

SCARGILL ATTACKS POLISH COAL

NUM president Arthur Scargill last night bitterly attacked the Stalinist regime in Poland for its export of scab coal to break the British miners' strike.

He told a 6,000-strong rally in Sheffield City Hall that the union had received an 'offer' of assistance from the state-controlled Polish Federation of Trade Unions.

But to loud applause he said the NUM had written a reply rejecting their offer and condemning the Polish regime for 'behaving hypocritically'.

Scargill pointed out that the export of scab coal to

Britain had been stepped up by the Jaruzelski regime and that this was directly assisting the Thatcher government in its efforts to smash the NUM. Sheffield City Hall has

TUC 'WRIGGLES' ON PIT STRIKE

TUC LEADERS are 'wriggling like fish on a hook' to avoid calling action in support of the miners, NUM branch secretary at Hatfield Main colliery Peter Curran told News Line yesterday.

His bitter accusation was made after hundreds of pickets had clashed with riot police brought in to protect three scabs at the colliery near Doncaster.

A series of police cavalry charges through the village failed to drive the mainly young pickets off the streets before the scab bus sped out of the pit yard at lunchtime.

As pickets returned to the local miners welfare, Curran said: 'It's time the whole working class came out in support of the miners. It's time they recognised that their natural assets like gas and oil are being used by this government to subdue the working class. Never mind the 1920s, Thatcher is driving us back to the 1800s.'

'I'm pleased to see people, like the men at Austin Rover, coming out prepared to struggle. But I'm fed up with the TUC hierarchy making empty promises.

'For me they are wriggling like fish on a hook because they know the cards are down and we've no choice but to fight.'

'It's all very well standing up at rostrums, like at the TUC, and making pledges but when are they going to be carried out?

'The TUC has to make up its mind whether it is going to make this a battle for all workers or let us be cut to ribbons piecemeal.'

Curran is equally bitter about the role of Labour Party leader Neil Kinnock during the miners' strike.

'I listened to him speak at one of our summer schools some time ago. He didn't impress me then, and he impresses me even less now.

'Kinnock is after power on anybody's back. He's trying to please too many factions instead of sticking to his basic principles, if he ever had any.'

Curran said Hatfield miners would never work again with the scabs who have betrayed them and their union's historic fight for jobs.

Out of 1,150 men on strike at the pit a large proportion — 173 — have been arrested on picket lines. Many were seized when police last attempted to herd scabs into Hatfield in August. Two men went in for one day, but agreed to rejoin the strike.

Curran said the miners and their families were 'as solid as ever and will never give in'.

That was certainly the mood among the pickets who steadily grew in numbers outside the colliery yesterday morning after news spread that three scabs had gone in.

Barricade

A burning barricade, made of tyres and wood, was soon erected at the entrance to the pit lane — and then the police began moving in.

Convoys of police vehicles poured into the pit yard and when we arrived a column of riot police stretched the entire length of the lane and soon began marching out to confront the pickets.

Horses were sent in several times to try and disperse the strikers, but to no avail. Each time the pickets simply regrouped and began hurling stones.

A loud cheer went up when during one cavalry charge a policeman was sent crashing to the ground when his horse shied away from a hail of bricks and stones. Momentarily the mounted policemen around him were also cut off as missiles rained down on them from both sides of the road.

After the scab bus had sped out of the colliery gates, pickets turned their anger on the local police station, smashing several windows and damaging a car parked outside.

MOUNTED POLICE rampaged around Hatfield Main colliery in Yorkshire yesterday, not without incident. One officer chasing pickets down a street fell off his horse never seen a rally quite like this one. Four thousand jubilant miners packed the main hall, while another 2,000 had to be accommodated in overspill halls.

There were miners there from Yorkshire, North Derbyshire, Lancashire, as well as strikers from Nottinghamshire whose banners were placed on the stage before the rally to tumultuous applause.

NUM general secretary Peter Heathfield said the union had received financial support from Libyan nationals. It had come in the form of collections by members of the electricians' and engineering unions currently undergoing training at Heathrow airport.

Both Scargill and Heathfield strongly condemned the sell-out agreement between the pit deputies' union NACODS and the NCB, pointing out that it did nothing to satisfy the NUM's demand for the withdrawal of the pit closure programme.

Other speakers at the rally included NUM vice president Mick McGahey, shadow energy spokesman Stan Orme, Labour shadow transport minister John Prescott, Labour Party general secretary Jim Mortimer, and Augustine du Fresne of the French CGT miners' section.

Betty Heathfield spoke on behalf of the women's action groups.

Every mention of Labour leader Neil Kinnock's name drew an angry reaction from the audience, who welcomed their leaders' pledge that there would be no compromise in the fight to defend pits and jobs.

BUDGET CORRUPTION

BONN — New allegations of government misconduct were made as Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher yesterday began testifying before a Bundestag (parliament) inquiry into the Flick corruption scandal.

The West German Greens party said Genscher's political colleague and former Economics Minister Otto Lambsdorff had received $29,398 from budget funds to help pay legal costs.

A government spokesman said this was 'standard procedure' and that former finance ministers Hans Matthöfer and Manfred Lahnstein also received legal aid from the government.

TORIES CUT PAIN KILLERS

UP TO 1,000 brand-name drugs will no longer be available on prescription under the National Health Service, Social Services Secretary Norman Fowler announced yesterday.

They include minor tranquillisers like Valium and Librium, sleeping pills like Mogadon, pain-killers like Distalgic and Calpol and indigestion remedies like Nulacin and Asilone.

Instead of the brand-name drug, doctors will now be required to prescribe non-proprietary drugs with the same or similar composition.

It is the first time doctors' ability to prescribe medicines under the health service has been restricted. Fowler claimed the move could save up to £100 million a year.

However, the government has no intention of extending the system to cover all types of medicines. That would really cut into the profits of the drug companies, who pocket £1,400 million a year from the health service.

As it is the drug companies' losses will be very limited. Under existing arrangements with the government, the drug companies are compensated if their rate of profit falls below a fixed level.

Fowler told the Commons he would be consulting the medical and pharmaceutical professions before implementing the move, to ensure that drugs for treating particular conditions were not accidentally excluded.

He said that the medicines he proposed to exclude were prescribed for minor conditions.

'In most cases these conditions will remedy themselves without medical intervention and the medicines are prescribed for relieving the symptoms.'

'By any standards these are the less important drugs.'

During the debate on the Queen's Speech Fowler also warned that the government could intervene in the six-month strike by computer operators at the DHSS Newcastle centre unless they go back to work soon.

He said that unless they accepted the management's 'fair and reasonable' offer 'we will have to consider what further steps are needed to restore the services that pensioners and the public are entitled to expect'.

But north-east MP Roland Boyes pointed out that the so-called reasonable offer would involve some of his constituents taking wage cuts of up to £14 a week.

Spending cuts — higher charges

ENVIRONMENT Secretary Patrick Jenkin was claiming victory last night in a battle with the Treasury over proposed cuts in housing spending.

The Cabinet yesterday agreed to cut £65 million from next year's housing budget rather than the £600 million the Treasury had demanded.

Chancellor Nigel Lawson will announce the final outcome of the public spending review in a statement to the Commons on Monday.

He will also impose new borrowing limits on the nationalised industries which could include higher electricity prices.

Prescription charges are expected to go up to £1.80 per item and national insurance charges will also go up.

The outcome of the dispute over housing spending is being attributed partly to the close ties between Prime Minister Thatcher and the Housing Minister Ian Gow, her former parliamentary secretary.

The issue has been presented in the capitalist press as an epic battle, but in reality the Cabinet have never disagreed on the overall spending target, merely on the details of the cuts required to meet it.

Apart from the £65 million cut in housing, the Treasury also managed to reduce agriculture spending by £50 million, according to Farm Ministry officials. The Treasury had sought a reduction of £250 million in farm spending.

Envoy to be questioned on 'Belgrano'

THE British ambassador to Peru at the time the 'Belgrano' was sunk is to give evidence to the Commons foreign affairs committee next week.

Charles Wallace, now ambassador in Uruguay, will be questioned in public session on Wednesday.

Labour MP Tam Dalyell has claimed that the 'Belgrano' was torpedoed just as a peace plan acceptable to Argentina was being put forward by Peru.

On the same day evidence will also be given by the two authors of a book which links the sinking of the Argentine warship with the peace moves.

They are Arthur Gavanon, former Associated Press correspondent, and Desmond Rice, former president of Royal Dutch Shell in Argentina.

Labour MP George Foulkes yesterday tabled eight parliamentary questions about the missing navigational log of the 'Conqueror', the British nuclear submarine which sank the 'Belgrano', killing 368 men.

Foulkes is trying to determine the 'Conqueror's' exact movements before and after the sinking of the 'Belgrano' on May 2, 1982.

Crime

He said yesterday: 'I want to determine whether or not the "Conqueror" returned to the scene of the crime.'

● The Old Bailey trial of Clive Ponting, the senior Defence Ministry civil servant accused of leaking confidential documents on the 'Belgrano' affair, will begin on January 28.

Halt arms sales to Chile — call

FOREIGN Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe was urged yesterday to halt all sales of arms to the Chilean military dictatorship, which has just put the country under a state of siege.

A delegation headed by Labour MP Judith Hart also urged that Britain's vote in the United Nations be used to support the sending of a special rapporteur to Chile.

Hart, who recently visited Chile, said that officially Britain would only supply arms that could not be used against civilians.

Terrorise

But during her visit she had seen the use of British-supplied Wasp helicopters to terrorise the people of the shanty-towns.

Hart said for historical reasons Britain's importance in Chile was greater than that of other European countries.

With Hart on the delegation were Labour spokesman Donald Anderson,

HART

Frank Cooper of TASS, Quintin Gibbon of Chile Solidarity and Jon Barnes of the Chile Committee for Human Rights.

Hart said she would not have expected Howe to say even if the policy was being changed, but she claimed his reaction had been 'interesting'.

She accused the Foreign Office of adopting the 'typical FO stance that you can influence a country more by being friendly than by condemnation'.

The picket at Deborah Scaffolding's Huyton depot earlier this week

Asbestos strike

PICKETS have been outside Deborah Scaffolding's depot in Huyton, Merseyside, this week after two scaffolders were sacked for refusing to work near asbestos without protective clothing.

The men were sent to Ince power station which is being demolished. When they found they had to work near a restricted area which contains an asbestos hazard they asked for protective clothing, but were refused any.

Management then sacked the two men, both members of the Transport and General Workers' Union.

The sackings came days after the company made six men redundant, including a shop steward, without consulting the union.

When the other scaffolders took action in support of their two colleagues they were sacked; they were joined on strike the next day by men working in the depot yard.

The company has refused all union attempts at negotiation and the men feel they are in for a long and bitter dispute.

Pickets are out at all sites where Deborah Scaffolding are working, including Carrington chemicals in Manchester, and the men plan to step up the strike by picketing other depots up and down the country.

SONIC BOOMS IN NICARAGUA

MANAGUA — Loud bangs believed to be aircraft breaking the sound barrier were heard over the city and the Pacific port of Corinto yesterday. The suspected sonic booms shook houses in Managua and caused near-panic in some areas as the US air force and navy stepped up their provocations.

The sounds resembled those heard over Nicaragua last week and Nicaragua's military spokesmen said they were caused by US SR-71 surveillance aircraft.

INTELLECTUALS ACCUSED

BELGRADE — Six Yugoslav intellectuals were accused at their trial yesterday of describing the late President Tito as a dictator and the ruling Communist Party as a 'Stalinist oligarchy'.

A 20-minute indictment read by public prosecutor Danilo Nanovic charged the six with holding at least 24 meetings since 1977, at which they conspired to overthrow the bureaucracy.

The court had rejected defence pleas for the removal of Nanovic and two other key court officials on the grounds of bias.

Vladimir Mijanovic, 38, a principal defendant, said in reply to the indictment that the trial was clearly political and manipulated by powerful figures in the political establishment.

Cot death protests flood the Home Office

THE Home Office was yesterday flooded with telephone calls from distressed parents complaining about controversial remarks on cot deaths by pathologist Dr Donald Wayte.

He told a Wrexham inquest on Wednesday into a couple's fourth cot death tragedy that he believed the majority of the 1,000 such cases in Britain each year were due to unintentional smothering or suffocation of a baby by its parents.

Dr Wayte is one of about 30 pathologists paid a retainer by the Home Office and used by provincial police forces.

He was criticised by Dr Colin Morley, consultant paediatrician at Addenbrooke's hospital, Cambridge, whose research into babies' breathing problems was saved from the axe last July after a public appeal.

Dr Morley said: 'His view is extremely distressing for people who have genuinely lost their babies from a cot death. He has produced no evidence to back it up.'

'All the evidence suggests, in fact, that these babies die for reasons that we don't yet understand. Very few of them die because of suffocation or abuse by their parents.'

Dr Morley said his research had found that more than 90 per cent of cot death babies had abnormal fluid lining their lungs.

Professor Bernard Knight, a leading expert on cot deaths and a Home Office pathologist, said: 'Dr Wayte is swimming completely against the tide of research and current thinking.'

Tax disc strip search

A GRANDMOTHER who complained that police strip-searched her and kept her in a cell for seven hours after being stopped for a motoring offence has made an official complaint.

Mrs Kathleen Straine-Francis, 66, and her daughter, Mrs Donna Ellis, 24, claimed they were strip-searched by a police woman at Belvedere, Kent.

CAR STRIKE SPARKS

THE PAY strike of 28,000 Austin Rover car workers continued in full defiance of Tory anti-union laws yesterday, despite sabotage attempts by right-wing union leaders.

Electricians who had been ordered to return to work by their own union, the EETPU, voted to stay out on strike at Longbridge. And at the Cowley body plant, the electricians reported for work and then walked out again.

Other unions at the two main plants have stayed firmly out on strike with very few scabs crossing picket lines. Six unions face contempt fines and damages totalling millions of pounds if the company press ahead with legal action under the latest Tory legislation.

However, members of the T&GWU transport union have been told privately that its executive is prepared to abide by the Biennial Delegate Conference decision to defy Tory anti-union laws.

In the High Court, both the EETPU and the AUEW engineering union avoided legal action against them under the Trade Union Act.

The EETPU union executive, which has announced it is considering affiliating to the employers' organisation the Confederation of British Industry, found favour with the company shortly before the case opened.

Austin-Rover's electricians out

Letters

Austin Rover management decided to drop its case because the union sent out 'return-to-work' letters to each electrician employed by the company.

The company went ahead with the case against the AUEW. But the judge ruled that statements by the union's president Terry Duffy saying that the strike is unofficial gave him discretionary powers to spare the union the same penalties faced by the other six unions.

Lawyers for the AUEW said the judge, Justice Stuart-Smith, had found the company case against the union proved 'in law', but:

'The judge thought that, in view of the public statements made by the union, particularly that made yesterday by Mr Duffy regarding the strike, it would not be right to make any order.'

has totally repudiated the strike.'

But Austin Rover made it clear yesterday that it was ready to go ahead with damages and contempt of court proceedings after the weekend if the other six unions remained on strike at the factory.

The AUEW executive later announced that it was to consider the current pay offer of £5 a week — binding over two years — at its meeting on Tuesday.

Jaguar speed-up firms strike

COVENTRY — The Jaguar company has been hit in its first strike since privatisation in September.

Bob Ainsworth, an AUEW convenor at the Browns Lane plant, in Coventry told News Line that the men had 'increased productivity by 30 per cent, creating £115 million profit and that they wanted a return for their effort'.

Gates

The dispute is 100 per cent solid and pickets have been out at all the gates since last Thursday. Ainsworth, a perspective Labour councillor and a supporter of the Bell Green school campaign, said: 'The solidarity is a result of the break-neck speed-up and no attempts have been made to cross picket lines.'

He thought this was the reason the company had not yet sought an injunction.

'Jaguar will have to negotiate or we'll be out here until next February. In relation to the use of the anti-trade union laws and the miners' strike, he said: 'I now see a general strike as absolutely essential.'

'The trade union and labour movement must support the miners. Kin-nock's behaviour is a scandal and you can see how those unions, such as the EETPU and the AUEW are treated as soon as they have served their purpose from the treatment of the scabs in the mining industry; if NACODS had come out, the Tories had no intention of paying the scabs and would have left them unprotected by the police to face the music.'

After an all-night session which ended at 5a.m. yesterday it appeared that a deal may have been struck involving a £1.20 increase on the company's original offer.

The revised deal is due to be put to Jaguar's 7,000 strikers today.

PENSIONERS AGAINST ABOLITION

ABOUT 5,000 people, many of them pensioners, attended an anti-abolition rally yesterday organised by the Greater London Council. They went on to lobby MPs to press them to vote against the Bill to scrap the GLC and the metropolitan counties to be introduced in the Commons shortly. GLC leader Ken Livingstone (seen here with pensioners) said he believed there was a 50-50 chance of defeating the proposals.

VANESSA REDGRAVE VERSUS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Verdict due in 'blacklist' case

BOSTON — A federal jury yesterday began considering its verdict in a civil rights damages action brought by actress Vanessa Redgrave against the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The four-man, two-woman jury has to consider 14 days of testimony brought in the breach of contract suit.

Redgrave, a member of the Workers Revolutionary Party Central Committee, has accused the orchestra of violating her civil rights for cancelling her appearance in Stravinsky's 'Oedipus Rex' in 1982 because of her support for the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO).

US District Court Judge Robert Keeton gave the jury final instructions on Wednesday. The jury is not expected back until today.

Redgrave's lawyer Daniel Kornstein compared the orchestra's action with the blacklisting years of the 1950s.

'The heart of this case is that what the orchestra did is illegal,' Kornstein said. 'Today it's Vanessa Redgrave, tomorrow it could be any artist or musician.'

He said Oscar-winning actress's lawsuit was 'not just for Vanessa, it's for all of us — it is for everybody's civil liberties'.

He contended that the

cancellation was politically motivated. He said the orchestra's general manager, Thomas Morris, had made the decision to cancel days before it was announced and then went looking for excuses.

Of the facts in dispute, one area concerns the effect of a phone call from an orchestra trustee, Irving W. Rabb, to Morris, two days before the cancellation was announced.

Rabb testified he asked Morris if there was any way to get out of the performances. Rabb had no motive to falsify, he was proud of what he had done', Kornstein argued during his two-hour summation of the case.

Morris got Rabb's 'message', Kornstein continued. Firing Redgrave for her political beliefs would be illegal and unseemly and so Morris looked for a more palatable excuse, said Kornstein adding that the excuse was a trumped up issue of public safety.

The Boston Symphony's decision to cancel 'was a slander on the Jewish community of Boston and New York City'.

'Are you saying by cancellation,' asked Kornstein, 'that we would come up and do something disruptive?'

'We don't go to concerts to stand up and shout, or shriek or do rhythmic clapping. The Jewish people in Boston are not savages. The Jewish people in New York are not barbaric.'

He said BSO officials took the action 'so they could silence her political viewpoint'. The orchestra did not want to appear to be in sympathy with Miss Redgrave's politics.

'If you hire someone does it mean you endorse their political views?' he asked. 'Are we back to guilt by association?'

KOHL ADMITS TAKING FLICK CASH

BONN — West German Chancellor Kohl has admitted to accepting gifts totalling £41,000 from the Flick industrial empire.

Kohl made the admission during testimony on Wednesday before a parliamentary committee investigating corruption allegations.

The allegations led to the resignation on October 25 of Bundestag president (speaker) Rainer Barzel.

Barzel's resignation was preceded by that of Count Otto Lambsdorff, Economics Minister when Kohl came to office in October 1982.

Lambsdorff resigned in June this year, when it became clear he could face trial on charges of accepting money from Flick allegedly on behalf of his liberal Free Democratic Party (FDP).

Kohl told the committee he had accepted the gifts on behalf of his Christian Democratic (CDU) party between 1977-1979.

The committee is investigating charges that the Flick group tried to buy influence through large cash hand-outs to political leaders and their parties.

Documents published in the press show that Kohl received a total of £152,000 from Flick for the CDU.

He was questioned about tax concessions granted to Flick by the previous centre-left coalition of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt after the firm sold a big stake in the Daimler-Benz car firm for 2 billion marks (over £500 million).

Barzel, chairman of the Economic Commission of the Bundestag, is alleged to have received 1.7 million marks (£450,000) from Flick in compensation for standing down as leader in favour of Kohl in 1973.

The investigation has unearthed documents that reveal Kohl was a privileged protégé of the Flick company, and how money from the Flick empire smoothed Kohl's road to the top of the CDU and into the Chancellorship.

In 1979 millionaire Friedrich Karl Flick paid 384,000 marks for the office and salary of Christian Socialist Union deputy Kreile who is also the head of the board of directors of the Flick industrial empire.

Flick's men in Bonn ensured that the company avoided paying tax on the sale of Daimler shares to the tune of 850 million marks.

Kohl met regularly with Flick's top manager Eberhard von Brauchitsch and the president of the West German employers' association Schleyer.

He kept Flick informed of the latest developments within the CDU-CSU coalition.

Documents have been published also of notes Brauchitsch wrote after a meeting in 1975, when it was agreed that Kohl should be pushed to the top in what was called 'the Kohl operation'.

In a memorandum from Brauchitsch to Flick, of November 8, 1976, Kohl was asked to report on the position of the opposition on tax policies. He was amply rewarded for his services.

In 1981, Flick, dubbed the 'Paymaster of the Republic', distributed 25 million marks (£675,000) to political parties — 15 million to the CDU/CSU, 6.5 million to the FDP and 4.3 million to the SPD, according to the 'Süddeutsche Zeitung'.

In addition, 870,000 marks were paid each year for a 'political headquarters' in Bonn whose sole function was to organise the distribution of Flick's political funds and to influence political decision-making.

The Nazi connection

THE Friedrich Karl Flick empire employs 45,000 people in more than 200 firms throughout the world. Flick's wealth is estimated to be in the region of 6 billion marks (£16 million).

Much of the Flick family fortune was raised during the Nazi Third Reich, through slave labour arms contracts. Flick's father donated 7.5 million marks to the Nazis and his representative, Otto Steinbrinck, a former U-boat commander, was a member of Reichführer Heinrich Himmler's Friendship Circle.

The elder Flick was a close friend of Hermann Göring, who helped him take over the property of a Czech Jewish family, Petschek, who owned a third of Germany's brown coal reserves.

By the end of the war, Flick had the largest private industrial empire in Germany and was nominated as 'war economy leader' by Goebbels.

The younger Flick's industrial empire, controlled from Düsseldorf-Oberkassel, includes the Feldmühle paper factory, the Dynamit Nobel chemical works, Edelstahl Buderus steel in Wetzlar and the Krauss-Maffei tank factory in Munich.

In the United States Flick controls almost a third of the W. R. Grace and Co. conglomerate. He is also on the Board of Directors of Daimler Benz and the Deutsche Bank. He owns a ten per cent holding in Daimler.

Spanish probe

MADRID — Spanish Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez has ordered a legal inquiry into allegations that his Socialist Party received underhand payments from the West Germany industrial group, Flick.

Gonzalez has instructed the State Prosecutor to carry out an investigation 'to the last consequences', according to Cabinet spokesman Eduardo Sotillos.

A West German newspaper last week quoted a Social Democratic (SPD) member of the Bonn parliament, Peter Struck, as saying some money obtained by the party from Flick was channelled to the Spanish Socialists to help them win the 1982 elections.

Smoking hits the heart

BOSTON — Smoking may cause a deterioration of the heart muscle that invariably leads to death, according to a team of Wisconsin researchers.

Their study, reported in 'The New England Journal of Medicine', marks the first time doctors have found evidence in people linking smoking to cardiomyopathy, a disease in which the heart's muscles grow progressively weaker.

Only a heart transplant can cure the disease, which claims 10,000 American lives each year and progresses so rapidly that two-thirds of its victims are dead within three years after the condition is discovered.

Dr Arthur Hartz of the Medical College of Wisconsin and the leader of the study group, said subjects who smoked more than 20 cigarettes a day for over a decade were nearly three times more likely to develop cardiomyopathy than non-smokers.

Milder smokers had intermediate rates of the disease.

Pinochet tightens cordon

PINOCHET

SANTIAGO — A Catholic priest and human rights campaigner has been barred from returning after a trip abroad as General Augusto Pinochet's state of siege drew a cordon around the country's main cities.

The national capital, Santiago, and the coastal city of Valparaíso were the first hit as troops patrolled the streets to enforce a midnight-to-dawn curfew.

In Concepcion, the country's second city, military authorities have banned all trade union, student and political elections and meetings of any kind.

More than 100 people were arrested in the first few hours of the declaration of a state of siege as people wandered the streets after midnight, unaware of the measures.

Troops have raided the offices of the Popular Democratic Movement (MDP) coalition and arrested nine people.

Five officials of the Socialist Bloc were also picked up in Santiago, according to witnesses.

An angry statement from the office of Archbishop Juan Francisco Fresno disclosed the ban, part of a series of draconian measures mounted since the US-sponsored dictator ordered the repressive restrictions.

Fresno said the junta had informed him that it had barred Ignacio Gutierrez, a Spanish-born Jesuit, who heads the archbishop's human rights organisation Vicaría of Solidarity. He could not accept the order, he said.

Barred

A former Foreign Minister and supporter of Pinochet, Jaime del Valle, said Gutierrez had been barred because of comments he made during a meeting between Chilean bishops and exiles in Rome last week.

'He intervened in an obvious way in certain internal Chilean affairs. This is a man who has repeatedly been engaged in politics inside the country,' del Valle said.

Gutierrez, 43, was quoted as having said in Rome that 'extremely cruel people' had drawn up a list of about 5,000 Chilean exiles who cannot return home.

More troops go to Punjab

NEW DELHI — Army reinforcements were ordered into the Punjab yesterday as Sikhs prepared to celebrate the 515th anniversary of the birth of Guru (teacher) Nanak, founder of the Sikh faith.

Sikh leaders yesterday cancelled processions in the national capital to avoid more bloody confrontations.

The head of the New Delhi Sikh Temples Management Committee, Jaswant Singh Kalka, said there would be prayers in city shrines instead of processions to observe a day of peace.

India's most senior intelligence chief, Ram Nath Kao, 70, — the man who set up the notorious Research and Analysis Wing (RAW) and was directly responsible to assassinated former Prime Minister, Mrs Indira Gandhi — resigned yesterday.

The pro-government 'Hindustan Times' said senior police and intelligence officers were questioning a former army officer arrested in the Jammu and Kashmir state capital, Srinagar.

Blamed

Meanwhile, opposition leaders have blamed much of the arson, looting and murder in the country on officials and legislators of the ruling Congress (I) Party.

The leader of the Dalit Mazdoor Kisan Party (DMKP) said Congress Party legislators had 'incited people they had brought in from the outskirts to burn, loot and if possible murder Sikhs'. ('The Times', November 9, 1984).

He said the home in Lucknow of a legislator in his party, sheltering Sikhs, was attacked by a mob of Congress (I) loyalists.

The Policy Research Centre in New Delhi has admitted there was 'no government' for two days while pogroms raged against the Sikhs.

A senior spokesman at the centre said the government and troops had encouraged some of the most barbarous acts of anti-Sikh revenge since Pakistan was carved out of a large portion of the Punjab in 1947.

U.S. WARMONGERING ANGRERS MANAGUA

BY A FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT

MANAGUA — The Sandinist government yesterday delivered a strong protest note to the White House in the wake of US naval and aerial provocations off the Pacific port city of Corinto.

The note accuses newly re-elected President Reagan of a 'pathological obsession with destroying the Nicaraguan revolution'.

Nicaragua fired warning shots at a US spy aircraft that violated its airspace and harassed a coast guard escort for a Soviet freighter, Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto said yesterday.

Reagan had also deployed a warship 12 miles off the port, where a Soviet vessel was unloading cargo, and two US frigates earlier had sailed within five miles off the coast to harass a Nicaraguan coast guard escort for the freighter.

A US C-130 aircraft flew overhead at the same time and was chased away only after warning shots from an anti-aircraft battery were fired, d'Escoto said.

Several US aircraft had flown several times over Corinto on Wednesday, both before the arrival of the freighter and after.

The Sandinist Cabinet met in emergency session on Wednesday and drew up contingency plans to counter a US invasion it believes is imminent.

Radio press and TV announcements have warned the Nicaraguan people to be on alert and ready to be mobilised against the threat of an invasion.

The contingency plans include the possible evacuation of Corinto's 15,000 inhabitants.

President Reagan, a day after his re-election, told a press conference in Los Angeles that Soviet supplies of advanced warplanes to Managua were threatening the security of Central America.

It was clear that his warmongering accusations were fabricated to whip up an anti-Sandinist, anti-Soviet hysteria in the US media.

'We ourselves have been alerted and are surveilling (sic) that ship but we cannot definitely identify that they have MiGs there or any planes of any kind,' Reagan said.

D'Escoto poured scorn on the statement and described it as 'a smokescreen designed to mask what is really happening in Nicaragua and ... a part of President Reagan's pathological obsession with destroying the Nicaraguan revolution'.

'These violations are designed to create the appropriate climate for direct US military action against Nicaragua, including the massive bombing of our territory and aggression with the participation of American troops,' the protest note said.

The protest note also told the White House the Sandinist government had received intelligence reports that the US was preparing its crack paratroopers, the 82nd Airborne Division, for action in Central America.

'We don't doubt President Reagan is angry with our people for having voted in an electoral process in which a much higher percentage of voters elected our leaders than elected him,' d'Escoto said.

More than 82 per cent of Nicaragua's voters turned out for the polls on Sunday in which the Sandinist National Liberation Front (FSLN) won a clear, two-thirds majority.

Steel plant occupied

DUISBURG — Several hundred workers at the VDM steel works in this Ruhr town staged a day-long occupation of their factory in protest against closure plans. VDM, which manufactures steel pipes, are planning to transfer production to their main plant with the loss of up to 300 jobs. IG Metall (metal workers' union) representative, Gerhard Bludau, said: 'The atmosphere in the plant reached boiling point. People had lit candles on their machines as though they were at a funeral — but no one wants to give up the fight.' Our photograph shows the barricade erected by workers, festooned with banners saying: 'Unemployment — no thank you' and 'If we lose our jobs we also lose our town — 16.5 per cent unemployment in Duisburg'.

Spy trial in Harare

HARARE — Six Zimbabweans appeared in a Harare court yesterday on spy charges following Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's disclosure this week that his government had broken a spy ring.

Five were accused of spying for South Africa and the sixth was charged with recruiting spies. They were not asked to plead at yesterday's hearing and were remanded in custody until November 21.

The prosecuting attorney said a ministerial certificate would be issued forbidding bail to be granted to the six men.

Mugabe said on Monday that South Africa had sought the release of two white Zimbabwean intelligence officers detained last year after being acquitted on spy charges.

He said: 'Recently we discovered a spy ring in which blacks were involved.'

Two of the six charged yesterday gave addresses in the northern South African town of Messina. Court records said the man charged with recruiting, Joseph Mandevu, 31, was a member of the South African Defence Force (the South African army).

Stock exchange for Turkey

ANKARA — Turkey's first stock exchange is expected to open in Istanbul next month or in January, according to Ismail Turk, President of the Capital Markets Commission.

A new law authorising its establishment was published in the official gazette last month.

Most Turkish industry is in the hands of a few family-owned corporations that hold most of the stock and control most of seven licensed stockbroking firms.

Insurance companies, which in other countries would be major investors, are obliged by the US sponsored military dictatorship of Kenan Evren to concentrate their money in government stocks.

Police raid UDF offices

JOHANNESBURG — Security police yesterday raided offices of the anti-apartheid United Democratic Front (UDF), which sponsored a two-day strike by black workers.

The strike brought dozens of industries in Johannesburg and the Eastern Cape to a halt as thousands of workers from the dormitory suburbs of the Transvaal responded to the 'stayaway strike' on Tuesday and Wednesday.

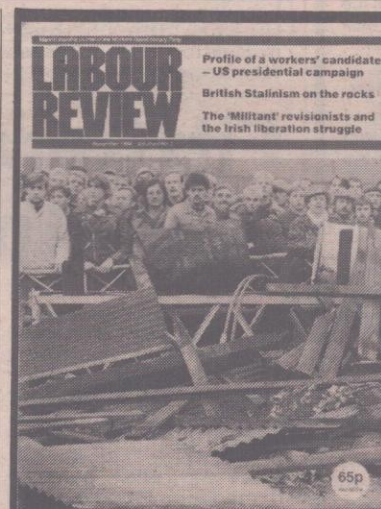

Plainclothes policemen carrying files were seen leaving the UDF offices in Johannesburg shortly after the raid.

Norman Manoim, a solicitor for the UDF, said police confiscated 40 documents and pamphlets in the search.

One item concerned the strike but most concerned the UDF's campaign for a boycott of elections in August for Pretoria's segregated coloured chambers.

A UDF spokeswoman said ten men searched the premises, investigating charges under the racist republic's notorious internal security laws that the UDF is a front for the African National Congress.

WINTER SYLLABUS 1984-1985

WEEKLY FROM NOVEMBER 4, 1984

The reformist and Stalinist bureaucracies and the struggle for revolutionary leadership in the working class

1. The economic and political crisis of world capitalism

The world capitalist crisis as the driving force of the world socialist revolution; the objective laws of capitalist decline and socialist revolution; the revolutionary nature of the political situation in Britain; the transformation of the capitalist state under the Tory Bonapartist dictatorship; the miners' strike and the struggle for power.

Reading: Lenin 'The State', 'State and Revolution', 'What is to be Done?'; 'State Within the State', a News Line investigation; Political letters of the WRP Political Committee 1-6; British Perspectives and International Perspectives, documents of the Seventh Congress of the WRP

2. The reformist Labour and trade union bureaucracies: 'The backbone of British imperialism' (Trotsky)

The history and significance of trade unionism in Britain: the trade union and labour bureaucracies as opportunist products and agencies of imperialism; the corporatist nature of the trade union bureaucracy; the distinction between bourgeois democratic rights and the democratic rights of the working class; the independence of the trade unions from the capitalist state as a revolutionary question; the reformist bureaucracies and the miners' strike.

Reading: Engels 'The British Labour Movement'; Lenin 'Imperialism, the Highest State of Capitalism'; Lenin 'The Proletarian Revolution and the Renegade Kautsky'; Trotsky 'Writings on Britain' Volume 2, 'Marxism and the Trade Unions'; Mike Banda 'Open Letter to Trade Unionists'. Political letters of the WRP Political Committee.

3. Stalinism: the most counter-revolutionary force in the world working class

The significance of the Russian Revolution October 1917; the isolation and economic backwardness of Russia as the objective source of the Stalinist bureaucratic degeneration of the Soviet state; the Stalinist bureaucracy not a new ruling class; unconditional defence of the nationalised property relations of the USSR; significance of Trotsky's struggle against Stalinism; the national reformist nature of 'socialism in one country'; the lessons of the Stalinist betrayals of the 1930s; Third Periodism and Popular Frontism; the counter-revolutionary role of Stalinism today; the crisis within British Stalinism.

Reading: Trotsky 'Revolution Betrayed', 'The Class Nature of the Soviet State', 'Germany 1931-1932', 'Whither France?'; Alex Mitchell 'Behind the Crisis in British Stalinism'; 'Robert Shaw — Fighter for Trotskyism' by Mickie Shaw.

4. Revolution versus Reform: The Building of the Workers Revolutionary Party and the Young Socialists

The crisis and bankruptcy of reformism and Stalinism and their common opportunist source; the building of the revolutionary leadership of the working class; the Workers Revolutionary Party and the Young Socialists. The struggle to oppose and defeat the counter-revolutionary bureaucracies and their revisionist defenders; the role of Labour governments; the tactic of the United Front; the organisation of the General Strike as the struggle for power; the smashing of the bourgeois state and the dictatorship of the proletariat; the fight for Community Councils (Soviets) and for a workers' revolutionary government.

Reading: Lenin 'Left Wing Communism, An Infantile Disorder'; Trotsky 'Transitional Programme'; Programme for a Workers Revolutionary Government; Letter of the WRP Political Committee No. 7.

NALGO WILL FIGHT DEPORTATION ORDER

BY A NEWS LINE
REPORTER

NALGO, the national and local government officers association, is planning a mass demonstration in support of Muhammed Idrish, a member whose fight against deportation received a set-back in the House of Lords yesterday.

Muhammed had an oral hearing with the Law Lords for leave to appeal to the House of Lords for indefinite leave to stay in this country but his appeal was refused by the Law Lords.

Muhammed can now expect a Letter of Intent to deport from the Home Office.

Motion

At NALGO's annual conference in June, delegates passed a motion of support for Muhammed and agreed that a day of action be organised within one month of the deportation order being served.

The date for the demonstration, to be held in Birmingham, will be set when Muhammed receives the Letter of Intent.

NALGO will also appeal to the Home Office adjudicator against the Letter of Intent.

NALGO has run a wide-ranging campaign in defence of Muhammed who the union sees as just one victim of racist immigration laws.

The union has won the support of 86 MPs including Neil Kinnock, 32 peers, and many ethnic and religious leaders.

Muhammed is a social worker in a West Midlands Dr Barnardo's Home. His employers say that his work with the youngsters is invaluable because he understands the problems ethnic minorities face in inner city areas.

Warning of protracted war

THE idea of a quick 'knock-out blow' nuclear war in Europe has been discredited, a leading defence expert told a Scottish conference on the likely effects of nuclear war yesterday.

A protracted war of attrition also using chemical and conventional weapons was more probable, Professor John Erickson, head of the Defence Study Department at Edinburgh university said.

He told the conference, organised by Glasgow and Strathclyde councils: 'If it is true that this war is not going to be over in one or two days, then I am afraid we are in for a lot more trouble.

'I would have thought the idea of a knock-out blow has now been discredited,' he said.

Other speakers included Professor Erlich of Stanford University and Dr Georgiy Golitsyn of the Soviet Academy of Sciences — both experts on the 'nuclear winter' theory.

The government's Civil Defence College and Scottish Home and Health Department refused invitations to send representatives because, they claimed, the conference was unlikely to be 'objective or dispassionate'.

Weapons

Erickson said that in population and area terms Scotland had the biggest concentration of weapons anywhere in the NATO or Warsaw Pact countries with about 200 locations likely to be regarded as targets in the event of war.

Erickson said the idea of nuclear free zones was an 'admiral principle', but the location of telecommunications and modern technology meant the only way to truly become a nuclear free zone was to opt out of modern urban civilisation.

Philip Steadman of the Open University said that in a nuclear war Scotland could expect 4 million casualties — 80 per cent of its population.

Briefly ...

AGRICULTURE Minister Michael Jopling has been summoned to appear before a Commons select committee to explain why a scheme set up last year to wipe out Aujeszky's killer pig disease is already more than £15 million in debt.

A SIEGE involving seven anti-Khomeiny student protestors, who barricaded themselves inside the London office of Iran Air yesterday, ended after 45 minutes when police forced their way in.

NUT cutlets should be eaten for Christmas dinner to end the annual slaughter of million birds, says the Vegetarian Society.

WEATHER

ENGLAND and Wales will have rain at times although some clearer interludes are likely and in the south west there may be some thunder. Over northern Ireland and Scotland it will be dry at first but showery outbreaks of rain will develop in the west and rain, heavy in places, will spread from south to east. It will be rather warm.

FitzGerald quits Anti-Apartheid

IRISH Prime Minister Dr Garret FitzGerald yesterday resigned from the Anti-Apartheid movement because of its links with Sinn Fein, the political arm of the IRA.

The Irish section of Anti-Apartheid confirmed Sinn Fein's affiliation last month.

Dr FitzGerald's move followed clarification of the Sinn Fein connection.

Letter

The Irish premier, a sponsor of the Anti-Apartheid organisation in Ireland since it was established 15 years ago, announced his resignation in a letter to the movement's chairman, South African Kadar Asmal, a law lecturer at Trinity College, Dublin.

Fitzgerald requested that his name be removed from the Anti-Apartheid notepaper.

In Dublin's political circles, Fitzgerald's action was seen as in line with government policy to cold-shoulder Sinn Fein at all levels.

Other moves in that direction have included a refusal by government ministers to meet local authority delegations involving Sinn Fein representatives.

A number of other ministers in Ireland's coalition government are likely to follow Fitzgerald's lead.

A spokesman for the Irish section of the Anti-Apartheid movement today expressed regret over Fitzgerald's resignation.

Yorkshire to fight receiver move

YORKSHIRE area NUM gave notice in the high court yesterday that they will fight proceedings to have a receiver appointed to take control of their funds.

By consent, Mr Justice Vinelott postponed for seven days an action by Bob Taylor and Ken Foulstone, which was due to come before the court next Monday. The defended hearing will now be on November 19.

The court move followed the ruling of Mr Justice Nicholls at the end of September that the miners' strike in Yorkshire is unlawful.

Funds

Taylor, 33, and Foulstone, 45, both from Manton pit, near Newark, Notts — which is in the Yorkshire coalfield — will argue that, because the strike is unlawful, it was a breach of trust on the part of the trustees to use union funds to support the stoppage.

Their lawyers will contend that, because of the breach, the trustees should be replaced by a receiver.

John Hendy, counsel for the Yorkshire NUM, told the judge that it would have been a 'physical impossibility' to have his evidence in time for a hearing next week.

He undertook to deliver the bulk of the evidence by Wednesday evening, which would then need to be considered by counsel for the two men.

AN INVASION by 60 van loads of riot police to escort a lone scab into Cortonwood colliery terrorised elderly residents in Brampton village early yesterday.

They were woken up in their bungalows overlooking the pit lane at 3a.m. by the sound of wailing sirens as the police vehicles arrived. Within minutes police horses began trampling through their normally peaceful estate while powerful torches were shone through their windows.

Predictably the Tory press hailed the emergence of the anonymous strike-breaker at the pit where the nine-month struggle for jobs began as a further sign that the strike is 'crumbling'.

But this was treated with the contempt it deserved by Cortonwood NUM delegate Mick Carter. 'No amount of bribery and coercion will break us,' he said. 'The Coal Board has admitted that the £650 they are using to bribe people back with is money already owed.'

The Cortonwood men have enjoyed the solid support of the community whose life-blood for generations has been the local colliery.

Beatrice Clayton, whose husband died from pneumoconiosis last January after 49 years in the pit, spent most of the night making tea for the pickets.

She told News Line: 'For more than eight months we've had no trouble down on that picket line. All the trouble last night was caused by the police. I'm disgusted with them.'

Beatrice, who has sons and grandsons at Cortonwood and other neighbouring pits, said she had seen two ten-year-olds on their way to school being roughly treated by police with riot shields.

Worst

'I remember 1926, but this is the worst. We've had Tory governments before, but never any as bad as this one. That woman Thatcher is evil and I don't care who hears me. This whole situation is unreal.'

'I support the miners because they are fighting for jobs, for their families to have a future.'

'Take my grandson who works at Goldthorpe, he's no job to go back to if the miners lose.'

Only 50 strikers were on the gates when the scab was brought in. But their numbers soon swelled to 700 as reports of the strike-breaking reached other collieries.

There were three arrests during clashes with the pickets who later attacked the police station at Wath-Upon-Deane.

The Cortonwood picket line — dubbed the 'Alamo' — has become a symbol of defiance during the last nine months.

It is covered in slogans, spelling out the pickets' hostility to the Coal Board and the Thatcher government. And it includes a recent addition underlining their contempt for leaders of the pit deputies union NACODS.

Pickets pointed out the irony in the fact that the Coal Board appeared so anxious to get men back to work at Cortonwood. Last March they were given five weeks' notice that their pit was to shut for good!

'Nowhere are the class antagonisms more sharply defined than between the miners and the ruling class. They run deeper than any mine shaft in the country.'

Crucial to understanding the struggle of the miners today, this pamphlet analyses the decline of the coal industry in the course of this century. Tracing the history of the struggle against closures and increased exploitation, it shows why only socialism can solve the crisis, and examines the problems of leadership in the miners' union.

Kinnock sneers at miners' strike

AS LEADER of the Labour Party, Neil Kinnock is doing a great job for the Tories! Not a day goes by without Kinnock lining up with the Thatcher regime and the capitalist state in attacking the miners.

His vilest attack yet was made in a private meeting of Labour MPs at the Commons on Wednesday. There are various versions of what he said, but they all add up to the same thing:

'There does not have to be a Gallipoli' ('Daily Telegraph'); Kinnock said 'he was not interested in achieving a Gallipoli' ('The Guardian'); and 'The miners could be leading Labour to a Gallipoli' ('Financial Times').

Gallipoli was a World War I imperialist slaughter. Tens of thousands of Australian and New Zealand soldiers were massacred as they attempted to storm a steep coastline in Turkey which was fortified with machinegun emplacements, snipers and impenetrable barbed wire.

It was the brainchild of Winston Churchill, the Tory hyena whose whole life was dedicated to fighting the British working class and the oppressed masses in the colonial and semi-colonial countries. He nurtured a lifelong hatred of the National Union of Mineworkers and as Home Secretary ordered the troops into Tony-pandy against the South Wales miners.

By comparing Gallipoli with the miners' strike, Kinnock is making a scurrilous comparison between Arthur Scargill and the imperialist brute Churchill. He is also insulting the courage and determination of the miners by falsely portraying their strike as a suicide mission which is destined for defeat.

Kinnock talks about the miners' strike as a 'Gallipoli' because he wants to see it defeated and over as soon as possible. For the same reason he has refused to speak at any of the five national rallies called by the NUM to win wider support for the 36-week strike.

Kinnock is not alone. This is the cowardly position of the whole of Labour's Shadow Cabinet. It also extends to the TUC right wing. As yesterday's 'Financial Times' reported: 'Some union leaders believe the strike is in its terminal stages and that the Labour movement's paramount responsibility now is to salvage what it can from the debris.'

This is the language of reformist cowardice and defeatism. It permeates all bureaucracies whether they are Labour Party or Stalinist. Faced with the Bonapartist state's onslaught on the miners and the trade union movement as a whole, these people can only emerge in their true political colours as servants of the Thatcher regime.

They dread the independent movement of the working class, and more especially when it is the miners in the vanguard. Because the strike threatens the existence of the Thatcher government, the Labour and TUC bureaucrats instinctively close ranks with the Tories in defence of so-called 'parliamentary democracy' and the capitalist state.

Just as they all rendered support to Thatcher in her imperialist war attack on the Malvinas (Falklands) in 1982, so today they are drawn into an undeclared bipartisan coalition to destroy the miners and their union.

We welcome the fact that the dirty political role of the Labour and TUC leaders is out in the open. Every time the two-faced reformist leaders are exposed, the labour and trade union movement is politically strengthened.

The whole working class owes a mighty debt to the miners, their wives and families for waging this tenacious nine-month struggle against the Thatcher regime and the state. It has flushed Kinnock, Hattersley, Orme, Willis, Basnett and company right out into the open.

It places point-blank before the miners and the working class the building of revolutionary socialist leadership — the Workers Revolutionary Party.

We call upon miners and their supporters to attend the rally in London on Sunday, November 18, to celebrate the 15th anniversary of the first Trotskyist newspaper in the world. (See advertisement on Page 1)

ORGANISE A GENERAL S

We need much more than cash

MONEY given to striking miners is a help, but what is needed is strike action alongside the miners, South Wales miner Pat Murphy told News Line yesterday.

Murphy is one of a team from Betws and Cynheidre collieries who have been raising support in the south London borough of Lambeth.

BY BEN RUDDER

Both he and colleague Wayne Rees say the financial support in the area has been 'marvellous'.

'One ten-year-old little girl came up to us the other day. She put a pound in the box and told us she had been saving up for weeks to give us the money. Things like that are out of this world,' Murphy said.

'But it must be said that however much the money from older trade unionists is a help, we need real support from them.'

'The most important thing for us is to get this strike over as quickly as possible with a victory.'

But to win, we need other trade unionists out on strike with us. They should stick with us in solidarity and tell this Tory government where they stand.

'We need to see a lot more unions involved with us. It seems that people don't have their eyes open to what could happen. The miners are the strongest union, and if they beat us, no-one else has a chance.'

'As for the TUC, they have shouted their mouths off lots of times, but nothing happens. Action speaks louder than words as far as I am concerned. They should come out with us.'

Murphy has little time for those who make attacks on the NUM leadership. He disagrees entirely with Neil Kinnock's accusation that Arthur Scargill is leading the miners to a 'Gallipoli'.

'Like thousands of others, I've been out for over eight months. It is too late to go back, and I'm not going back until we've achieved what we set out for.'

'Scargill could have been like Gormley, and just sat on his backside drawing his salary. But he's put himself on the line for me and my job and I will give him all the support I can give.'

Friend

'If it takes till next year, I'll be there and he'll be there. I consider him as a friend in need who is a friend indeed.'

Speaking of the conditions at home in the mining communities, Murphy said: 'Things are now getting very hard. To give you a personal example, my wife and two children have only £11 a week to survive on.'

'She has trouble with her back, and the physiotherapist has told her to go for treatment three times a week at a clinic five miles away. But when she went to the social security office, they told her she could only have 30p for travel. It's unbelievable what they will do to people to get them to submit.'

'But talking to my mates, we are all agreed that we will stay out until the end. They will walk all over us at the pit if we have to go back with our heads down, so we won't let that happen.'

Whittle barricade

STRIKING miners set fire to a barricade at Whittle colliery in Northumberland to stop scabs going to work at the pit.

The action followed clashes earlier yesterday at Murton and Vane Tempest collieries where arrests totalled 15.

The Coal Board has had a special bus covered in wire mesh for the run into Whittle colliery. The private company which took the scabs into work on Wednesday refused to lay on transport yesterday morning after an agreement with the NUM.

Over 400 police turned out to confront about 200 pickets at Whittle. The police eventually cleared the barricade out of the way, but only when the scab bus had been delayed by several hours.

Majority

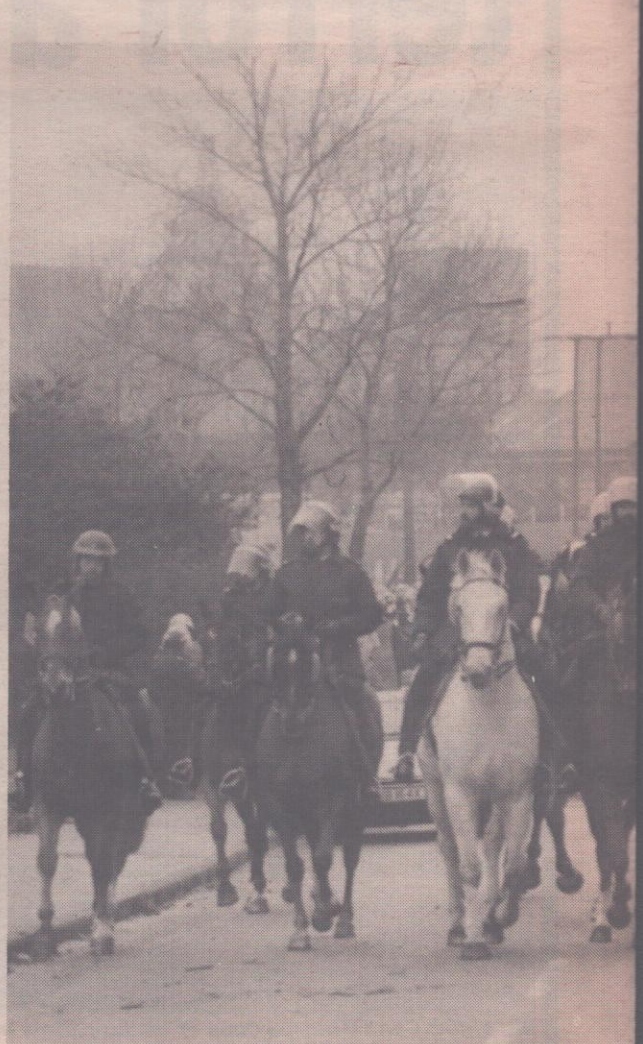

Durham area NUM president Denis Murphy said: 'The men who are going back are undermining the great majority of Northumberland miners who have been on strike for over eight months.'

'The men who have gone back are just thinking about the short term. They should remember that one Christmas is not a lifetime. These men are giving away their working lives by going back.'

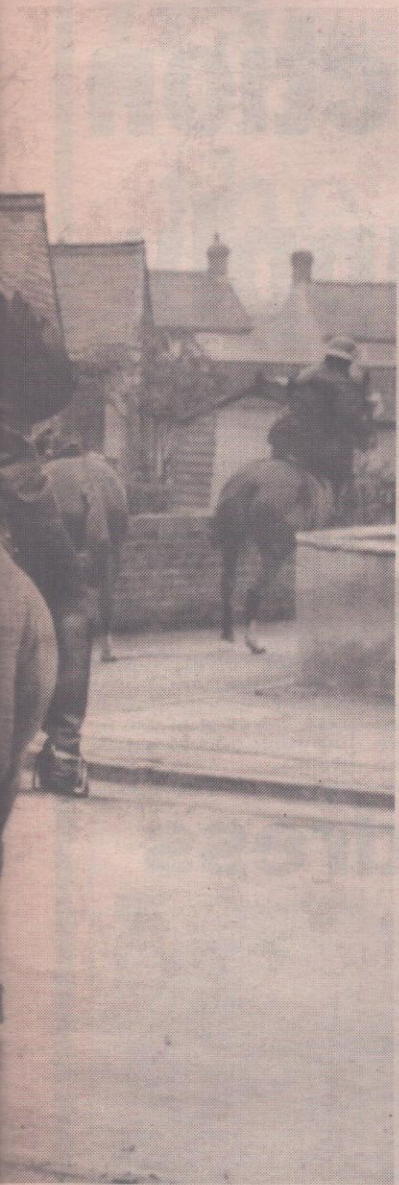

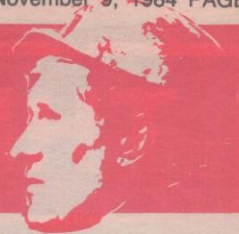

'Our men have been on strike for eight months on a principle — the principle that they will be able to work for the rest of their lives. The people that are going to work are undermining that principle and playing into the hands of Ian MacGregor and Mrs Thatcher.'

Kinnock's class breakaway

LABOUR leader Neil Kinnock 'is trying to break the Labour Party away from the working class and have a middle-of-the-road party,' said Alex Howie, NUM branch secretary at Scotland's oldest pit, Frances, near Kirkcaldy.

This is the lesson of Kinnock's refusal to attend the miners' rallies, Howie told News Line.

'Our members in Fife are very disappointed at Kinnock's attitude to Arthur

BY CHRIS CORRIGAN

Scargill and to our struggle. Scargill is the first president of the union ever to carry out his policies to the letter.'

Kinnock, on the other hand, 'is not strong enough to stand up to the right wing,' Howie went on. 'I think he forgets that the Labour Party is built on the trade union movement.'

'It is now up to the leaders of the TUC to stand up and be counted. We've had good support from the seamen, railwaymen and parts of the Transport and General Workers Union, but I'm disappointed in the TUC.'

'It was unanimously agreed to give full support to the miners but the leadership has failed to carry this out.'

The mining communities of East Fife are determined to win this struggle and prevent the destruction of their communities, Howie insisted.

A Christmas fund has been set up to provide the four-to-five thousand miners' children in the area with entertainment and gifts.

But the strike in Fife could not go on without support from outside the mining area. 'The people of Dundee and Aberdeen have been fantastic. Without them we would be in real difficulty,' he added.

Bersham vote for strike

A SECRET ballot on the miners' strike held at Bersham colliery, North Wales, yesterday went in favour of continued action. The striking miners at the pit who voted were greeted by over 100 pickets from the Lancashire coalfield who came to lobby the meeting.

Bold colliery branch treasurer Colin Lenton said he was pleased with the result of the ballot, but considered that the decision to hold it in the first place was 'a complete sell-out after eight months'.

He said the result had 'proved to the government the rightness of what we are doing. Everybody has said this is the most crucial vote in the NUM's history, and it has given us a fantastic result.'

The ballot vote was 154 in favour of the strike and 145 against.

Before the strike, miners at the colliery had voted by a 2-1 majority not to take strike action.

NUM president Arthur Scargill said the result confirmed support for the union's campaign. 'When the Bersham branch voted on this issue in March the result was 60 per cent against strike action. The change demonstrates the fierce determination of miners and their families to save our industry.'

A THAMES estuary power station was taken off the national grid yesterday after transport and engineering union workers refused to handle the high levels of oil being sent in to run the station.

A meeting last night also discussed a similar action at the Tilbury power station.

The West Thurrock power station is the first to be taken off the national grid through action by other unions since the miners' strike began.

A spokesman for the Kent miners told News Line: 'We are very pleased with the decision at West Thurrock, and hope things go well for us at Tilbury.'

The withdrawal of West Thurrock power station from the national grid followed a decision earlier in the week by T&GWU transport workers to turn away two oil tankers from Tilbury power station after a meeting with members of the seamen's union.

BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT

The action against the tankers 'Raflin' and 'Telmar' followed the refusal by transport workers at West Thurrock power station on Tuesday to unload the oil tanker 'Stein'.

It is known that the 'Telmar' is currently anchored off Southend.

AUEW engineers agreed with the other two unions to abide by a joint agreement signed before the miners' strike began.

that no more than 'normal' levels of oil be delivered to power stations in the Thames estuary.

The decision to abide by the agreement may have far-reaching effects on the Tory government's massive use of oil burning in power stations to try and break the miners' strike.

Not only has the use of oil risen to five times the 'normal' level, but at least two of the Thames estuary power stations were not even in use before the miners' strike began.

Heathfield to address Congress House

NUM secretary Peter Heathfield will address a meeting called by the South-East TUC at Congress House tonight in support of a mass demonstration at West Thurrock power station in Essex next Monday.

The mass picket, called by Kent NUM, is part of the intensification of picketing at power stations in line with the policy adopted at the TUC congress in Brighton in September.

It also aims to ensure that unions in electrical supply follow the TUC guidelines. Transport union members at West Thurrock power station are already blacking all substitute oil and refusing to unload oil vessels.

The executive council of Region 1 of the Transport and General Workers' Union has agreed to join the demonstration. Dockers will also be there. Union officials speaking on the picket line will be Jack Dromey (T&GWU), Sam McClusky (National Union of Seamen) and Campbell Christie of the Society of Civil and Public Servants.

HEATHFIELD

TV film exposes police conduct

SHEFFIELD Policewatch this week released a new report illustrating the gravity of the situation now facing miners' pickets.

It demonstrates that violence and intimidation emanates from those who are policing the picket lines.

Furthermore, the Sheffield group says that the general public has been subjected to eight months of 'distortion and prejudice' by the Tory press and media.

Yesterday BBC2 transmitted a documentary film, 'Taking Liberties', jointly made by the BBC's Community Programme Unit, Open Space, and Sheffield Policewatch.

Sheffield Policewatch says the truth about 'picket line violence' has not been shown before because:

● THERE is a consensus against believing such things could occur in this country;

The Sheffield Policewatch report demonstrates that violence and intimidation emanates from those policing picket lines

- THE agencies of the state do not want it to be seen;
- THE majority of the media representatives rely on what they are told and shown by police spokesmen and press bureaux.

The news and current affairs coverage has been almost exclusively devoted to portraying striking miners as 'violent and destructive'.

Miners and lawyers will hold a press conference in London today to answer questions and provide further evidence about the issues raised by the programme.

Record for miners

'The Enemy Within' is releasing next Friday a record called 'Strike' — all proceeds from it will go to a miners' solidarity fund.

The record uses quotes from speeches of Arthur Scargill and the voices of miners to bring out the issues of the miners' strike.

The group say that seeing it high in the pop charts would be further evidence of large support for the miners.

Because of a hostile attitude from the media to the miners' struggle the group say it will be very difficult to promote the record by normal means.

They are urging all those who can to buy the record in its first week of release.

The big record companies have turned down 'Strike' and it has been produced on the independent Rag Trade label (catalogue number RT 151) in both 7 and 12 inch versions.

BOOKS

A weekly review of the latest publicationsHow Philby foiled
the Albania plot

A PLOT by United States and British intelligence to tear Albania away from the Soviet bloc during the 1950s, was completely bungled, according to a new book.

Several thousand people, a significant part of Albania's population, then only two million strong, died as a result of Western attempts to foment a counter-revolutionary uprising.

Nicholas Bethell in 'The Great Betrayal' says that Britain and the United States sent Albanian anti-communist guerrilla squads into the country by land, sea and air on a total of eight abortive missions between 1949 and 1953.

The existence of the operation was first revealed in 1968, but remains so officially secret that both Washington and London still deny that it took place and some of the people pictured in this book have their faces blanked out.

In this the first full account of the operation, Bethell quotes British government papers as saying the object was to detach Albania from the Soviet orbit and start a chain reaction across Eastern Europe.

Plan

But the plan was betrayed from the start by its joint commander, Kim Philby who now lives in Moscow as a colonel of the Soviet KGB security police.

Bethell suggests hopeless security and a farcical saga of bungling were almost as much to blame.

Error even cancelled out betrayal when one parachute squad was saved from capture because the straying pilot dropped them miles from where Philby had told the Albanians to expect them.

The effort to destabilise Enver Hoxha's regime in Albania, then still a Soviet ally, was initiated by Britain, partly as a response to Moscow's coup in drawing Czechoslovakia into its orbit and the Soviet blockade of Berlin, Bethell says.

Britain's efforts until then had been confined to beaming daily propaganda broadcasts at Albania, which were hurriedly rescheduled when it was pointed out they were being transmitted 90 minutes before the country's electricity supply came on.

Members of anti-communist exile groups, including royalists who wanted to restore King Zog, were drawn together by the British for training on Malta.

Nine men were landed by boat in the first mission, in October 1949, a few days after Philby had been briefed in London on the plan prior to sailing to the United States to join the American co-commander, James McCarger, in Washington.

The anti-communist guerrillas were to persuade villages to form resistance groups, promise airdrops of British supplies and then retreat to safety through Greece.

Mission

But, says Bethell, throughout the operation the airdrops never came and villagers refused to take the mission seriously.

Albanian security forces often knew when parachute drops were to take place and were waiting to catch the guerrillas.

In one instance, a CIA plane destroyed their own mission by dropping anti-Hoxha leaflets in a valley where the guerrillas were waiting to carry out an operation, thus drawing hundreds of police to the area.

The Albanian operation continued for another four missions despite the suspicion that Philby had already blown the plot. Control had already passed to the Americans, who continued to train exiles at a secret base in Munich, West Germany.

Exiles quoted in Bethell's book accuse Washington of 'making use of Albania as a guinea-pig, without caring about the human losses, for an absurd enterprise that was condemned to failure.'

Africa's post-war history

ACCRA in the Gold Coast (Ghana) was the scene in February 1948 for rioting that marked the beginning of a new era for colonial Africa.

In the middle of a campaign against high prices, a protest march of ex-servicemen drew fire from a British officer which killed two. The riot spread and prison gates were battered down and inmates released.

Martin Meredith's attempt to summarise the whole of post-war history in Africa concentrates on this early period. He argues:

'The protests on the streets marked the coming of a new generation, disgruntled and restless, thrusting for their own place in society, ready to challenge not just colonial rule but the authority of the Gold Coast chieftoms on which the British had relied for so long.'

Decisive

In short, it was the masses themselves, not the overseas educated African elite, who were decisive in the fight for independence. Nkrumah, recently returned from London, was one of the leaders jailed for inciting the riots — and indeed it was from a second term of detention that he won the 1951 election and his release to form the government that achieved the independence of Ghana in 1958.

Meredith draws attention to a secret memorandum to the British government prepared in 1947 by Andrew Cohen, head of the African division of the Colonial Office. He warned that concessions to the elite would counter the rising nationalism of the masses.

Meredith shows that nationalism building up, especially as 74,000 Africans who had been British soldiers returned to their homes, fuelling the drift to the towns where shanty and slum houses were common.

And he shows the American interest in the break-up of the British and French empires which threatened their post-war domination of trade.

In the Congo (Zaire) the CIA plotted the assassination of Patrice Lumumba, and the United States and the United Nations con- nived at a coup to establish stability. But stability was impossible in a country of 14 million people, of whom only 136 a year were completing secondary school, only 16 in total were university graduates and there were no Congolese doctors or secondary school teachers.

Gloomy

For Meredith, the corruption, inequality, coups and dictatorships that often followed independence were the product of political inexperience. Having started with the world developments which gave rise to the post-war independence movement, he then largely ignores the impact of the world crisis.

His conclusions, therefore, are immensely gloomy, projecting poverty on into the future as the debt crisis mounts. He quotes the Economic Commission for Africa's verdict that the future 'is almost a nightmare'.

US colonel F.H. Dunn inspects 'Company 400', Albanian counter-revolutionaries, at Hohenbrunn near Munich in November 1950

Mediaeval detectives

ON the surface, Umberto Eco's best seller, now in paperback, is a murder mystery set in an Italian abbey.

One after another, monks die horribly, and in the midst of political negotiations Brother William Baskerville, with a most subtle analysis, traces the deaths and finds who is responsible for them and why.

Two monks are hauled away by the Inquisition, charged with heresy, with them is a girl from the village charged with witchcraft.

Adso, William's scribe, who tells the story wants to help her, but William tells him 'She is already burnt flesh.'

At one point, the Abbot says to William 'As for the heretics, I also have a rule and it is summed up in the reply that Arnold Amalaricus, Bishop of

'The Name of The Rose', by Umberto Eco, Picador £2.95 paperback, translated from the Italian by William Weaver

Giteaux, gave to those who asked him what to do with the citizens of Bézier: Kill them all, God will recognise his own.'

History in this religious dictatorship, is falsified, and philosophy, medicine and science are suppressed. the reader is forced to see what the Middle Ages took for granted.

In this novel obscurantism is triumphant. There is no way of deriving knowledge from the material world, symbolically represented by the locked door of the abbey library. The murders (and all the other events) relate to the discovery of a unique Greek manuscript in the library.

In trying to rescue the book from the unreason of the community, William and Adso only succeed in burning the entire abbey to the ground — most appropriately.

'The Name of the Rose' is a very big book — 502 pages — and incredibly detailed.

It makes no concessions to its readers — what other novel is organised around seven days of monastic church services and contains vast slabs of Latin and leaves the reader to cope with both as a sort of discipline? — but it remains astonishingly readable.

The disgusting deaths, perversions and tortures represent a world that is an analogue of our own:

Umberto Eco is unwilling to give anything away, and you have to draw your own conclusions.

But it is not accidental that the first section of the story takes place in a modern setting: to be precise, in Prague on August 16th, 1968.

Briefly...

E for Additives by Maurice Hanssen — Thorsons, £2.95

DO YOU know what it means when squash is coloured with E102, stabilised with E466 and preserved with E211? This is the book to make sense of the EEC codes for flavourings, colouring and other food additives. Most are natural, harmless substances, but because some can cause allergic reactions it is extremely useful to have this clear account of what each number stands for and what adverse effects, if any, have been attributed to it.

'Reinventing Man' by Igor Aleksander and Piers Burnett, Pelican, £2.95

A SUMMARY of robots and their current applications, particularly in industry, with speculations about artificial intelligence. The authors discuss the ways in which a robot 'brain' is different from a human brain, and they explore the consequences of developing robots many times more complex than those which today weld and paint.

Fair Test to follow up

FAIR TEST (3.15) can confirm his Newbury superiority over Manimstar in the Poppy Handicap at DONCASTER today.

Ian Balding's colt has had a frustrating season — much like his trainer — but hit form with a vengeance at the Berkshire course last month, in a week when the Kingsclere horses were winning everywhere.

Under Pat Eddery, Fair Test stormed to the front at the distance and ran on much too strongly for the unwilling Manimstar. Manimstar finished threequarters of a length adrift but would have been nearer had he not put his head in the air.

The chief danger in a typically open end-of-season race may be Dawn's Delight, who has the 'Portland' at this course as one of her scalps and showed she was still in the pink of condition by running Valley Mills to half a length here at the last meeting.

CHELTENHAM Gold Cup hero Burrough Hill Lad (2.10) returns to the scene of his greatest triumph when making his seasonal debut in the Standard Life Handicap Chase.

EUROPEAN SOCCER REVIEW

RANGERS SURPRISE BRADY

INTER MILAN'S outstanding midfielder Liam Brady — the former Arsenal star — admitted Rangers' tactics had surprised his side on Wednesday night as the Glasgow club so narrowly went out of Europe.

The Italians, who had brought a three-goal lead to Ibrox from the first leg, were glad to have that behind them as Rangers attacked with passion and won 3-1.

And Brady said: 'We were surprised to find John McClelland, who is an Irish international defender, up front and using his height and weight as a striker.'

'There is no doubt he played well in that role and gave us a lot of trouble. In fact, Rangers really turned it on and showed how dangerous they can be.'

'But I had the feeling after we got our goal from Altobelli in 15 minutes that we would be going through. That was an important score, making it so difficult for Rangers because we had an away goal.'

Rumours

And Brady scotched rumours that he could be moving back to Arsenal. 'I have been having a slightly difficult time but I was much happier with my form on Wednesday.'

There is no truth in the rumour. I will not be moving to Arsenal.'

But McClelland, the other man who caught the eye at Ibrox on Wednesday night, flew south yesterday to sign for Watford in a $275,000 deal.

McClelland, who has been operating on short-term contracts since demanding a transfer during the close season, had made it clear that the game against the Italians would be his last for the club.

Rangers had originally asked for £400,000 for the 28-year-old defender who cost £90,000 from Mansfield 3½ years ago. It seems likely that Watford will use most of the cash they received from Celtic for Maurice Johnston to try to plug their leaky defence.

Rangers' manager Jock Wallace cleared up the mystery of why his Scottish international winger Davie Cooper was missing for the match. Said Wallace: 'He took two knocks against Dundee United in the Skol Cup final and it was too much of a gamble.'

Front

'When I decided on Tuesday afternoon that he was not fit enough to play I took the gamble of playing McClelland up front for the high crosses and it almost came off.'

'We beat one of the best sides in Europe but still have not progressed into the next round. I am so sorry for the players, who sweated blood and did not get anything out of it.'

JOHN MCCLELLAND . . . Fine departing game for Rangers before signing for Watford

McLean's gamble pays off

DUNDEE UNITED boss Jim McLean admitted he had gambled in Europe on Wednesday, but his move paid off.

After United had swamped Austrian UEFA Cup opponents Linz 5-1 in the Tannadice return, McLean paid tribute to his 'young brigade'.

After last weekend's shock axing of the 'old guard' McLean decided to throw in his lot in Europe with the younger element on his United staff.

And it paid off as the side maintained their remarkable home European run, completing a 7-2 aggregate win.

Trumps

Young striker Tommy Coyne, whose £65,000 signing from Clydebank last season has produced a question mark from the home support, finally turned up trumps.

Not only did he break his Europe 'duck' on his debut but the fans finally got well and truly behind him as he found the net twice.

Said McLean: 'Ours was a typical cup tie performance — in fact, we have produced only one bad display in midweek Cup football all season.'

'You worry about introducing new faces, but it paid off on this occasion.'

Celtic flashpoint

CELTIC became the victims of gamesmanship by Rapid Vienna on Wednesday night after reaching the European Cup Winners' Cup quarter final with a 3-0 win clouded by controversy.

The Austrians, who had come to Parkhead with a 3-1 lead, tried every trick in the book in an effort to persuade the Swedish referee to abandon the tie after Celtic had established an aggregate score of 4-3.

And now, the official UEFA observer Dr Hubert Claessen, from West Germany, is in the middle of a row over his alleged comments at the end of the game.

The flashpoint in an astonishing match — which lasted 19 minutes over the regulation 1-1½ hours — came shortly after Vienna defender Reinhard Kienast was sent off and two bottles were hurled on to the pitch from the terraces.

Rapid substitute Rudolf Weinhofer immediately collapsed holding his head — although television pictures clearly showed neither bottle landed in the vicinity of any player.

The game was held up for 11 minutes as Weinhofer received treatment, during which time the Austrian players looked set to walk off only to be coaxed back on by their coach Otto Baric.

Afterwards the angry Austrian party stormed out of Parkhead without commenting on the game — although they reported that Dr Claessen had told them 'should have walked off' and had they done so the game would have been replayed.

However, those remarks were dismissed as 'nonsense' by Scottish FA secretary Ernie Walker, who said: 'The UEFA observer has been misquoted. It is nonsense to say that there could have been a replay. Dr Claessen will not give an interview as he will give his observation to UEFA and not the media.'

Regret

Celtic chairman Desmond White added: 'We very much regret the bottle-throwing incident, but we understand from the observer that he saw the bottle land on the pitch but did not see it strike a player.'

Meanwhile, Celtic manager David Hay, who saw his side reach the quarter-final with goals from Brian McClair, Murdo MacLeod and Tommy Burns, said: 'We do not condone the bottle throwing and it was the most stupid thing the person responsible could have done. However the actions of Rapid afterwards just showed the tactics they were prepared to stoop to.'

Wednesday night's hostility was not the first time Scottish and Austrian players have been involved in trouble. An international match between the two countries at Hampden Park 21 years ago was abandoned after violence on the pitch.

Soviet team wins second-round match

THE SOVIET Union's soccer fans were given good reason to smile yesterday as all four of their club sides in the three major European competitions won their second-round matches.

Soviet Champions Dnepropetrovsk beat Levski Spartak Sofia of Bulgaria 2-0 at home to draw level 3-3 on aggregate and go through to the quarter-final of the Champions' Cup on the away goals rule.

Oleg Raran after 11 minutes and Viktor Kuznetsov after 24 minutes scored for the Soviet side, who equalled the success of Dynamo Minsk last season and Dynamo Kiev in 1983 in reaching the last eight.

Dynamo Moscow, who were the first Soviet side to reach a European club tournament final when they lost 3-2 to Glasgow Rangers in the Cup Winners' Cup final of 1972, swept through to the last eight of this season's competition.

They won 1-0 in Malta against Hamrun Spartans to clinch a 6-0 aggregate victory in a competition which has been a happy hunting ground for Soviet sides. Chesnokov scored the only goal.

Dynamo Kiev won the trophy in 1975, beating Ferencvaros in the final, and Dynamo Tbilisi repeated the feat in 1981 when with a wonderful attacking team they beat Carl Zeiss Jena.

The Soviet Union's two clubs in the UEFA Cup also progressed safely, though Dynamo Minsk's success against Sporting Lisbon went to the ultimate stage of a penalty shoot-out.

Spartak Moscow had much less trouble eliminating Lokomotiv Leipzig 3-1 on aggregate following a 2-0 win on Soviet soil on Wednesday afternoon. Spartak's scorers were Yuri Gavrilov in the 26th minute and Sergey Rodionov after 47 minutes.

Double problem for Shreeves

TOTTENHAM manager Peter Shreeves was left with a double problem after the UEFA Cup holders had reached the last 16 of this season's competition.

Shreeves was without Glenn Hoddle and Chris Hughton for Wednesday night's 4-2 aggregate success against Bruges at White Hart Lane.

Gary Mabbutt came in for only his fourth game of the season at left back and Micky Hazard proved a midfield inspiration in place of Hoddle as Spurs won 3-0 on the night.

Faith

'It gives me a problem,' confirmed Shreeves. 'I must decide whether to bring back Hughton or keep faith with Mabbutt, who had a tremendous match.'

'Hoddle has had a super three days training this week and I'll make both decisions on Friday.'

Shreeves added: 'It's the club we are all thinking about. Everybody wants us to do well — and I don't guarantee anybody a first team place.'

GLENN HODDLE and MICKY HAZARD . . . present manager Shreeves with pleasant dilemma works itself out,' said Shreeves philosophically.

Heart

Wednesday night's victory has put the club in good heart for Saturday's trip to Nottingham Forest, although Shreeves acknowledged: 'The crowd may have been a bit disappointed with our second half showing.'

Spurs romped into a three-goal first half lead through Mike Hazard after five minutes, Clive Allen after 28 minutes and Graham Roberts with a superb 30-yarder eight minutes before the interval.

After that it was safety first for Spurs, although Bruges gave them some anxious moments.

EUROPEAN SOCCER REVIEW

REDS PRAISE DEBUT BOY

MANCHESTER United unearthed a new star in local-born teenager Bill Garton as they withstood a nail-biting challenge by PSV Eindhoven to reach the third round of the UEFA Cup.

The 19-year-old centre half from Salford made his European debut after only 25 minutes when Kevin Moran limped off with hamstring trouble, and he was a tower of strength as the Dutch team pulled a goalless tie into extra time.

Even match winner Gordon Strachan, whose fifth successive penalty conversion since his move from Scotland settled the match in the second minute of extra time, conceded: 'Garton was outstanding, absolutely brilliant. It shows we have a lot of good young players at the club.'

With Moran doubtful for Saturday's game at Leicester, Garton looks set for a run in the first team. Norman Whiteside, who replaced Frank Stapleton in the second half for his first appearance in 11 games, could also stay, providing further evidence of United's strength in depth.

But their hero was Strachan, who outfoxed former Nottingham Forest goalkeeper Hans Van Breukelen to decide a match that could easily have swung against United.

Strachan said: 'He moved early so I had to hit it a bit higher than I usually do. I think his mates must have been sending him tapes of Manchester United.

'There's no doubt they are one of the best sides I've played against in Europe. The pressure was really on us.'

Battle

The Dutch, fast-raiding in attack and uncompromising in defence, probably deserved to be undone by a foul. Atkinson said: 'It was a battle, a war of attrition, a night for commitment and character.'

But United had to survive one specific scare on a night of anxiety when the Dutch claimed a penalty later in extra time, when Bailey clashed with Brylle. Atkinson said: 'I was relieved when the referee indicated his finger was pointing for a goal kick and not a penalty.' And PSV coach Jan Reker said: 'I'm shattered. I was convinced it was a penalty.'

GORDON STRACHAN... most vital penalty ever for United on Wednesday

'Success or else' — Roberts told

SOCCER is full of cynical comments but Wrexham manager Bobby Roberts should be a little uneasy today as he contemplates his future.

Less than half an hour after Fourth Division Wrexham had lost by an only goal to Italian giants AC Roma in the second leg of their European Cup Winners' Cup second round tie at the race course ground came the quote of the night.

Wrexham chairman Pryce Griffiths, unhappy that his club is fourth from bottom in the League, was asked if Roberts' job was now safe after the stirring performance against the Italians.

Griffiths, choosing his words carefully, said: 'His job is as safe as it has ever been.'

The reply could be ominous for the Wrexham manager. Earlier this season Roberts, now in his third year with Wrexham, was told that it was 'success or else'.

Yet for today, at least, Roberts, a no-nonsense character, can look back on a gallant display.

Wrexham, 2-0 down after the first leg in Rome, gave their illustrious opponents the fright of their lives for about an hour and had David Gregory not had a shot kicked off the line in the 31st minute by Brazilian star Paolo Falcao they might have brought off the shock of the season.

As it was Roma, taking full advantage of their luck, broke away in the 68th minute for Francesco Graziani to head the only goal of the second leg and make the tie safe.

Wrexham, however, had compensation. Their receipts of £46,500 were a record for the club.

Cup draw stages London 'title' game

CUP MEMORIES... Millwall and St Helen's have good memories of a five-a-side competition on the Wembley turf before this year's Charity Shield. Now their full teams are deep into tough Cup matches

THE draw for the third round of the WFA Cup made in Crewe on Wednesday certainly favoured the underdogs. With just one series of games to go before the draw goes open, some of the top teams in the country found themselves drawn against each other.

The most notable of these pits Friends of Fulham against Millwall Lionesses in London's most intriguing clash while in the east Suffolk Bluebirds take on Norwich and Broadoak against Leasowe looks to be the biggest confrontation in the north of England.

Another possible cliffhanger could also take place in the north, if rearranged second-round fixtures go according to form this weekend.

Crewe, complete with England's most prolific goalscorer at international level over the past two seasons, Kerry Davis, should defeat North Shields this Sunday, while St Helen's, who are always there or thereabouts in the latter rounds of the WFA Cup, must be fancied to eliminate Bronte.

Then the third round would be graced with yet another major fixture at Crewe next month.

Although playing in the Second Division of the Home Counties League this season, Millwall look a cut above a lot of teams — including some of those presently playing in the First Division.

There clash with Fulham, currently top of Division One, will be looked upon by their supporters as being the unofficial challenge for the title of best team in the London area.

Broadoak were very impressive last weekend when they put out Rowntrees 6-1.

Their third round opponents, Leasowe, were the

Cloud hangs over Everton's victory

EVERTON, in Europe for the first time in five years, emerged with only one cloud hanging over their 3-0 victory against Inter Bratislava at Goodison Park on Wednesday night.

The win took them through to the Cup Winners Cup quarter-finals by a 4-0 aggregate, but the cloud was an 80th-minute booking for Scottish striker Graeme Sharp for a foul on the Czech keeper Dusan Maluniak.

Manager Howard Kendall said: 'I was disappointed with the referee's decision because I thought Sharp made a genuine attempt to get the ball.'

'It was annoying because in European competition a player is suspended after two bookings and when you are 3-0 up nobody wants this to happen, especially so late in the game.'

Bonus for Sharp, however, was his 11th goal in 15 games, and he came through without any problems on the thigh injury which had made him a doubtful starter.

Another bonus for League leaders Everton in a match which took their winning run to eight games was a first taste of senior football for a winger in the old-fashioned mould, teenager John Morrissey.

Chance

Morrissey has come off the club's youth production line and he was given a 10-minute chance at the end to come on and show the sort of talents once displayed on the wing by his father John.

SCARGILL ATTACKS POLISH COAL

NUM president Arthur Scargill last night bitterly attacked the Stalinist regime in Poland for its export of scab coal to break the British miners' strike.

He told a 6,000-strong rally in Sheffield City Hall that the union had received an 'offer' of assistance from the state-controlled Polish Federation of Trade Unions.

But to loud applause he said the NUM had written a reply rejecting their offer and condemning the Polish regime for 'behaving hypocritically'.

Scargill pointed out that the export of scab coal to

Britain had been stepped up by the Jaruzelski regime and that this was directly assisting the Thatcher government in its efforts to smash the NUM. Sheffield City Hall has

TUC 'WRIGGLES' ON PIT STRIKE

TUC LEADERS are 'wriggling like fish on a hook' to avoid calling action in support of the miners, NUM branch secretary at Hatfield Main colliery Peter Curran told News Line yesterday.

His bitter accusation was made after hundreds of pickets had clashed with riot police brought in to protect three scabs at the colliery near Doncaster.

A series of police cavalry charges through the village failed to drive the mainly young pickets off the streets before the scab bus sped out of the pit yard at lunchtime.

As pickets returned to the local miners welfare, Curran said: 'It's time the whole working class came out in support of the miners. It's time they recognised that their natural assets like gas and oil are being used by this government to subdue the working class. Never mind the 1920s, Thatcher is driving us back to the 1800s.'

'I'm pleased to see people, like the men at Austin Rover, coming out prepared to struggle. But I'm

STORY: Simon Vevers

PHOTOS: Peter Arkell

fed up with the TUC hierarchy making empty promises.

'For me they are wriggling like fish on a hook because they know the cards are down and we've no choice but to fight.'

'It's all very well standing up at rostrums, like at the TUC, and making pledges but when are they going to be carried out?

'The TUC has to make up its mind whether it is going to make this a battle for all workers or let us be cut to ribbons piecemeal.'

Curran is equally bitter about the role of Labour Party leader Neil Kinnock during the miners' strike.

'I listened to him speak at one of our summer schools some time ago. He didn't impress me then, and he impresses me even less now.

'Kinnock is after power on anybody's back. He's trying to please too many factions instead of sticking to his basic principles, if he ever had any.'

Out of 1,150 men on strike at the pit a large proportion — 173 — have been arrested on picket lines. Many were seized when police last attempted to herd scabs into Hatfield in August. Two men went in for one day, but agreed to rejoin the strike.

Curran said the miners and their families were 'as solid as ever and will never give in'.

That was certainly the mood among the pickets who steadily grew in numbers outside the colliery yesterday morning after news spread that three scabs had gone in.

Barricade

A burning barricade, made of tyres and wood, was soon erected at the entrance to the pit lane — and then the police began moving in.

Convoys of police vehicles poured into the pit yard and when we arrived a column of riot police stretched the entire length of the lane and soon began marching out to confront the pickets.

Horses were sent in several times to try and disperse the strikers, but to no avail. Each time the pickets simply regrouped and began hurling stones.

A loud cheer went up when during one cavalry charge a policeman was sent crashing to the ground when his horse shied away from a hail of bricks and stones. Momentarily the mounted policemen around him were also cut off as missiles rained down on them from both sides of the road.

After the scab bus had sped out of the colliery gates, pickets turned their anger on the local police station, smashing several windows and damaging a car parked outside.

MOUNTED POLICE rampaged around Hatfield Main colliery in Yorkshire yesterday, not without incident. One officer chasing pickets down a street fell off his horse
