Souness and Jim

Stein praises Mo

MAURICE JOHNSTON

Bett had the chance to have shots on target and he will be even better once he scores a few goals for Celtic between now and our next game, against Spain.

'He has this effervescent enthusiasm which makes you think something is going to happen every time he touches the ball. He seems to have had a bad time at Watford recently but as a Celtic player he will get the licence to show what he can do.'

On the night, Johnston's performance tended to be overshadowed by a startling display from 19-year-old McStay, who had been challenged by Stein before the match to prove himself a 'great' player.

The response was immediate and Stein admitted: 'That was a tremendous World Cup debut but there is still an awful lot more to come. Paul had been stuttering a bit at club level recently, but if you don't play people they can't improve.'

The Scots manager refuses to be carried away on a wave of euphoria on the strength of two successive victories.

European Championship finalists Spain are on the visiting list at Hampden next month and Stein prefers to judge the section after that game.

He added: 'We should get a much clearer picture of our Group after that. It is too early at the moment to assess things.'

HATELEY LEAVES HIS MARK

EVERYTHING has happened so quick for Mark Hateley lately that the 22-year-old's feet have rarely touched the ground for almost five months.

The latest chapter in his extraordinary rise to fame was written at Wembley on Wednesday night when he scored twice as England opened their World Cup campaign with an impressive 5-0 victory against Finland.

Hateley led England's front line with the kind of performance that had many of the Wembley crowd wondering why he has not notched up dozens of caps before now.

But how many soccer fans knew anything about the gangling striker before his super goal against Brazil last June?

He seemed to be heading down the same path his father had followed years before—a competent striker, but one not capable of reaching the pinnacle of the game at international level.

Five rather anonymous seasons at Coventry City were followed by a move to Portsmouth last year.

Twenty-two goals in Pompey's League programme saw him win honours at Under-21 level—and when a host of Bobby Robson's first choice internationals opted out of the South American tour, Hateley grabbed the chance to show what he could do.

Within days of his return from that tour, continental clubs were clamouring for his signature. Finally, Portsmouth could ill-afford to turn down the £1 million offered by Italy's AC Milan.

GROUP THREE
	P	W	D	L	F	Apts
England	1	1	0	0	5	0 2
N. Ireland	2	1	0	1	3	3 2
Finland	2	1	0	1	1	5 2
Rumania	1	0	0	1	2	3 0
Turkey	0	0	0	0	0	0 0

Now, five Italian League games and four goals later, Hateley is the toast of Italian football. And his performance on Wednesday night against the Finns must surely make him a starter against Turkey in Istanbul next month.

Yet, while Hateley stole the limelight at Wembley, manager Bobby Robson was quite pleased by the overall team performance.

Happy

Robson, indeed, had much to be happy about.

Ray Wilkins, also returned from Italy and AC Milan, had a wonderful game in midfield.

John Barnes, and later Mark Chamberlain, impressed on the wings, and the inclusion of Tottenham's Gary Stevens for the injured Mike Duxbury after the interval showed that there are still youngsters around who can do a job for England.

Finland are possibly the weakest team in the group—which also contains the Turks, Northern Ireland and Rumania—but it was still a fine performance.

Patience proved to be the key factor early on as the Finns set out to try and dampen England's obvious confidence.

Despite the stories about their goalkeeper—he can't hold a cross to save his life—Olli Huttunen dampened England's early endeavour with a string of fine saves.

However, under the captaincy of Bryan Robson, England refused to be panicked into hoisting the ball into the air towards Hateley—a move that has proved so successful in Italy so far this season.

Finally, the inevitable goals began to come, most of them built from well-organised forays and the odd piece of magic as well.

There will be tense moments on the way to Mexico, but on this performance Bobby Robson can seriously think about chartering another plane to the South American in the not too distant future.

BRITISH ROAD RACING CHAMPIONSHIP

Gardner seeks a final victory

BY A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

AUSTRALIAN Wayne Gardner will be hoping to make his presence felt as the curtain comes down on the motorcycle road racing season this weekend with the final major meeting of the year at Brands Hatch.

Gardner, the newly crowned British champion, will be competing in the 500cc class.

And there will be stiff opposition for him in the shape of teammates Roger Marshall, the deposed champion, and Joey Dunlop, the World Formula 1 title holder.

Their main opposition in turn comes in the form of the super duo, veteran Mick Grant and Rod McElnea, who rides the experimental Heron Suzuki 'Project 500', which features a lightweight aluminium chassis bonded together with glue.

Barry Sheene is absent, presently recovering from an operation to remove the mass of pins, screws and plates inserted into his limbs after his Silverstone crash in 1982.

But 24-year-old Roger Burnett gets his big chance by the fact that he's riding Sheene's works Suzuki. And Sheene says he'll be there to watch his protege perform.

KEITH HUEWEN . . . In action at Brands Hatch this weekend

Burnett, from Humber-side, formerly Roger Marshall's mechanic, is relatively inexperienced, having raced for only three years, but he finished third in the European 500cc championships this season.

In view of this achievement Sheene offered to lend him his bike and after impressive test sessions at Snetterton and Brands Hatch last week, Burnett should be well to the fore when the chequered flag falls.

Other riders expected to do well include Yamaha's Steve Parrish and Keith Huewen, trying to make amends after a disappointing GP season on an expensive-to-run Honda.

In Sunday's final round of the TT FI Championship it's another Honda v Suzuki scrap. But with Gardner (Honda) already the series winner, interest will focus on McElnea (Suzuki) and Marshall (Honda) in the fight for runner-up spot.

Honda have dominated the class this year. They have the edge with machinery that is both fast and agile—a fact readily admitted by McElnea early in the season when he christened the slow Suzuki 'Diesel'.

The 250cc race should keep the trackside marshalls busy. The recent British Championship round at Alton Park saw many top riders slide into the bales.

New champion Donnie McLeod has had a good season both home and abroad and must be favoured to win.

● Racing starts on Saturday at 12.30p.m. and on Sunday at 2p.m.

Windies wait on Greenidge

WEST INDIES, eager to avenge their defeat in Brisbane last year, delayed a decision yesterday on whether Gordon Greenidge would play in their opening tour match against Queensland starting at the Brisbane Cricket Ground today.

Greenidge was still nursing a painful ankle injury last night after being struck during the team's first practice session on Wednesday.

Fast bowler Michael Holding definitely misses the game because of lack of match fitness. 'He hasn't played a match for two months and is not quite ready,' Lloyd said.

Even without Holding, West Indies will field their familiar line-up of fast bowlers with Joel Garner, Malcolm Marshall and Winston Davis being supported by Eldine Baptiste.

SPURS' UEFA

PLEA

BY A SOCCER CORRESPONDENT

TOTTENHAM officials are to meet UEFA this Monday — in a bid to avert the possible threat of a ban from European football.

Spurs have sent back their allocation of tickets for next Wednesday's UEFA cup second round tie in Bruges, but are still concerned about the possibility of trouble being caused by ticketless supporters travelling to the game.

Last season thousands of Tottenham supporters travelled to Europe on 'pirate' coaches and it is from this element that trouble arose.

Danger

Now the club will meet UEFA's general secretary, Hans Bangert, in Berne and attempt to convince him that they have done everything possible to avoid the danger of trouble in Belgium.

Tottenham chairman Irving Scholar said yesterday: 'We want to point out the measures we would normally expect to take place, the measures we have taken ourselves and to ask whether UEFA feel there is any more we can do.

'We know we have got problems, but we are trying to do everything possible to avoid trouble and we are not getting much help from the opposing club or authorities.'

'I hope UEFA will use their good sense to realise that there's nothing more we can do. And we are always ready to learn from anybody who can advise us how to keep matches trouble-free.'

Although Spurs have not taken any tickets and appealed to their own supporters not to travel to Belgium, UEFA will still hold them responsible if there is violence inside or outside the ground in Bruges on Wednesday night.

Spurs manager Peter Shreeves added: 'You sense that UEFA are losing patience with English clubs and their supporters. We are doing what we think is correct for this club and this might be something of a test case.'

Tottenham were originally offered 1,200 terrace and 500 stand tickets by Bruges but this offer was withdrawn 24 hours later. Spurs accepted some seats which were in a segregated area but now even these have been sent back.

Urged

Tottenham have also urged Bruges not to supply travel agents or tour operators, either in Belgium or the United Kingdom, with tickets.

Tottenham have also threatened that any of their followers who do make the trip could face a life ban from White Hart Lane if they become involved in any trouble.

PETER SHREEVES . . . 'UEFA test case'

Scholar added: 'We are appealing to our supporters not to travel. We do not believe it would be in the best interests of British football or this club if they did.'

They have also asked that no tickets be made available to English supporters on the day of the match, but it is understood that tickets will be on sale.

The north London club are furious at the lack of co-operation they have received from Bruges.

At a recent meeting, Tottenham suggested safety measures which covered crowd segregation, control by stewards and security inside and outside the ground, but all their proposals were rejected by Bruges.

Abbas shows the way

ZAHEER ABBAS played an ideal captain's innings with an unbeaten 168 to steer Pakistan to a healthy 428 for nine in their first innings at the close of play on the second day of the first cricket Test against India at Lahore yesterday.

Zaheer, who came to the wicket with Pakistan shakily placed at 100 for three, guided his side to safety with a masterly display of concentration and defensive skill.

In the process he equalled Hanif Mohammed's Pakistan record of 12 Test centuries and with Ashraf Ali set a record of 142 for the seventh wicket against India, bettering the previous mark of 88 set by Mustaq Mohammed and Intikhab Alam.

Ashraf scored 65, his Test best, as the pair defied the Indian bowling after Kapil Dev had made an early breakthrough.

Kapil had Wasim Raja caught at short-leg by Mohinder Armanath without adding to his overnight total of three but the most successful bowler yesterday was left-arm spinner Ravi Shastri, who took three for 90.

India's first day hero, pace bowler Chetan Sharma, failed to add to his three wickets yesterday.

Frank's Atlantic crossing

BY A BOXING CORRESPONDENT

FRANK BRUNO, who meets American Jeff Jordan over ten rounds at the Albert Hall, London, on November 6, is likely to follow this with his second fight in America, in December or January.

Bruno, who scored a two round win in Chicago in July 1983, is being lined up to box on the Thomas Hearn v. John Mugabi world light middleweight title bill in Las Vegas.

Contests

There is the prospect of both contests being shown in London on closed circuit television.

Apart from providing further experience, an American appearance would be of value to Bruno as a chance to rehabilitate himself there following his defeat last May by Bonecrusher Smith, which was shown nationwide in the US.

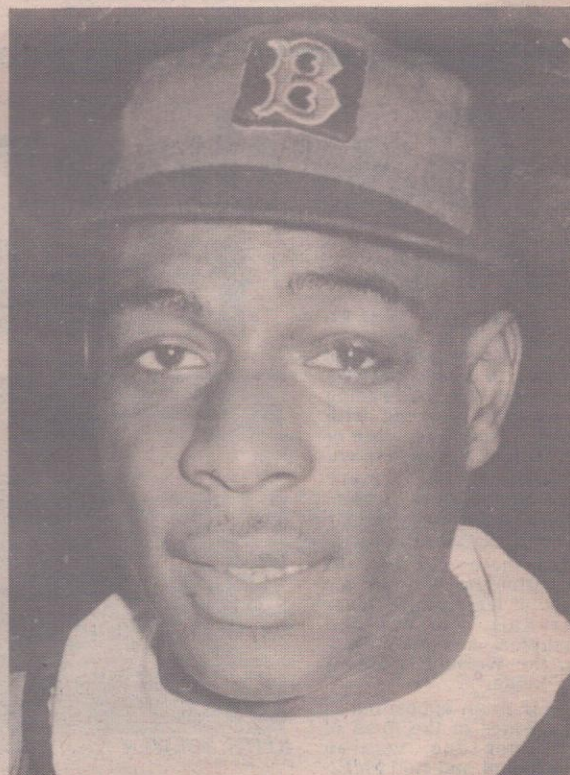

It will also enable manager Terry Lawless to keep him active during a period between November and March, when there are no London promotions available to him.

'I like to fight outside Britain because it is all experience and gives more people a chance to see him,' Lawless said yesterday.

Bill

It will be of benefit to Bruno to fight on the Hearn-Mugabi bill.

This is likely to be one of the great world title fights of the year, and will attract tremendous attention — though it is not yet certain whether it will take place in late 1984 or early 1985. And even if there is no closed-circuit television, Bruno is likely to gain exposure on television on both sides of the Atlantic.

Meanwhile he has to deal with Jeff Jordan, from Columbus, Ohio, a little known white heavyweight with a local record of 16 wins in 18 fights.

Promoter Mike Barrett describes him as big and strong and the right sort of opponent for Bruno, who still has to restore his reputation following the Bonecrusher Smith debacle.
