

Two new marches start on Day 14 of the National March to Release Jailed Miners

RELEASE JAILED MINERS REINSTATE SACKED MEN

TWO more legs of the National March to Release Jailed Miners get under way today when sacked miners and youth set out from Liverpool and Swansea in South Wales.

Support for the march in both areas has flooded in, with trade union branches, shop stewards' committees and other labour movement organisations joining the impressive list of sponsors.

Last night the main leg of the march, organised by the Young Socialists, reached Seaham in the heart of the Durham coalfield, two weeks after setting out from Edinburgh.

All three sections of the march are converging on London for a mass rally at the Alexandra Pavilion on June 30.

Cammell Laird shipyard workers, jailed last year for courageously fighting for their jobs, will be in Liverpool to launch the north-west leg of the march.

Their leader, Billy Albertina, who will be speaking at a rally at the Central Halls in Liverpool this afternoon, yesterday pledged backing for the aims of the campaign.

'We were right when we fought for our jobs at Cammell Lairds, even though we knew that we had the threat of jail hanging over us,' he told News Line.

'The miners were also right to fight for their jobs. They are political prisoners and I don't believe enough is being done to get them released.

'The Tories use their own laws to imprison the miners, the same as they used their own laws to imprison us.'

The national campaign to free the jailed miners and secure reinstatement for the 700 men sacked for fighting for the right to work has been backed by the South Wales area NUM executive.

That lead has been followed by 16 NUM lodges in the Welsh area and several miners' wives groups which were the main pillars of support in the valley towns during the 12-month strike.

Eric Davies, area NUM executive member for the Swansea district, will be among miners and other trade unionists in the West Wales town to see the marchers off this morning and will be addressing a rally at the Swansea Amphitheatre.

He told News Line yesterday: 'The march is very important because it keeps the plight of the miners in prison and those who have been sacked in the public eye.'

Davies said that Dean Hancock and Russell Shankland, the two young miners condemned to life imprisonment, must not be forgotten by the rest of the trade union movement.

'In the case of the two boys in Wales, we'd like to see their sentences reduced if they can't be quashed altogether.

'It was a political judgement, there's no doubt about that. Those boys were hung, drawn and quartered before they even reached court.'

Portraits of Hancock, Shankland and other miners thrown in jail under Thatcher's Bonapartist regime will now be carried on all three sections of the march.

The north-west leg will

HARD CORE JOBLESS UP

HARD CORE unemployment rose again for the 13th successive month in May to a record 3,179,600 in official figures. The total out of work in Britain is now 13.1 per cent.

The government figures leave out a further 450,000 on government 'training' schemes, and over 200,000 who formerly were included in the jobless figures but are now excluded by age.

Britain's unemployment is now among the highest in the world. The latest figures from abroad show unemployment rates of 14.1 per cent in Belgium, 10.1 per cent in France, 8.8 per cent in West Germany, 10 per cent in Italy, 13.3 per cent in Holland, 3.6 per cent in Japan and 7.2 per cent in the United States.

While the overall figure of those unemployed fell by 32,000 in May, this was not as much as usual in the annual spring easing in joblessness.

Tory Employment Secretary Tom King admitted yesterday that the 'underlying trend is still upward'.

Government officials also admit that unemployment is continuing to rise at a rate of between 10,000 and 15,000 a month when seasonal factors are taken into account. This has been the rate of increase of the last 18 months and there appears to be no sign of it changing, they say.

And a report published yesterday by the international Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) forecasts that unemployment in Britain will remain at its present level or higher for at least the next 18 months.

The next big surge in unemployment will come in June when nearly 150,000 school leavers are likely to fail to find any job. The Tory system for counting the unemployed, based on those claiming state benefits and not those seeking work, means that school leavers will not be included in the figures until September.

David Basnett, general secretary of the GMB-A-TU general workers' union, said: 'The reality is that unemployment has not fallen this May as it did in May last year.'

'Despite assurances from the Prime Minister, Nigel Lawson and Sir Geoffrey Howe — and now Tom King — telling us all that unemployment was on the way down, these figures show that there is no prospect of getting more people back to work on the basis of the government's current policies.'

Babies at risk

BABIES born into unemployed families face a greater risk of 'ill-health, unrelenting poverty and debt and deprivation', according to a report published yesterday.

The Maternity Alliance report claims one in three children in Britain are growing up in poverty, more than a million are in families hit by unemployment and the effects of poverty may reach beyond childhood.

The report is published to coincide with the latest unemployment figures, and comes only days before the Tories' Green paper on social security, which is expected to abolish or reduce the most popular, universal benefits for families.

It is aimed at reminding the government of the true cost of unemployment to those who are struggling to raise their families while out of work.

'Despite increasing unemployment, the impact on pregnant women and families with babies has so far been ignored,' said Alliance representative Ruth Evans.

'Babies from poor families are particularly vulnerable during pregnancy and the first months of life, and they should not be expected to meet all the costs of an economic recovery brought with job losses. The health of children from unemployed families is too high a price to pay.'

THAMES Valley newspapers have issued warnings to their NGA print union staff that they will be dismissed if they do not resume 'normal working' by Monday.

Two editions of the Reading Evening Post have failed to appear through industrial action by members in a pay dispute with Thomson Regional Newspapers. TEACHERS in 313 schools will strike next week in pursuit of their pay claim. More than 6,500 members of the National Union of Teachers will be involved, in the 12th week of their industrial action.

MAIL order workers at Great Universal Stores have voted for a one-day strike, an overtime ban and work-to-rule unless a better pay offer is made by Monday. The 8,000 staff are members of the shopworkers' union USDAW and are seeking a £100-a-week minimum.

US trade deficit rising

WASHINGTON — The United States' deficit on goods sold rose to $11.8 billion in April — the worst so far this year.

The figures, released by the Commerce Department yesterday, were the third highest monthly figure on record.

As a result, the dollar came under severe pressure on the Western European foreign exchanges — slumping to as low as 1.29 to the pound and 3.0475 to the West German deutschmark.

The April slump boosted the US trade deficit for the first four months of this year to $44.63 billion.

It was 6 per cent higher than the total registered in the corresponding period in 1984. In March the trade deficit was $11.05 billion.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige had forecast this year's trade deficit would exceed the 1984 record of $123.3 billion.

But yesterday's figures pointed the way to a much more rapid deterioration in the overall US economy.

It was apparent also that the dollar's rampage on the foreign and domestic money markets for nearly a year have had no beneficial effect on the US economy.

The high value of the dollar has made American-manufactured goods dearer on world markets and foreign goods increasingly cheaper in the US.

It has hit particularly hard at American heavy manufacturing industries.

Four councils defy auditors' deadline

FOUR Labour councils have defied a deadline set by the district auditor to set a rate by the end of May or face financial penalties and a ban from public office.

BY PAUL FELDMAN

Lambeth, Greenwich and Camden in London do not meet until next week. They are all rate-capped, having their spending limits imposed by the Tory government.

Liverpool, although not rate-capped, has also supported the no-rate policy, and been warned by its own district auditor that a decision was required by the end of May.

Southwark in south London set a rate on Thursday night, at the tenth time of asking.

Islington Council in north London seemed set to capitulate last night, with leader Margaret Hodge declaring herself in favour of making a Tory rate.

The auditors are relying on the enormous pressures on councillors from the state to force decisions in the four defiant authorities.

In Lambeth, leader Ted Knight is battling on having seen his majority of four disappear with the decision of two right-wing lawyers to vote with the Tories.

He said yesterday that he thought it would obviously be a tough fight at next Wednesday's council meeting, but the Labour Group was confident of holding the no-rate position.

'We are not going to be intimidated by the district auditor or anyone else. I think the government will have to consider matters carefully before removing a whole Labour council from office.'

The trade unions have pledged to strike if any council is attacked by the auditor, and in Lambeth they are determined to prevent a Tory cuts budget being imposed on the council.

A spokesman for the Audit Commission said metropolitan auditor Brian Skinner would wait to see what was decided at the councils' meetings.

Limit

'There is a limit to how long he will wait. If any councils hold out after their meetings, without setting a lawful rate, action by the auditor will be very imminent.'

The auditor would issue a certificate stating how much councillors were liable for financial losses which have built up as a result of the failure to set a rate for the new financial year.

TED KNIGHT

MARGARET HODGE

Councillors ordered to pay losses could find themselves bankrupted, and their earnings attached. They would also be disqualified for five years.

'We believe many councillors will become increasingly alarmed at the financial penalties they could face, and there will be growing pressure to set a lawful rate,' said the Audit Commission spokesman.

In Liverpool, deputy leader Derek Hatton said: 'We have a commitment to the people of Liverpool to build houses and improve services, and that is what we are concerned about.'

Auditor Thomas McMahon said yesterday: 'If there is no rate made today then we will be involved in assessing the financial situation next week. It is as straightforward as that.'

Liable

He said that even if a rate was fixed next week councillors could still be liable for any losses for which they are held responsible.

But Hatton was unconcerned about the risk of being removed from office. 'It is nowhere near that stage yet, and that is something we must face if and when we come to it.'

NACODS leaders meet on Monday

THE pit deputies' union NACODS are expected to continue with the overtime ban in the industry when the union's executive meets on Monday.

Although the union have appealed to the government arbitration service ACAS to intervene in its dispute over pit closures with the NCB, the Coal Board is expected to refuse their involvement.

Return

Monday morning may mark more widespread disruption as several pits return to work after a week of Whitsun holiday.

There was continuing provocation by the Coal Board at some of those pits where there was no holiday. In Warsop, North Derbyshire, there was no mining carried out for the fifth day in the week due to NCB treatment of deputies.

Close

Talks between the union and the Coal Board at national level last week ended in deadlock. The Board said it would continue to close pits without referring them to the national colliery review procedure.

The use of this procedure as a prelude to shutting pits was supposed to have been 'enshrined' in the deal between NACODS and the Board last October which led to the withdrawal of any deputies action alongside the miners.

Amal positions hit

BEIRUT — A barrage of rocket fire hit Shi'ite Amal positions in the southern suburbs of the Lebanese capital late yesterday.

State-owned Beirut Radio said at least 40 rockets hit the area shortly after President Amin Gemayel returned from talks in Damascus.

The radio reported 'a number of casualties', while Falangist radio said four people were killed in Christian east Beirut.

Earlier, Wafa, the official Palestine news agency, said Amal forces had renewed savage attacks on Sabra, Shatila and Bourj al-Barajneh within minutes of the expiry of a shaky ceasefire deadline.

Wafa also said Syrian intelligence officers had joined the Amal allies to interrogate Palestinian captives, apparently on PLO defences.

But the PLO fighters were in total control of Bourj al-Barajneh and surrounding residential areas up to the main airport road.

PLO chairman Yassir Arafat said in Amman, the Jordanian capital, he was pleased with King Hussein's talks in Washington with President Reagan.

Arafat, who received a telephone call from Hussein early yesterday, expressed his 'great appreciation and full satisfaction with the (king's) nationalist stand'.

Hussein called for PLO participation in peace talks under the umbrella of an international conference attended by all parties concerned and the five permanent members of the United Nations Security Council.

Hussein met Reagan on Wednesday and put the proposals of the February 11 accord between the PLO and Jordan.

The Reagan administration had told Hussein there were 'major difficulties' in the proposals and had proposed some conditions, State Department spokesman Edward Djerejian said after the talks.

Djerejian said these included Soviet recognition of Israel, easing of restriction on Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union, the cessation of all 'anti-Semitic' propaganda and arms to Iran and to Lebanese militia.

But State Secretary George Shultz told Hussein yesterday the US would try to provide 'a supportive international context'.

CUP RIOT WITNESSES SPEAK

Fascists and police sparked disaster

WITNESSES to the Brussels soccer horror spoke yesterday of the involvement of fascist groups and the role of the Belgian riot police.

Engineering technician Mark Griffiths, 20, watched the carnage in Brussels from nearby and has written to Thatcher to 'put the record straight' as he feels most accounts so far have been misleading and biased.

The real culprits, he claimed, were the Belgian riot police. Liverpool had been tried and convicted without counsel for the defence even being consulted.

All hell broke loose when about 20 baton-wielding riot police charged into fighting rival fans, he said.

Then the Italian fans surged in retreat to the wall, which collapsed, leading to most of the serious casualties.

Griffiths, who lives in Birkenhead, said there was not the slightest doubt that the National Front were at the ground. They were blatantly handing out literature between the two main entrances to the terracing.

'I want Mrs Thatcher to know what really happened. It seems that she, the other Cabinet ministers and most Britons have automatically assumed it was all our fault,' he added.

The truth is that nobody would have died if it hadn't been for the over-reaction of the riot police to a comparatively minor scuffle.

'If they hadn't gone in smacking everyone on the head in their path the Italians wouldn't have panicked.'

Ferry

Geoffrey Light, 17, a butcher's apprentice from Wirral, Merseyside, said that the fascist National Party were busy recruiting soccer fans on a cross-channel ferry on the way to the European Cup final.

'I never saw the bloke who was signing them up, but loads of people were going round with stickers on, and there was lots of literature about. The stickers showed the black hand clenched in a fist and the words "National Party".'

Light said he was only about 20 yards away from where the fighting was. 'The way it was incited seemed organised. At first, when the dividing fence went down, they were all mixing together and the Scousers were talking with the Italians.'

After a fight was started by four men in Liverpool colours, 'the police moved in and the Liverpool supporters made them retreat. It was just mayhem'.

● A POSTCARD purporting to be from National Front 'supporters' of Aston Villa claims they were behind violence at the England v Finland international in Helsinki 10 days ago.

That match was followed by more than 100 arrests for public order and criminal damage offences.

The postcard read: 'We are now in Cologne after being released from the nick in Helsinki. We did the business at the match. There were 100 NF arrests. If you don't believe it, just phone up the embassy in Helsinki! Ha! Ha! But we got away with it again!! Racial regards. The Aston Villa NF.'

Joseph attacks teachers again

TORY EDUCATION Secretary Sir Keith Joseph yesterday made it clear that there will be no more money for teachers from the government this year.

He was speaking at a press conference after addressing the National Association of Head Teachers' conference in Scarborough.

Joseph said he had said his 'last word' on that. He then proceeded to attack the teachers who have been taking strike action this term in pursuit of a pay increase.

If the action continued into September it would be 'absolutely tragic' for pupils, parents, the country, and for teachers, Joseph alleged.

He claimed that teachers had been offered a 'bargain opportunity' to continue to negotiate with extra resources for pay next year, provided they delivered something in return in terms of contractual obligations.

The government has refused point blank to consider any pay increase which does not involve attacks on existing conditions.

David Hart, NAHT general secretary, said he found Joseph's speech 'unhelpful, negative and even provocative'.

There had been nothing about resources and nothing about a pay award worth talking about.

Joseph's stance would only harden attitudes and make any settlement more difficult.

● BUT in a right-wing move the conference earlier voted in favour of a resolution urging the government to introduce legislation for charges to be levied on children having packed lunches at school 'to help meet costs of supervision'.

South London train crash

The damaged section of the Victoria-Gatwick train at Battersea Park yesterday

SIX HUNDRED passengers had a lucky escape when two trains packed with tourists and commuters crashed in south London yesterday.

A London ambulance brigade spokesman said it was a miracle the casualties were not worse after the accident at Battersea Park station.

Ninety nine people were injured. But only 15 were detained in hospital and none were given cause for concern.

The accident happened when the 9.20a.m. Gatwick to Victoria express smashed into the back of a slow-moving diesel train, the 8.51a.m. from East Grinstead to Victoria.

A British Rail spokesman, who said an investigation would be held, estimated the express was travelling at 40mph and the diesel at 5mph.

BR experts were trying to discover why the two trains were by platform five at the same time and on the same track.

Possible causes of the accident were signal failure, brake failure or driver error, he said.

Firemen had to free a British Rail catering staff member, trapped in the buffet car of the Gatwick express. She was not badly hurt.

Sixty five crash victims were taken by ambulance to St Thomas's hospital in Lambeth.

Most were allowed home after treatment for superficial cuts, bruises and shock.

Up to ten would have to stay in overnight, said a hospital spokesman.

Forty people were taken to St Stephen's hospital in Chelsea, but six were found to be unhurt. Two were admitted.

Rail guards call for strike

RAIL guards meeting in conference at Weston Super Mare yesterday called for strike action in opposition to driver-only operated trains.

The 250 delegates voted nearly unanimously for a resolution demanding that the NUR leaders make no further concessions on one-man trains.

The resolution also calls for one-day strike action in protest against plans by British Rail to scrap guards on many lines.

Executive member Dave Shaw said BR trials for one-man operation were a 'shambles'.

Union agrees the job losses

A TRADE union plan proposed for BP Oil's refinery at Llandarcy, South Wales, includes redundancy for 350 workers.

The scheme, which has the backing of the T&GWU transport union, proposes a cut in workers from the present 1,100 to 750. The management are currently proposing a cut of 750 jobs.

The trade union document proposes the closure of several facilities at the plant, including safety provisions for fire and medical help, the canteen service and training and recreation.

It also would permit the management to do away with demarcation.

WEATHER

DRY sunny weather over most of the British Isles, but cloud with rain and drizzle in parts of northern Scotland. It will be warm or very warm in many inland areas, but cooler on the coasts, especially the English east coast where there will be a fresh northeasterly wind off the North Sea.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday: Generally similar.

Cuba floods

HAVANA — Almost 3,000 people were evacuated to higher ground in southeast Cuba after floods triggered by torrential rains swept away houses and bridges during the past two days. One foot of rain fell, breaking a six-month drought, heralding the start of the summer wet season.

Prosecutor arrested

NEW YORK — A US drug prosecutor and his actress girlfriend were arrested on Thursday and accused of stealing heroin and cocaine worth nearly $500,000 from an evidence safe in the US Attorney's office in New York. Assistant US Attorney Daniel Perlmutter, 29, and his girlfriend, Stacy Honeycutt, were arrested after their apartment was searched.

Soviet talks in Peking

PEKING — A Soviet trade delegation is in Peking to discuss growing economic and trade relations with China. Soviet delegation chief I T Grishin arrived on Thursday and met Chinese Vice-Premier Yao Yilin in the afternoon. Sino-Soviet trade is expected to total $1.6 billion this year, up 36 per cent over 1984.

Kenya coup appeal

NAIROBI — Former senior private Hezekiah Ochuka yesterday lost his appeal against the death sentence passed on him by a court martial for heading an abortive coup to topple the Kenyan government. The army crushed the attempt by junior airmen to overthrow Kenyan President Daniel Arap Moi in August 1982.

Bolivian election

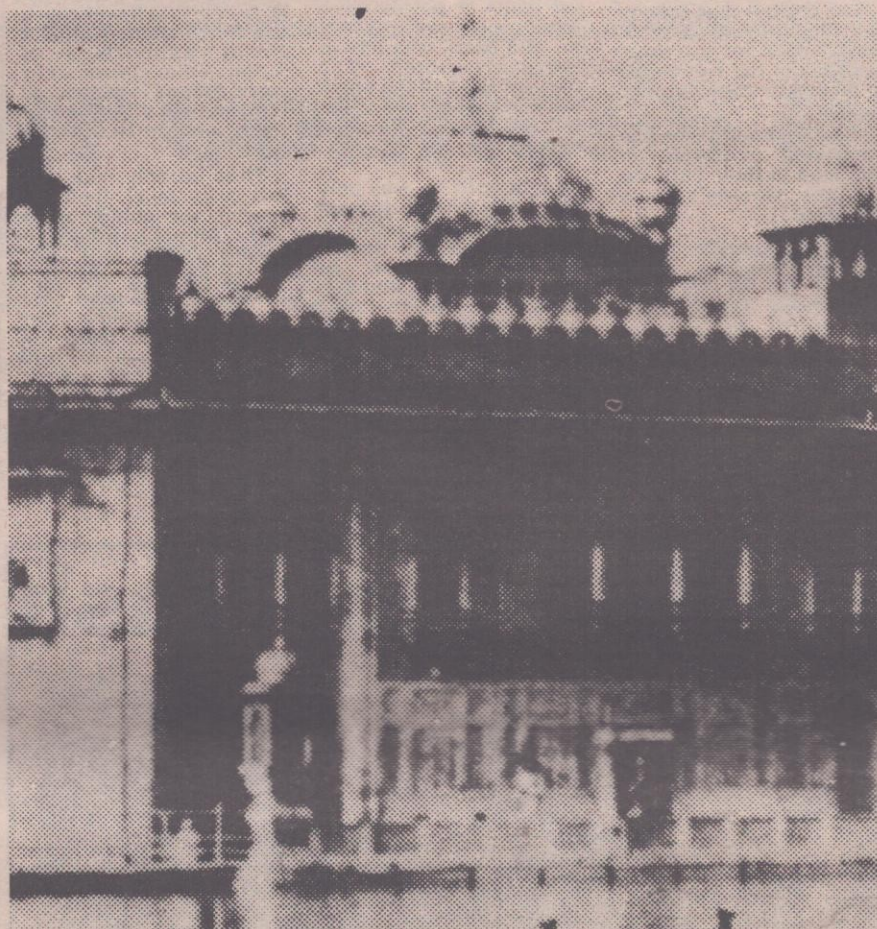

LA PAZ — Nineteen Bolivian presidential candidates, including former military dictator Hugo Banzer, have registered for elections on July 14. Bolivia has had an average of more than a coup a year in its 160 years of independence, and has an inflation rate of 8,000 per cent.

Laker settlement talks

WASHINGTON — A US judge has agreed to help work out a possible out-of-court settlement of a billion-dollar lawsuit filed by bankrupt Laker Airways against British Airways and other defendants. US District Court Judge Harold Greene has presided over the case in which the airlines are accused of violating US anti-trust laws by conspiring to slash prices to drive Laker out of business.

TENSIONS DEEPEN IN GUJARAT AND PUNJAB

The Sikh Golden Temple in Amritsar

NEW DELHI — Two people were killed when police opened fire at protesters in different areas of India's western Gujarat state yesterday.

The Gujarat shootings were the latest incidents of police violence against nearly three months of protests against government policy on castes.

BY A FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT

The tension and violence in Gujarat parallels a renewal of armed defiance in Punjab against the Congress (I) Party government in the run-up to the anniversary of the June 6, 1984, storming of the Golden Temple of Amritsar by the Indian army.

Militant Sikhs have declared next week 'Genocide Week' to mourn more than 1,600 Sikhs who were killed when army tanks rolled across the marble floors of the holiest of Sikh temples on the orders of former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

Mrs Gandhi was shot dead by two of her most trusted Sikh bodyguards on October 31 last year.

State-run Press Trust of India said Sikhs in Punjab had entered a village shop near Hoshiapur on Thursday night and shot the owner dead.

Thursday night's shooting was the second incident of in a week in the northern state, home to about 15 million Sikh people.

It followed an incident on Tuesday, when three Hindus were killed when gunmen opened fire on a group of migrant labourers on a road near the industrial town of Ludhiana, Punjab's main industrial city.

Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi has intensified a security alert in the state for the first anniversary of the army's carnage at the Golden Temple.

New army reinforcements have been deployed in Amritsar and in several 'sensitive spots' across Punjab.

The New Delhi regime has cancelled leave for all policemen in the farming state.

Patrolling by police and paramilitary troops has been stepped up along railway tracks and around bus and rail stations, cinemas and predominantly Hindu areas.

One disgruntled senior army officer in charge of the permanent force in Punjab said: 'We are carrying out duties that we are not supposed to normally perform.'

'We had to surround villages in Punjab and search every inhabitant. We had to stop buses and single out Sikh passengers for body searches.'

Curbs

'All this has created animosity. There have been too many curbs on the civilians. Using the stick is no answer.'

The officer said that the troops were not paid special battle wages and were constantly under pressure 'because they know they are fighting their own countrymen'.

Martial law reinforcements and rule by presidential decree imposed by Mrs Gandhi have been in force in Punjab since shortly before the storming.

Mr Gandhi has exacerbated anger in the region, among both Sikhs and Hindus, by appointing Punjab Governor Arjun Singh administrator of the Union Territory of Chandigarh.

Arjun Singh, the former Chief Minister of Madhya Pradesh, is a confidante of Mr Gandhi's.

He was removed from his Madhya Pradesh post partly to salvage his discredited image following the December 3 gas leak from a factory owned by the US chemical giant Union Carbide — the world's worst industrial catastrophe.

Tripoli slams U.S. on Sudan

TRIPOLI — The Libyan People's Foreign Liaison Bureau has denounced attempts by the State Department in Washington to interfere in the Jamahiriya's relations with Sudan.

The denunciation followed attempts by President Reagan to overturn the Sudanese Transitional Military Council's new diplomatic ties with the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya.

Last month, Libyan leader Colonel Muammar Gaddafi briefly visited Khartoum and was met at the airport by new military strongman General Abdul-Rahman Swareddahab.

'We should be the ones to protest against any sort of relations between the USA and any Arab country, because the USA is behind all the tragedies and troubles in the Arab world and it is responsible for the occupation of our land, for our displacement and for the depletion of our resources.'

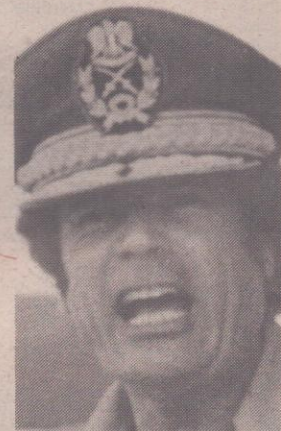

'It is the USA who ... should be kicked out of any Arab country in which it maintains a presence.'

● SUDANESE Defence Minister Brigadier Othman Abdullah told Omdurman Radio this week the military council considered a defence pact with Cairo as 'still in existence and still of value'.

His statement conflicted with an assertion by Prime Minister Dr Jazuli Dafa'allah, who was quoted by the Kuwaiti news agency as having told a Saudi newspaper that the defunct Numeiry regime's agreements with Cairo did not reflect the will of the people and would soon be abrogated.

Brigadier Abdullah told Omdurman Radio an 'appeal by some people to revoke the agreement was not based on a precise understanding of its aims'.

GADDAFI

Statements

The Tripoli Foreign Liaison Bureau expressed 'amazement' at recent statements by the State Department 'which were made as though the United States was appointing itself as guardian of the Arabs and Sudan'.

It said: 'Does the USA think it has taken Sudan in wedlock in the same way it did with (deposed Sudanese military dictator Jaafar) Numeiry and (Egyptian President) Hosni Mubarak?'

'Let the Sudanese people take note of the extent of US impertinence and the sort of reasoning that makes it protest against the restoration of normal relations between brothers.'

Grey Wolves link in Agca trial

ROME — Early testimony in the trial of eight men accused of plotting to kill the Pope suggests that a Turkish fascist group called Grey Wolves played a considerable role.

Up to four more Turks could face charges on the basis of testimony at Rome Assize Court this week by their compatriot, Omer Bagci, 39.

Bagci admits he delivered the gun Mehmet Ali Agca used to shoot Pope John Paul in May, 1981.

Bagci, who will probably spend a third day on the witness stand when the trial resumes next week, has identified two sympathisers of the Grey Wolves, to which Agca belonged, as probably linked with him in the plot against the Pope.

Package

Bagci said Agca handed him a package containing the pistol in April 1981, at Olten, Switzerland, where Bagci lived and organised a Turkish immigrants organisation.

When asked why he did not hand the weapon over to the Swiss police, Bagci said: 'I was afraid of Ali Agca. If I had given up the weapon, he would have taken reprisals against me.'

Contradicting earlier statements, Bagci denied having sent money to West Germany to Celebi's account to buy a plot of land in Istanbul.

The prosecution is trying to prove that Celebi, Bagci and Agca were conspirators in a plot to murder the Pope on behalf of Bulgarian secret services.

But four days of questioning by court President Severino Santiapichi failed to shed any new light on an alleged Bulgarian connection.

Picket
at BP
oil HQ

A PICKET was held yesterday outside the BP oil headquarters in Victoria, London, to protest at the continued supply of oil to the racist South African regime.

The demonstrators, members of South African War Resisters (COSWAR), were also protesting at the deployment of troops in the black townships throughout South Africa.

They say the activities of oil multi-nationals like BP facilitate rapid deployment of the apartheid army in its land and air raids, as well as attacks on Angola, Mozambique and Lesotho.

'The capture of South African military saboteurs in Kabinda and the expose of South Africa's far-reaching destabilisation strategy indicates the extent of these operations,' the group pointed out.

Yesterday, May 31, was South African Republic Day, marking 24 years of police-military oppression.

The South African military and police consume more than 10 per cent of South Africa's fuel and oil.

LIBYA SPEAKS OUT
FOR ARAFAT

BY A FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT

TRIPOLI — The Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah yesterday condemned as 'criminal', attempts to blame the Beirut massacres on Palestine Liberation Organisation chairman Yasser Arafat.

Arafat was the victim of a conspiracy designed to blame him for the siege of Sabra, Shatila and Bourj al-Barajneh camps, an official announcement said.

The PLO leader was 'innocent of what is said about him amid the incidents in Lebanon. He is a victim of a conspiracy.'

The Tripoli authorities did not name those they believed were responsible but said: 'Some quarters have tried to attribute what is happening to Yasser Arafat, though objective circumstances cannot in any way justify such atrocious criminal actions in which Amal elements have been involved . . .

Such slanders were part of an attempt to oust Arafat and 'to oust Palestinian and other national Lebanese leaderships, so that only the Shi'ites and Maronites would remain', the statement said.

Serious

The events in Lebanon were too big and serious to be attributed to any one person or group, the authorities said.

The Libyan statement came as Lebanese President Amin Gemayel returned to Beirut, having asked Syrian President Hafez al-Assad to intervene militarily in Lebanon.

Gemayel said that with the total withdrawal of the Zionist troops occupying south Lebanon, he felt Assad's soldiers already in east and north Lebanon could help Lebanese troops 'to enforce order to allow political reforms'.

Syrian troops 'could form a strong force capable of implementing such a plan in co-operation with the legitimate Lebanese army', he said.

A shaky ceasefire came into force, meanwhile, with Amal militia and their allies in the Lebanese Sixth (Shi'ite), Eighth (Falangist) and the Damascus-sponsored 'Assad Battalion' of the Lebanese Ba'ath Party retreating from certain strategic positions.

It was the 12th day of the siege begun by the Amal forces at Assad's behest, to disarm the PLO and drive the stateless and exiled Palestinian people into Syrian hegemony.

PLO sources in London say Amal leader Nabih Berri and Assad are working at driving the Palestinian masses into the Syrian wilderness, where they would come under draconian Syrian repression.

Regime

Wafa, the official Palestine new agency, reported in London yesterday the Syrian regime has begun a harsh crackdown on all Palestinian organisations.

This includes the pro-Syrian factions which previously were under Assad's personal protection because of their anti-Arafat policies.

Wafa said the Damascus-based radio station of Ahmed Jibril's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command had been shut down.

It said: 'At the same time, as Palestinian popular protests continue daily throughout the camps in the country (Syria) and Damascus, the Syrian regime has reacted violently.'

'In Damascus, a women's protest was crushed by security forces, as were the daily demonstrations taking place in the Yarmouk refugee camp.'

ARAFAT . . . victim of a conspiracy

'So far, 700 Palestinians have been detained by the authorities and are being held in the "Palestine Branch" of the central Syrian Intelligence Bureau.'

In Beirut, a Palestinian official of the Syrian-backed 'Palestine National Salvation Front', Abu Ahmed, commenting on the ceasefire, said: 'There is no political agreement (for the ceasefire). This is a humanitarian ceasefire.'

Critical

In a separate report, Wafa said the situation had reached a critical stage in the Beirut camps.

It quoted a spokesman for the Palestine Red Crescent Society as saying in London that the plight of the wounded had worsened immeasurably.

The PRCS spokesman said: 'Hundreds of badly wounded civilians are in desperate need of evacuation and urgent medical supplies and treatment must reach the Red Crescent in the camps immediately to prevent a complete catastrophe.'

The Red Cross is being asked to apply pressure for the release of imprisoned doctors and nurses.

Red Cross officials have also been asked to arrange for the reopening of hospitals and clinics in the camps as soon as possible.

Shatila is in the process of being systematically flattened by Amal forces, the Red Crescent official said.

He said buildings have been blown up with their occupants by the Amal forces. 'The camp is destroyed and uninhabitable, with no solution in sight for the approximately 25,000 inhabitants,' he said.

Attack on Greek Trotskyists

GANGS of New Democracy Party thugs attacked members and supporters after a rally of the WIL, the Greek Section of the International Committee of the Fourth International on Thursday night.

The meeting in Piraeus, south-west of Athens, had been one of the most successful meetings of the Greek Trotskyist party in the run-up to the general elections tomorrow.

Korydalos Central Square became a battlefield for a half-an-hour as hundreds of the departing members and supporters of the WIL resisted the savage attack by hundreds of goons of NDP leader Konstantin Mitsotakis.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT

Piraeus police collaborated with the NDP goons in the attack on the WIL.

It was a clear manifestation of the reaction of the capitalist Greek state and its right-wing supporters and the police force to the overwhelming response that the WIL had won in the working class in the Mirtoan Sea port.

The WIL's policies of smashing the right wing and their allies of the former military junta were endorsed by the rally.

The rally, attended by a significant section of the 5,000 dockyard workers sacked by Greek multi-millionaire Savros Niarchos two months ago, also fully backed the WIL's policy of bringing down the ruling PASOK demagogues and exposing the Greek Stalinists' collaboration with the capitalist state.

Leading WIL speakers put the tasks of building the revolutionary party to mobilise and lead the working class to power and received a tremendous response of the youth and workers from the depressed working class district.

The same day, in Syntagma Square, Athens, the NDP held their last major rally in the campaign for tomorrow's polls.

Mitsotakis, in a final bid to exploit the confusion sown into the election campaign by Prime Minister Andreas Papandreu's PASOK, pledged new concessions to the middle class.

He made a conspicuous gesture to the Greek Stalinists, congratulating them on their 'responsible and polite behaviour' in the campaign.

PASOK was scheduled to hold its final rally in Syntagma Square last night.

Keeping the strike alive

THIS book is really excellent. It gives a full account of the strike and a very fair coverage of all of it.

The photographs show the violence for what it was, as well as the marvellous demonstrations, and the role of the women.

The book is important because the strike should never ever be forgotten. We had a year on strike and no-one can be allowed to forget that we suffered greatly, we are still suffering now, and will suffer for years to come.

Record

Miners themselves are sure to be interested in this book, the pictures are from all over the country, and they are a record of what they had to face on the picket lines.

But I think it would be very good for other trade unionists to have this book. They could learn a few lessons on how to organise, and what to expect when they are on the picket line.

As the pictures show, our men were surrounded by police, some on horseback, even when there were only a few pickets outside a pit. Our men were stopped travelling around the country and they faced continual harassment when they were on the picket lines. The photographs show what happened to our men and how they were brutally hurt by the police.

Branches

I would like to see the book sent out to trade union branches to give them an idea of the real situation facing the trade unions today.

It is good to see photographs of the work done around the soup kitchens. It shows those who donated money that we were not having them on about the use the money was put to.

Above all, the photographs of the demonstrations show how much support we have in fighting against pit closures. The women's demonstration was the best in the strike for me because it made the women realise that the pits did not just belong to the men, they belonged to them as well.

The pictures also show Arthur Scargill speaking at meetings and on the picket lines. He is a brilliant person, which is why the media tried to discredit him. He said at the start of the strike the union would not agree to pit closures, and he never signed an agreement.

Looking at the book reminds me that we would not be in the situation we are in now if other trade union leaders had supported him. We should still blame the TUC for not giving us full backing and calling a General Strike.

News Line gave us the best coverage of any newspaper throughout the strike. Even now, after the strike, the News Line is still covering the sacked and imprisoned miners.

Keep up the good work, the trade union movement needs you because you print the truth. And thank you very much for your book, I will be sending a copy to Terry.

National March to Release Jailed Miners – DAY 14

Solidarity and comradeship on march

THE EDINBURGH-to-London march received the magnificent support of four additional miners' banners as it travelled from Sunderland to Seaham yesterday.

The banners of the Durham Area NUM, Vane Tempest, New Herrington, Durham and the Durham Mechanics joined the Kent NUM banner which we are carrying from Edinburgh to London for a mass rally at the Alexandra Pavilion on June 30.

With miners from Westoe and Wearmouth, Rossington in Yorkshire and Killoch in Scotland in our ranks, we saw the comradeship and fighting solidarity which epitomised the epic struggle of the miner against pit closures during 1984-85.

Durham miners' executive committee member Arthur Oxley and four miners from his Vane Tempest pit joined the route of the march to New Herrington.

Oxley is himself a sacked miner. He was dismissed an hour after returning to work with the striking miners on March 6.

The pit manager accused him of shouting at a scab during the strike. He was subsequently cleared by the courts but remains sacked and talks with the NCB are to be arranged as soon as possible for his immediate reinstatement.

Oxley told News Line that Vane Tempest lodge officially supported the national campaign to release the jailed miners and reinstate the 700-odd sacked men.

The lodge banner will stay with the march throughout today (Saturday) as we campaign across County Durham.

'It is very important that this march is recognised across the whole labour and trade union movement,' Oxley said.

Struggle

'It is central to the whole struggle against Thatcherism and the system she represents, capitalism. While there is still one miner in jail or one miner without his job, I feel that the labour and trade union movement should hang its head in shame.'

'If we had received the support that the leaders of the movement promised, we would never be in this position today.'

'We would have won the struggle and the movement would have been better off for it.'

P.L.O. in front ranks of the world revolution

WHILE the inhabitants of Sabra, Shatila and Bourj Al-Barajneh were enduring the tenth day of savage attacks by the Syrian-backed Amal militia and the Lebanese army, King Hussein of Jordan was in Washington for talks with President Reagan. The Jordanian monarch is reported to have told the President that the PLO is now ready to recognise the state of Israel by accepting United Nations resolutions 242 and 338. The idea that the US would not speak to the PLO until it swallowed these resolutions was a brainchild of Henry Kissinger.

Kissinger had no intention of ever speaking to the PLO or giving them anything at all. But his formula about 242 gave US imperialism the means to create endless trouble inside the Palestinian ranks without committing either the US or Israel in any way. It also gave a ready-made pretext under which Britain and imperialist allies of the US could refuse to recognise the PLO, as the Thatcher government does to this day. She demands that the PLO must 'recognise' Israel — as if the Palestinians are unaware of the existence of the state which usurped their country!

It means that in advance of any negotiations, the Palestinians must concede unconditionally the legitimacy of their enemy. Those who raise this demand show clearly that they have not the slightest interest in negotiations.

Resolution 242 was passed through the UN Security Council in 1967 on the initiative of the Wilson Labour government in the wake of the so-called six day war when Israeli troops occupied the West Bank, Sinai and the Golan Heights.

As you might expect given its source, the resolution doesn't even fulfil the minimum requirements of elementary justice. It calls for Israeli withdrawal without specifying which of the occupied territories should be given up. And what is more, it treats the Palestinians entirely as a 'refugee problem', without mentioning their national rights.

Nonetheless, successive Palestine National Councils have accepted all UN resolutions, which by implication means acceptance of 242 as well. In response, the US has merely added to its list of conditions. Washington now says the US is not prepared to accept that any representatives of the PLO should take part in a joint meeting, even if they come as members of a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation.

And even if such a meeting were ever held, there is not the least indication that the Israelis would pay any attention. Indeed, Israeli premier Shimon Peres sneered after Hussein's visit that the King's call for a Middle East peace conference was an attempt to avoid direct talks with Israel.

Peres said: 'An international conference to be attended by the Soviets, who don't have diplomatic relations with us and who have adopted the most extreme Arabic position. We won't go to a conference in order to manoeuvre ourselves into a situation of non-negotiation and to find a front made up entirely of extremism and rejection. It would be a waste of effort.'

Jordan has done nothing to assist the beleaguered Palestinians. On the contrary, the Syrian attack is privately welcomed there because the Amman government hopes it will help force the PLO leadership to swallow a little more of Hussein's medicine.

The Arab bourgeois and feudal rulers all have an interest in weakening the PLO and undermining its independence. All in one way or another are tied to US imperialism, which seeks to dominate the entire region. This applies to the Damascus regime, which rejected the Camp David settlement, as well as to the government in Cairo which upholds it.

Hafez Al-Assad has mounted his murderous attack on the camps in agreement with the US and with the tacit approval of his allies in Moscow, who are ready to sacrifice the PLO in the interests of peaceful coexistence with imperialism.

The Palestinian revolution has to fight not only Zionism and imperialism, but the Arab regimes and the Stalinist bureaucracy as well. The fighters of Sabra, Shatila and Bourj Al-Barajneh are in the front ranks of the world revolution, and they require the unqualified support of the international working class.

RELEASE all class-war pri

Marchers' solidarity and comradeship

'As long as men remain sacked, the industry will not be the same because of the resentment and bitterness it is causing.'

Other Vane Tempest men on the march were Joe Robson, Alan Bell, George Taylor and George Clark. 'I can tell you that everyone at Vane Tempest who supported the strike to the end supports this march,' Oxley added.

Yesterday's lunch was provided by New Herrington miners and mechanics, who turned out to welcome us at the New Herrington Workmen's Club.

Lodge secretary Peter Allen gave a fine speech of welcome saying the jailed men must be released. 'It is a terrible embarrassment to the Labour Party and the working class that these men remain locked up,' he said.

'If something isn't done, I'm afraid that they will be forgotten about. The issue is very important for future trade union disputes.'

'If something isn't done about these men, it will deprive us of the right to protest.'

Among the reception committee at New Herrington was Sid Pickford, a lodge mechanic who is on the Durham area executive.

New Herrington treasurer Derek Carlin said it was duty of the Labour Party to start

Peter Allen, secretary of New Herrington NUM addressing the marchers when they arrived from Sunderland yesterday doing what it was supposed to. The question of the sacked men had to be taken up by every section of the movement.

New Herrington was the lodge which moved the resolution to ban Labour Party leader Neil Kinnock from this year's Durham miners' gala because of his treacherous statements during the 12-month strike.

Unfortunately, the executive defeated the lodge resolution and Kinnock will now take part.

The march into this solid working-class coalfield has made an indelible impression on the marchers. They have seen an area of chronic high unemployment which has been devastated by the world capitalist slump and the de-industrialisation policies of the Tory Bonapartist regime.

At the time of nationalisation in 1947-1948, Co. Durham had 168 pits. Today there are just 12 left.

The first to go was Burnhope, which was closed in July 1949 under the Attlee government.

Dozens more closed in the 1950s and 1960s when NCB chairman was Lord Alf Robens, the former Blyth MP.

The last remaining pit in Blyth, Bates colliery, is now slated for closure with the loss of 1,400 jobs.

Robens, a trade union-sponsored Labour MP, went from being a minister in Attlee's government to the chairmanship of the Coal Board, and from a knighthood to a peerage, and from the court of the Bank of England to being a director of the gold bullion dealers Johnson Matthey and to Thomson Newspapers, owners of 'The Times' and the 'Sunday Times'.

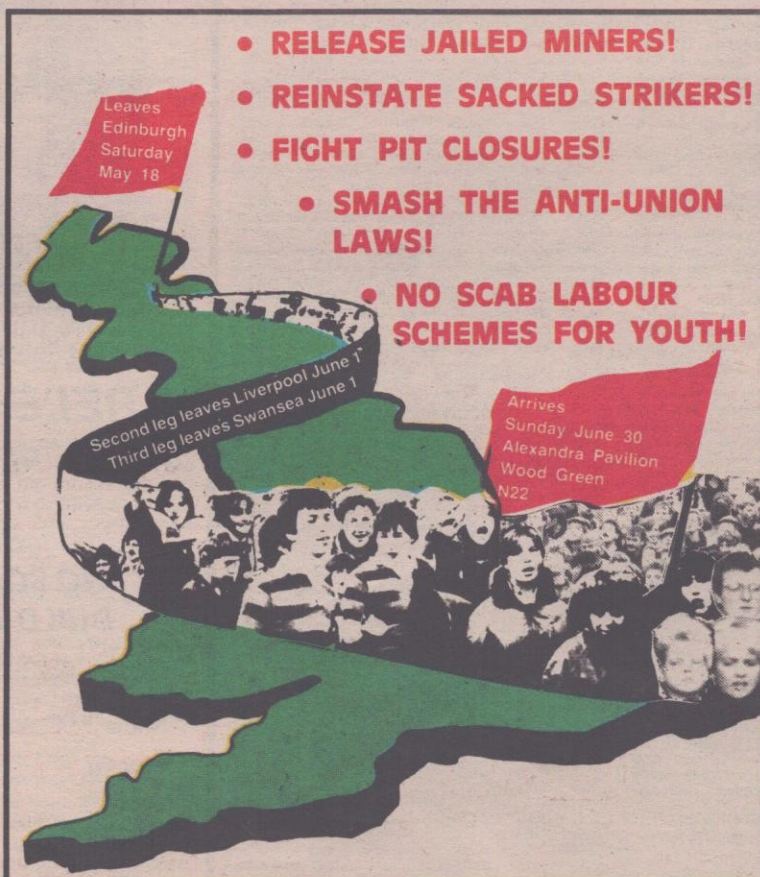

In the life and times of Robens is the treachery of the reformist Labour leaders and the terrible price paid by the working class.

REINSTATE all sacked miners

Something special in Dawdon

REPORTS FROM

DAWDON'S reception to the National March to Release the Jailed Miners was something special. And for very good reason.

Five local miners from this Durham pit are locked up in Thatcher's jails as political prisoners. Four non-miners from the same village are serving two-year sentences with them.

The jailed NUM members are Kevin Hughes, Glen Black, John Little, Ray Patterson and Mark Rochester, all courageous union men who did battle with the Tory regime to stop pit closures and save communities.

A further three Dawdon men have been victimised and sacked — Peter Brace, Paul Foster and Peter Richardson. The Dawdon banner came to the edge of town with a delegation from the lodge committee to escort us into town to a thunderous welcome at the welfare club.

In a speech to the marchers David Guy said: 'We have families whose sons have been jailed for crimes which are nothing more than political. They will not be forgotten.'

He praised the marchers for their dedication and for raising the fight of the jailed and sacked NUM members.

Sacked Dawdon miner Peter Brace had been in the pit for 31 years when he was sacked for being convicted of stealing £20 worth of scrap from the NCB.

Strength

Local miners Alan Johnson, Frank Shaw, Alan Kennedy and Charlie Walker formed part of the vanguard who carried poster-sized photographs of the jailed Dawdon men.

Families of the jailed men joined miners and local youth in cheering and clapping the marchers as they walked down the main street to the welfare club, which was the strike headquarters in the 12-month strike.

Every time we passed a scab's house it was duly pointed out and miners shouted 'Scab, scab.'

Lodge secretary Ernie Taylor, chairman Tommy Eilbeck, treasurer David Guy and delegate Frank Shaw gave the warmest of welcomes to the marchers who had been on the road all day in the 16-mile footslog from Sunderland.

The hearty evening meal was put on by the women's support group which was a tower of strength throughout the strike. It is affiliated to SEAM, the Save Easington Areas Mines, an 18-month-old organisation fighting threatened pit closures in the area.

David Guy said every single pit in the locality was threatened with closure if judged by Ian MacGregor's criteria.

One has already received a Tory death threat — Horden. One of the women helpers told a group of marchers: 'This has been a wonderful day for us. Someone is fighting for our lads.'

'Having you here today is just like it was during the strike. It's a great feeling to see the fight going on. When I go home, I think I'll have a little cry.'

RELEASE, REINSTATE

pass through areas of Merseyside stricken with mass unemployment following an avalanche of closures in manufacturing industry.

The marchers will be guests of miners in the Lancashire area before heading for the Staffordshire coalfield and then the West Midlands where unemployment has trebled under the Tory government.

Merseyside dockers, Ford car workers, and a host of other trade union branches are among the sponsors, reflecting the wide support for the campaign.

Labour Euro-MP Les Huckfield, Liverpool MP Eddie Loyden and City Council leader John Hamilton will be among the speakers at a Pier Head rally before the marchers set off.

RELEASE all class-war prisoners REINSTATE all sacked men

Released miner backs the march

EX-MINER Les Ward was given an emotional reception at the Keresley social club, Coventry, after his release from prison last week.

He had served four months of a six month sentence for affray, and actual bodily harm.

Ward spoke to News Line about the strike and his four months as a class war prisoner.

'I was in prison because my brother Colin was the chairman of the strike committee. We were at a party which the police raided and trumped up charges were made against us.

Charge

'The police charged me with affray to get me into Crown Court, and dropped that charge once I was there.

'They wanted me in Crown Court to be sure of a prison sentence. The other charges, two of assault and two of A.B.H. were also dropped or beaten, and I should have been dealt with in a magistrates court.

'It made me feel very bitter towards the police. No mention was made in court of the injuries which I received from the police whilst handcuffed in the back of their car.

'I'm also very bitter toward the scabs. Two of them spat on my fiancée Christine when I was inside. No man has a right to scab.

Les Ward with his fiancée Christine after his release from jail

'To the lads still in prison I'd like to say keep your heads up, you won't be forgotten and justice will be done. I was disappointed that the strike finished when I was inside, but the fight against Thatcher goes on.

'I'd like to thank the prisoners I met. They helped me through and made sure I got remission. But my mail was stopped inside. My order for News Line didn't come so I've only just found out about the March to Release The Jailed Miners, and I'm totally behind it and intend to join it as soon as possible.

North east anger over cash offer

NUM branches in the north east have rejected with contempt and anger the proposal by NCB chairman Ian MacGregor to offer cash aid to areas where pit closures take place.

MacGregor's NCB (Enterprise) Limited has offered £10 million to 'cushion' the impact of 2,850 job losses in the axing of Bates colliery in Northumberland and Horden in Co Durham.

But Durham NUM spokesman Ross Forbes said: 'The NCB package is like trying to put a small bandage over a gaping wound.

'BSC's efforts have shown that significant numbers of jobs can't be created in an area like this without sustained investment.

'You've only got to look at Nissan to get some idea of what is required — and we're talking there about 500 jobs.

'Close one large pit and you need four Nissans to take up the slack. We are not impressed.'

Fraud

In fact, NCB (Enterprise) is a cynical fraud which in no way meets the desperate job needs in this devastated industrial region.

MacGregor, the Thatcher government's hired industry hit-man, employed the same ruthless tactics when the steel industry was ransacked in the north east.

When 3,500 workers were made redundant at Consett in 1980 MacGre-gor (then BSC chairman) and the Tories set up the Derwentside Industrial Development Agency and the capitalist press poured out stories about 'alternative industries' and the 'regeneration' of local industry.

But Consett is a graveyard and unemployment in the region has more than doubled since the DIDA was established.

Indeed, while the government's jobs agency is claiming to be a great success story, official figures show that more than 10,000 jobs have been lost in Derwentside since Consett was laid to rest by the Tory bulldozers (and explosives which blew up the chimney stack!)

One part of the site has been grassed over and is now used as a ski slope. How many workers and youth on the dole are going skiing this year?

For the miners of Northumberland and Co Durham the cruel fate of Consett is an object lesson in what happens when the labour and trade union bureaucrats collaborate with the Tory government and destroy jobs on the false promise of mythical 'alternative industries'.

Fight

As one miner who came out to support the Edinburgh to London march said: 'There is an alternative to pit closures and the destruction of our communities — it is to fight the Tory government and defeat it.'

FRENCH trainer Olivier Douieb must have the best record for winning first time with his horses and the NEWMARKET-based trainer can be on the mark again with Indian Groom (1.30) in the Holsten Diat Pils Maiden Stakes (Qualifier) at headquarters.

This attractive Blushing Groom colt, who has been given plenty of time to develop, is given preference over Perkin Warbeck, who ran with promise over this course last time.

The £12,000-added Holsten Diat Pils Handicap provides an open betting contest for punters, with several fancied contenders.

Puccini has won his last two races, and still seems well enough handicapped. Orojaya landed a gable at Warwick, then came unstuck while taking on the unbeaten Abha at Newbury, while Our Jock (2.30) seems well handicapped and is taken to win.

Silvino (3.30), a promising third to Fayruz and In Toto at Newbury last time, can open his account at the expense of newcomer Native Wizard in the Felix Leach Stakes.

The lightly-raced gelding Palace Yard (4.05), who should be ideally suited by the distance of the Matthew Dawson Maiden Stakes, is taken to score.

Mel Brittain believes in keeping Grey Desire (3.45) on the move and his policy should pay dividends in the Dick Peacock Memorial Sprint Stakes at THIRSK.

Grey Desire found Sandown's five furlongs too sharp when fourth to Never So Bold in the Palace House Stakes on Tuesday but this trip, over which he is a course and distance winner, should be much more to his liking.

Fouz (2.15), outpaced early over five furlongs last time, should appreciate the extra furlong of the Darlington and Simpson Rolling Mills Golden Jubilee Stakes.

Mac's first big test

JOHN McENROE faces the first real test in his quest to lift the French Open title when he meets the No.12 seed, Sweden's Henrik Sundstrom, here at the Stade Roland Garros tomorrow.

McEnroe knows all about Sundstrom, for it was the Swede who set his country on the way to their historic Davis Cup victory over the United States when he beat the American 13-11, 6-4, 6-3 last December.

'I suppose you could say I want to make up for that in some way,' said McEnroe on Thursday. 'That result still rankles a lot.'

The Wimbledon and US Open champion sees the match as a very good yardstick from which to judge his progress in Paris this year.

Happy

'I came in here a little out of form and didn't feel as comfortable as I would have liked to. But, on reflection, I think things have gone very much the same way as last year, so I have to be fairly happy with my progress.'

McEnroe feels that the quarter-finals are shaping up very much as expected.

'All the big guys are still hanging in there, but, of course, things get that little harder as the tournament progresses,' McEnroe added.

So far McEnroe has not found it necessary to question too many line calls or many of the decisions from the umpire's chair. But he still feels that the whole refereeing system needs to be overhauled with some urgency.

Mistakes

'There is too much involved in this game for umpires or linesmen to make silly mistakes,' says McEnroe. 'I mean a bad call in a final might mean the difference between winning and losing and that could mean the difference between 100,000 and 50,000 bucks. It's a lot of money riding on one careless call. No wonder players can get upset.'

'The ATP (Association of Tennis Professionals) are putting some ideas together and we hope to take them to the MPTC (Men's International Professional Tennis Council) and the ITF (International Tennis Federation) very soon.'

Davis Cup defeat 'still rankles'

'They are very basic recommendations which we believe will help eliminate many of the sillier mistakes made on the circuit.'

Explaining some of the more important proposals, McEnroe said: 'The referees, chair umpires and all the rest of the officials should be paid a good salary and on the circuit as professionals.'

'They would also have to take a physical examination every year and pass an examination before being accepted on to the circuit.

'I think these are simple but important proposals. I believe that if they were implemented then the game would be much better off.'

Title

Returning to his quest for the French Open title, McEnroe still sees Ivan Lendl as the most dangerous obstacle in his way.

'But I do honestly feel a whole lot better now than when I came into this competition, and I don't think you can read too much into Lendl's victory in Dusseldorf last week.

'If I do get to the final, then I will be ready for him if he is on the other side of the net. But there could be upsets. Most of the seeds are playing well and the crowd here are really getting behind Yannick (Noah).

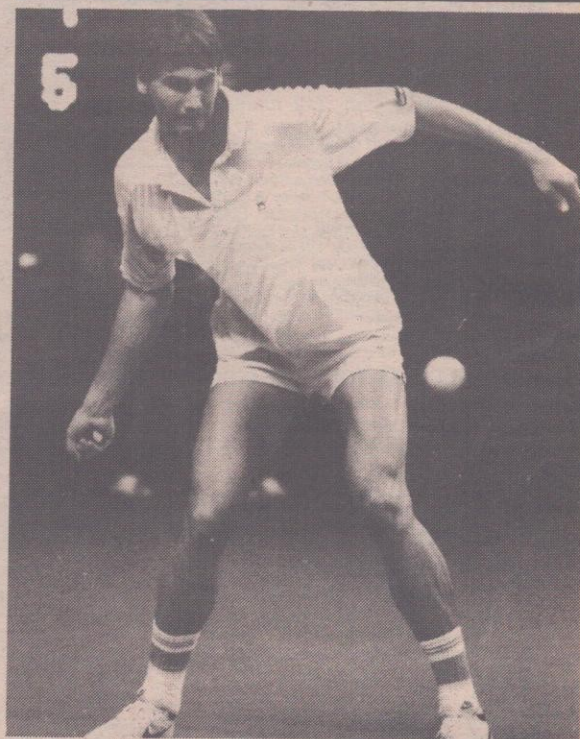

'None of the seeds will have an easy journey to the final from here on in. There are some guys left in the singles who are capable of causing some shocks, so none of us can take anything for granted.'

Alert

'It will be important to be on guard and be alert all the way through now. Losing concentration for just a few minutes can be the difference between winning and losing.'

England gasp for Mexico air

AFTER TWO days of gentle acclimatisation in Mexico, manager Bobby Robson decided the England players were ready to be handed over to the not too gentle care of coach Don Howe.

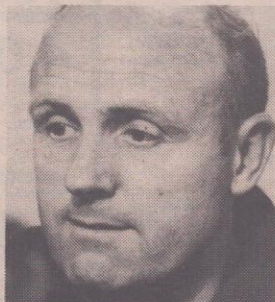

It proved a painful reintroduction to the sporting life and high altitude, as Howe pushed the squad through 90 minutes of exercise and ball work and ended the session with a 12-minute run which left many gasping.

John Barnes was always up among the leaders, yet an hour after the session, the Watford winger admitted he was still recovering.

Breath

'The heat was the main problem while we were training, but once I was stopped I found I was struggling for breath and felt the altitude was doing something inside my chest,' said Barnes.

'Up until then I hadn't noticed any reaction to the 7,000 or so feet, as we relaxed around the hotel.'

DON HOWE . . . put England players through a tough training session in Mexico yesterday

'Don had promised us a gentle start, but I guess he changed his mind.'

Barnes, in fact, was one of those who came through the session well. Others, such as Peter Reid, Viv Anderson, and Trevor Francis, clearly found it too much in the 90 degree heat.

Explained Howe: 'That is why we came here with plenty of time to prepare. A few more sessions like that and the players will all be back to normal season fitness, despite the height.'

Republic play lone striker

REPUBLIC of Ireland, with only three goals from their last nine outings, suffered another striking blow yesterday when Micky Walsh was refused permission to leave his club FC Porto.

The Irish take on Switzerland in a crucial World Cup qualifying match in Dublin tomorrow.

Such is the squeeze within World Cup group six that the Republic, bottom at the moment, could go top if they beat the Swiss hand-somely.

This looks unlikely now with manager Eoin Hand deciding to play Frank Stapleton as the lone striker.

He suffered setbacks earlier when Tony Galvin and Mark Lawrenson pulled out through injury. And yesterday he received further blows when Celtic goalkeeper Pat Bonner went down with a virus infection and Porto refused Walsh permission to travel.

Substitute

Walsh will be used, instead, as a substitute in a League match in Portugal for Porto, who are already assured of the title.

Hand raged: 'I think it is disgraceful that a manager refuses the player a chance to take part in such an important World Cup tie, especially as his club have already won their League title.'

Dermot O'Neill, a part-time player with League of Ireland club Bohemians, has been drafted into the squad to take over from Bonner.

It means Notts County's Jim McDonagh will continue in goal.

The Irish have an embarrassment of riches both in defence and midfield. Manager Hand is likely to include no fewer than five midfielders in his team pushing forward all the time to assist Stapleton.

Gerry Daly, Liam Brady, Kevin Sheedy, Ronnie Whelan and Paul McGrath are likely to fill unfamiliar roles in the Irish midfield.

Kevin Moran and David O'Leary will be preferred in defence.

FRANK STAPLETON . . . the only player up front for the Republic of Ireland against Switzerland tomorrow

RUSH IS OUT FOR WALES

■LIVERPOOL striker Ian Rush has a suspected broken wrist bone and has withdrawn from the Welsh squad for their friendly international against Norway next week (June 5). Also out are the Everton pair Kevin Ratcliffe and Pat Van Den Hauwe, who both have knee injuries. Manager Mike England has called up Manchester United's Clayton Blackmore and Millwall's Steve Lowades.

Allott of misfortune

FORTUNE has finally turned for hapless cricketer Paul Allott. He received a cheque for £250 yesterday for becoming the first Britannic Assurance player of the month this season.

Allott, who has captured 29 wickets and heads the national bowling averages, must have been wondering when his luck was going to turn.

Since the 28-year-old Lancashire fast-medium pace bowler made his England debut four years ago against Australia his career has suffered a succession of misfortunes.

The next winter he was chosen to tour India but his final figures, especially in the Madras Test of 1982, made miserable reading because of a spate of dropped catches.

Tour

A couple of years in the international wilderness ended last winter with another tour ticket to India, but a back strain prevented him playing in a Test and he was forced to return home before Christmas for treatment.

Although he claimed an early wicket, four more catches went down off his bowling and proved to be crucial in England's three wicket defeat in the first Texaco Trophy match.

Before the match Australian captain Allan Border had frequently expressed concern that his own side's poor fielding record could cost them dearly in the battle for the Ashes this summer.

Thursday was England's turn to miss their chances and with the sides so evenly balanced they cannot afford to a repeat in the second one-day international at Edgbaston today, or the final contest at Lord's on Monday.

STORM IN ENGLAND TEA CUP

BY OUR CRICKET CORRESPONDENT

A STORM in a tea-cup was brewing yesterday with top England batsmen Ian Botham and Mike Gatting told to cut out the reverse sweep shot.

As England prepared for the second Texaco Trophy contest at Edgbaston today, both men were given a lecture by Peter May, the chairman of selectors.

Botham was the main target. He was bowled by Greg Matthews for 72, attempting the reverse sweep just when England were recovering from a disastrous start.

After speaking to the players May said: 'No-one played the shot in my era. I never saw people like Everton Weekes, Worrell, Walcott or Bradman play it.'

'I never played it, I never thought of playing it. I have been through the ACC coaching book and I find no mention of the reverse sweep.'

May said Botham had replied that the shot had brought him runs in the past.

But May retorted: 'Both players have enough shots without playing risk shots. They have to play the percentages and I can't call that a safe shot.

'I told Ian that I was far from happy about it. I told him he was a great player and great players don't play that shot.'

Although Botham was dismissed reverse sweeping, Gatting had played the shot an over earlier and May claimed that had 'challenged' Botham to try it himself.

The ticking off from May only added to Botham's woes yesterday — he missed training having sprained the little finger on his left hand but is certain to play today — a similar injury is also affecting Peter Willey.

May also warned the whole England team last night that he was considering changes after the three-wicket defeat in Manchester.

Most at risk is runless opener, Graeme Fowler, who could make way for Tim Robinson, his opening partner in last winter's tour to India.

May said: 'It was a marvellous contest at Old Trafford but while the result was disappointing it was not disastrous.'

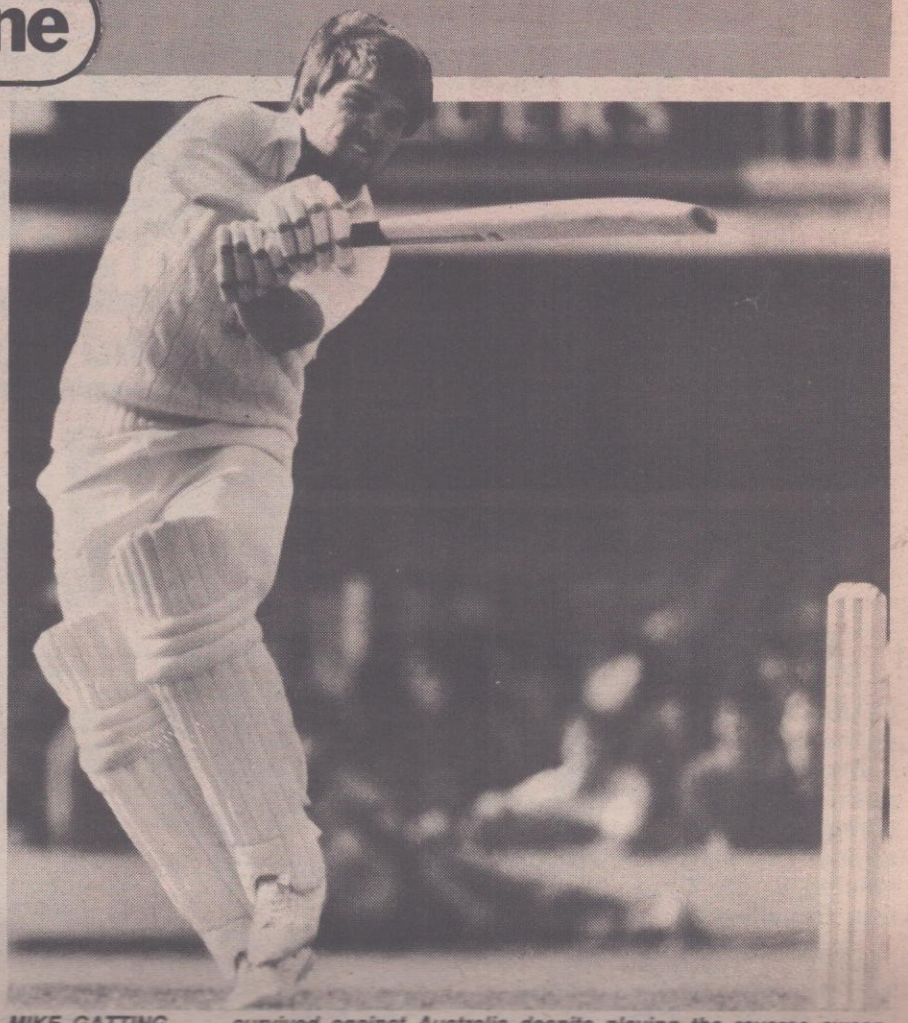

'Nevertheless we lost. Had we been successful I would not have wanted to change a winning side but we must make sure we get a winning side now.'

Australia, who will also name their side shortly before the start, are tempted to stick by leg-spinner Bob Holland and field the same eleven.

Although the Birmingham wicket favours the batsmen, Australian captain Allan Border is prepared to risk Holland.

'I know Botham hit him for three sixes in Manchester but if you take out those three balls his figures looked pretty good.'

'This time Botham could hit his first ball straight up in the air to a fielder,' said Border.

Randall bounces back

DEREK RANDALL... was on the brink of quitting

FORMER England batsmen, Derek Randall, revealed yesterday he has had second thoughts about retiring at the end of the season.

Disillusioned by his international rejection early last summer, the 34-year-old spoke last autumn of calling it a day and giving up to concentrate on his indoor cricket school business.

But following an unbeaten 108 against Leicestershire — his third hundred of the season — Randall admitted his appetite for the game had returned.

'At the end of last season I felt jaded and thoroughly fed up with things, but a winter's break without cricket has left me fresher than for some time.'

Randall also scotched the retirement rumours: 'I'm now looking forward again to playing in every match, and I hope I will be carrying on now for another two or three seasons.'

England play All Blacks

BIG anti-apartheid demonstrations will take place in New Zealand today as England take on the All Blacks rugby team at Christchurch.

The All Blacks are due to tour the apartheid regime of South Africa in late July and England toured the racist republic last year.

England's tour has been seen by many people as an endorsement of the All Blacks tour of South Africa.

The reactionary rugby union authorities make the sport one of the very few that still give South Africa full international status.

England hope to include Jamie Salmon in their team. The 25-year-old centre will become the first player to put on both New Zealand and England shirts if he is fit enough to play.

He was a doubtful starter yesterday as he became the latest victim of a stomach bug that has been going around the 26-man England squad.

Freddie aims for double

AMERICAN 'Fast' Freddie Spencer bids for another double in tomorrow's Austrian motorcycle Grand Prix.

If he succeeds he will bring closer his dream of being the first rider to win both the 500 and 250cc classes in the same year.

His 250cc win carried him on to 44 points, six clear of West German Anton Mang and nine ahead of Carlos Lavado of Venezuela.

Even faster on Isle of Man

RECORDS tumbled on the Isle of Man TT course yesterday as practising for next week's motor cycle races intensified.

No fewer than 10 riders broke the official records in the three classes for production or 'over-the-counter' machines.

Leading the way was Midlands competitor Tony Rutter, who shattered the record in the 750cc class with a lap at 108.28 mph — one minute 4.6 seconds inside the official time set in last year's race.

Rutter, of Brierley Hill, West Midlands, was riding a Suzuki. Four other riders were also inside the record for the class.

In the 250 class Phil Nicholls, from Preston, Lancashire, was the fastest of the three riders to break the record. He took his Honda round at 95.84 mph — 27.6 seconds inside the official figure.

Rounding off a record-breaking day Swedish rider Peter Lindén, on a Honda, took almost two seconds off the 1500cc class record with a lap at 106.28 mph.

The official best was also beaten by a second rider in the class.

But none of yesterday's times will go into the record books — only race laps are considered as official records.

Racing proper opens today afternoon with the six-lap World Championship international Formula One TT.

There is an entry of over 100 riders. Favourite to complete a hat-trick of wins is the reigning world road racing champion, Joey Dunlop from County Antrim, who is riding a works Honda.

He holds the absolute TT lap record at 118.47 mph.

Bairn uncertain for Derby

LUCA CUMANI has delayed his final decision on Bairn's participation in the Derby after the colt had his final gallop yesterday morning.

The Newmarket trainer said: 'The horse worked better today, but it is not 100 per cent, and is still feeling his foot a bit.'

'I will have to speak to his owner to see if he still wants me to try and get the horse completely fit by next Wednesday.'

Stamina

'I won't be able to speak to him until late tonight.'

Cumani added that he had established 'beyond doubt' that Bairn's stamina was not a problem.

After the 2,000 Guineas runner-up had worked badly last Sunday, it was thought that he may not stay the one-and-a-half mile Derby trip, but Cumani is now sure that an injury to his foot was causing the problem, making it impossible for him to stride out properly.

Britons short of stamina

BRITISH Olympic cyclist, Adrian Timmis, from Cannock was foiled in the last half-mile as he just failed to win the fifth stage of the Milk race from Bury St Edmunds to Leicester yesterday.

Timmis, a member of the British team, broke away 10 miles from the finish of this 104-mile run with Soviet Vladimir Poulnikov and Denmark's Bjarne Riis but could not shake off his rivals.

He still led into the last kilometre but, forced to make all the runnings, he was caught by a further nine riders and could only come in seventh in a 12-strong sprint finish.

Two other riders, Phil Bayton from Kingsford and Paul Curran of Stockton-on-Tees, were also in the leading dozen.

But it was German Joachim Schlaphoff of the international professionals team, who was first over the line with Poulnikov second and Vladimir Kozarek of Czechoslovakia, third.

Timmis was dejected. He said: 'When I broke away with the Russian and the Dane I thought I would be at least in the first three but the other two wouldn't work and I had to make all the pace,' he complained.

But he did move up from 19th overall to 15th while Curran jumped from 11th to 9th, two minutes, 39 seconds behind the Soviet race leader, Tomas Kirsipuu.

The team event is also led by the Soviets with Czechoslovakia also in contention to win the event.

CLUBS SLAM EURO-BAN

BY A SOCCER CORRESPONDENT

CLUBS banned by FA chiefs from next season's European competitions yesterday condemned the way soccer authorities reacted to the Brussels tragedy.

Liverpool pre-empted the ruling by a matter of minutes in announcing it was pulling out of European games for a year.

The decision to withdraw the European qualifiers — Everton, Manchester United, Spurs, Southampton and Norwich City — was taken by FA chairman Bert Millichip and secretary Ted Croker under orders from Prime Minister Thatcher.

It was made without any consultation with the representatives of the 92 professional clubs — the Football League.

The League called the FA decision 'astonishing' and accused the FA of acting in an emotional atmosphere.

'It has obviously broken our agreement with the FA,' they said.

Everton, one of the banned clubs which each stand to lose hundreds of thousands of pounds, was furious that the FA had not waited for more evidence, but instead took 'what could prove to be an irrational decision at a time when emotions are naturally running high'.

The financial repercussions will be enormous for clubs like Liverpool who rely on European competition to counter vast expenses.

And Norwich City, who have just been relegated from the First Division, will particularly feel the pinch of the FA decision.

Millichip and Croker had flown straight back from the England team's Mexico trip to meet Thatcher, but didn't meet with any representative of the Football League to discuss their decision.

Asked if a ban of longer than a year had been considered, Croker said that entry to European competitions was done on an annual basis and it was necessary to consider the matter one year at a time.

Both Croker and Millichip were questioned about involvement of National Front supporters in provoking the trouble.

Millichip said: 'We have evidence of a number of actions over the years with National Front involvement.'

Croker said: 'It's not a problem of just National Front members. Let's not kid ourselves it goes way beyond that.'

Thatcher welcomed the FA's decision as she was prepared to take it for them anyway.

French triumph in Paris

WHEN A Frenchman plays on the centre court here at the Stade Roland Garros he is always assured of a great reception and support.

When he wins the Parisians go mad — so you can imagine what it was like here yesterday when TWO of their heroes won back-to-back on centre court.

For over six-and-a-half hours Yannick Noah and then Henri Leconte hogged the limelight on this, one of the greatest tennis stages in the world.

Noah, who became a household name overnight when he captured the title two years ago, had his fans on the edge of their seats as he won a thrilling five-set match against the rejuvenated Argentinian Jose-Luis Clerc.

That result was, admittedly, expected, Noah being seeded to reach the last 16 at least.

But when Leconte, a player who is currently playing the best tennis of his life, defeated the No.5 seed Andres Gomez of Ecuador, the crowd went absolutely mad.

Noah took his first set, Clerc fought back to make it one apiece by winning the second in a tiebreak. Then Noah came again, before Clerc rose to the occasion, to win the fourth and set up a magnificent final.

It went to 6-6. But this being the deciding set there would be no more tiebreakers.

The packed centre court than threw their unqualified support behind Leconte. Like Noah, his adrenalin was at boiling and just over two hours later he too was victorious.

The sad thing is that they must now meet — probably on centre court — tomorrow for a place in the quarter-finals.

Loyalties are bound to be divided.

MAC TAKES ON SWEDES

JOHN MCENROE must take on — and beat — the best part of the Swedish Davis Cup team if he is to reach this year's French Open tennis final.

Yesterday he had his easiest match so far, cruising to a 6-2, 6-1, 6-2 victory over the Brazilian Marcos Hocevar.

'I don't think I could have asked for an easier match. His serves were very soft and then he would come in and it was too easy, but from now on it won't be,' said McEnroe.

Now he faces Henrik Sundstrom, and in all probability another Swede, Joakim Nystrom, on Tuesday, for a place in the semi-finals.

But the Swedish barrier doesn't end there. For if he is successful against Nystrom, Mats Wilander, the No.4 seed, will probably be waiting to take him on!

And McEnroe was at pains yesterday to stress that every one of those matches will be 'a whole new ball game'.

'Okay, so they are something of specialists on clay and they all come from Sweden, but in many ways the resemblances stop there. They all have different techniques and that will make it very difficult.'

And McEnroe added: 'I will have to be at my best to beat them if I meet them. I will not go through if I am not on the top of my form.'

Wilander was forced to four sets by his opponent,

Teenagers win in style

THE TEENAGE terrors of women's tennis struck again yesterday. In the bottom half of the draw, ten of the 16 girls vying for places in the next round were 18 years of age — or under.

And the two youngest players, West Germany's Steffi Graf and Argentina's Gabriela Sabatini, both advanced in style.

Yes, Chris Evert-Lloyd, seeded to come out of this end of the draw to meet Martina Navratilova in the final on this day week, must have felt like an old age pensioner yesterday with her 30th birthday creeping up on her!

However, although giving close to 12 years away to her opponent yesterday, the little known Angelika Kanellopoulou from Athens, Evert-Lloyd was still too good and moved into the last 16 with a 6-3, 7-5 victory.

But the Greek girl did make it difficult for her American opponent in the deciding set which left Evert-Lloyd to say later: 'I don't know where they are popping up from but there is a whole legion of very good youngsters out there now.'

One of those is the German Graf, who showed astonishing powers of recovery when she clawed her way back from 1-5 down in the second set to beat her compatriot, Bettina Bunge, 6-1, 7-6.

Place

Now Graf meets Evert-Lloyd for a place in the quarter-finals. The No.2 seed has beaten Graf on their three previous meetings, but each time the matches have been closer.

Sabatini, who just turned 15 a fortnight ago, also advanced yesterday with a powerful display of tennis against the American Anne White, 6-1, 7-6.

'I lost my concentration in the second set a little but I think I played well,' Sabatini said later. She now meets the South African Rosalyn Fairbank, who defeated the German youngsters, Isabel Cueto, 4-6, 7-6, 6-3.

GEOFF LAWSON . . . Australia's most dangerous fast bowler, proved his ability with four wickets against England, as Australia won the first Texaco Trophy international at Old Trafford on Thursday. He takes on the 'old enemy' again in the second one-day match at Edgbaston today
