

Tebbit is new Tory chairman

NORMAN TEBBIT was appointed Tory Party chairman and Leon Brittan left the Home Office in a major Cabinet reshuffle announced by Prime Minister Thatcher last night.

Three Cabinet ministers were axed and three other ministers offered their resignations after meeting Thatcher.

Lord Young, the former head of the Manpower Services Commission and the driving force behind the cheap-labour YTS schemes, will become Employment Secretary replacing Tom King, who takes Hurd's job in Belfast.

He will be assisted by Kenneth Clarke, who is brought into the Cabinet, in a new offensive on jobs and wages.

Young will take over responsibility for small firms previously held by Trade and Industry, as well as tourism where the government sees a potential for more low-tech low-wages jobs.

Tebbit's job as Trade and Industry Secretary went to Brittan, while the new Home Secretary is to be Douglas Hurd, who has been Northern Ireland Secretary.

Environment Secretary Patrick Jenkin was fired from the Cabinet altogether, being replaced by Kenneth Baker.

John MacGregor, Minister of State for Agriculture, joins the Cabinet replacing Peter Rees in the key post of Chief Secretary to the Treasury.

John Selwyn Gummer, who quits as party chairman, is demoted to Minister of State for Agriculture.

Arts Minister Lord Gowrie is axed from the Cabinet, and other ministers who have gone are Neil Macfarlane, Sports Minister, Adam Butler, Defence Procurement Minister, and Alexander Fletcher, Consumer Affairs Minister.

DON'T TAKE THE ENEMY'S MONEY

BY BEN RUDDER

Ron Todd tells the TUC

A STRONG call for non-compliance with Tory anti-union laws was delivered at the TUC Congress in Blackpool yesterday.

Transport union leader Ron Todd said the TUC 'cannot do the Tories' job by putting legal frighteners on our members.'

Todd rounded on those unions defying TUC policy by accepting Tory cash for ballots.

He said they had no right to 'sacrifice our basic independence for the equivalent of a penny on subscriptions a day'.

Speaking in the main debate on Tory anti-union legislation — which will continue this morning — Todd said his union had proposed postponing the debate until the crisis over the AUEW engineering union was resolved.

But his union was prepared to accept the democracy of the General Council which narrowly voted down the T&GWU proposal for a delay in the debate, he said.

The AUEW face possible suspension or expulsion from the TUC this week for their acceptance of state cash for union ballots under Tory anti-union laws.

Todd said acceptance of the legislation was made even more incorrect because the trade union movement had proved it could still fight despite sequestration and fines on unions.

The arguments used two years ago to justify the 'new realism' of compliance with the Tory legislation was now out of date.

Defending the 1982 special Wembley Conference decision of non-compliance, Todd said the essential principle was that 'we could not allow ourselves to take money from our enemies in order to carry out their work for them.

'Certainly, we would not entertain becoming economically dependent, and ask for government cash.'

He added that the authority and discipline of the TUC was at stake.

'I tell you this, if you turn the General Council into a garden party and set aside its historic role of being the general staff of labour, you give credence to a notion of a democratic choice derived more from the shelves of a supermarket than from the proud traditions of a trade union movement,' Todd said.

He added: 'How would we stand in the eyes of our members, the employers with whom we negotiate, in the eyes of the public and the Cabinet itself if we were to crumple up the Wembley document and throw it into the dustbin?'

'How would we face the new measures threatened against the right of assembly and demonstrations, and bans on strikes in essential services?'

'For 100 years we have fought for and developed our trade union movement. For God's sake colleagues, don't let us throw it away now.'

'Let's reaffirm Wembley and move on from there in strength,' Todd concluded to warm applause.

The transport union leader's attack on the AUEW was later followed by criticism of the no-strike deals agreed by the engineers and the electricians' union, the EETPU.

The AUEW executive is to meet in emergency session tonight on whether to give an undertaking to stop receiving Tory money.

It has promised a definite answer from the meeting.

If the union refuses to abide by TUC policy, it faces the possible exclusion of its delegates from Congress on Wednesday by the General Council meeting immediately before the morning session.

Court rejects doctor's appeal

A JUDGE yesterday turned down an appeal for reinstatement by a consultant obstetrician who advocates 'natural childbirth' to be heard in the High Court.

Justice Walton ruled that the court should not, if possible, become involved in Wendy Savage's dispute with Tower Hamlets health authority.

He said it should be up to an independent inquiry whether or not her suspension in April was justified.

Savage said she was not surprised at the result, but felt some gains had been made.

'We have got a date which has been publicly mentioned for the inquiry to be heard in November,' she said.

'And we have got the court watching to make sure it takes place then and does not drag out for two or three years. I think that this is a significant gain.'

She said she had talked to other doctors who had been subjected to similar inquiries. Some had waited years for their cases to be heard.

£100,000 Emergency Fund

YESTERDAY'S mass lobby of the TUC in Blackpool carried a clear message to all delegates — fight Thatcher's Bonapartist regime, organise the General Strike.

The two-week march to release the jailed miners from Cortonwood to Blackpool was organised by the Young Socialists to mobilise the fight against the hated Tory government.

It expressed the powerful militancy of the working class, the unemployed, the youth, the miners and broad sections of the trade union movement who are refusing to submit to Thatcher's dictates.

Inside the conference hall, the rattled union leaders were desperately trying to look both ways — appease the membership and the Tory regime as well. But it won't work.

Thatcher has geared her new Cabinet for violent class confrontation. The tempo is set by the rapid developments in the world economic and political crisis.

As their massive investments in the apartheid regime in South Africa burn in the flames of the Azanian revolution, the Tory regime is going to intensify its attacks at home.

This provides the urgency for our £100,000 Emergency Fund. It must become the burning political responsibility for every single member of the Workers Revolutionary Party and the Young Socialists.

All News Line readers must also do everything they can to boost the fund this week and take us to our target.

The completion of the Emergency Fund is vital for the Workers Revolutionary Party to meet its obligation to provide revolutionary leadership for the historic struggles on the agenda.

There can be no successful struggle for power in Britain without a leadership steered in battle and, above all, guided by the revolutionary theory of Marxism. So don't hold back with your donations!

TROOPS MOVE IN ON SOUTH AFRICAN MINES

JOHANNESBURG — Troops moved on to several South African mines yesterday as miners defied the security clampdown and refused to enter the pits.

As the strike crisis intensified for the apartheid regime, its Central Bank governor, Gerhard de Kock, suddenly cut short his US tour, cancelled a scheduled press conference in Washington and flew for home.

In Johannesburg, the black National Union of Mineworkers warned that the strike would be escalated into nationwide action unless the white bosses agreed a settlement.

In Cape Town, South African police used gunfire against protesters in the mixed-race ('coloured') suburbs, killing one person and wounding several others.

Demonstrators at a school in the Malay district of central Cape town were assaulted and a car was set alight in the same area.

Elsewhere in the black townships, youths set up barricades, threw stones at cars and clashed with police who again used gunfire.

De Kock's Western European tour, which also took him on an abortive trip to London and a meeting with Bank of England chairman Robin Leigh Pemberton, was aimed at winning bankers' support to help avoid an economic disaster.

He had been scheduled to meet US Federal Reserve Board (Central Bank) chairman Paul Volcker and International Monetary Fund officials when he abruptly cancelled his visit.

A White House official had publicly said de Kock would not receive American help and that the government did not intend putting pressure on bankers to keep their money in South Africa.

South African Finance

Minister Barend du Plessis, meanwhile, announced that payments on about $12 billion due in the next year out of a total foreign debt of $25 billion had been frozen until the end of the year.

Pretoria's crisis deepened as a currency flood outwards continued unchecked and economists admitted its foreign reserves had slumped to only $2.5 billion.

Ken Foulstone

Blackleg's case adjourned

A BURGLARY case against blackleg miner Ken Foulstone was unexpectedly adjourned at Lincoln crown court yesterday.

Foulstone, 45, of Tuxford, near Retford, faces three charges of burglary dating back to 1977 and involving antiques from stately homes.

The case was listed for hearing before judge David Wilcox, but after hearing of 'dramatic developments' in the case an adjournment was granted until 10 a.m. today.

Michael Murphy, for the prosecution, said that 'certain rather dramatic developments' in the case had led to the prosecution serving a number of additional statements on the defence.

Defence counsel Oliver Blunt said it was necessary to explore the new evidence in some detail.

Foulstone, one of the two NUM members whose court action led to the sequestration of the union's funds, was allowed bail.

Farmers protest

LISBON — Angry Portuguese farmworkers yesterday ransacked the regional offices of the Agriculture Ministry in a protest over the abolition of collective farmlands.

Portugal's 330 collective farms, seized after the April 1974 revolution, are being handed over to their former owners under a new plan in line with Common Market policy.

PLO condemn expulsions

From Wafa, Palestine news agency

THE Executive Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organisation yesterday condemned the arbitrary arrest and expulsion of Arabs in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

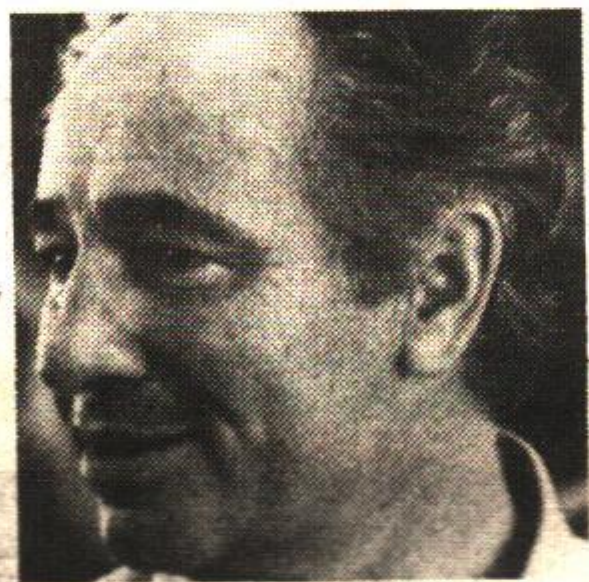

It also pledged its full support for an Arab decision declaring yesterday a day of general strike in the occupied territories.

The executive committee statement said Zionist 'settler-gangs' were being encouraged, financed and armed simultaneously to 'perpetrate organised terrorist actions' to aid in the seizure of land and water sources and the demolition of Arab homes.

It said: 'In addition, threats have been made by the Israeli Prime Minister, Shimon Peres, against the Palestine Liberation Organisation and its leadership.'

'The intensification of military operations and popular upheavals in all the towns, cities, villages and refugee camps are the proof that our militant people are capable of defiance and steadfastness, no matter what the Zionist oppressive measures.

'We are convinced that our people are proving once again to the world their capability in heroically confronting the schemes of Zionist aggression and terror.'

Shirebrook drivers defy British Rail

BY A NEWS LINE REPORTER

TRAIN drivers yesterday defied the British Rails attempts to increase its driver-only freight operations at Shirebrook depot in Nottinghamshire.

Only five driver-only trains left the depot for power stations in the Trent Valley, with three of the trains driven by members of the new breakaway rail union, the Federation of Professional Railway Staff, which is not recognised by BR for negotiations.

They were the first of 140 single-manned services BR plans to operate in the area every week starting yesterday.

But most drivers have already voted not to co-operate with trials. Only 17 out of 151 drivers at Shirebrook and nearby Worksop have agreed to operate the new services.

Nine men refused to work the trains at the two depots yesterday and were sent home without pay. Others have been sent home over the past six weeks for refusing to take part in trials.

BR's stance comes in the wake of last week's ballot of guards, who voted narrowly not to strike over the same issue.

The drivers, members of ASLEF, say one-man operation should not be brought in on freight trains without the radio communications system carried on one-man passenger trains.

Director

NUR General Secretary, Jimmy Knapp, has been told by BR personnel director John Palette that there can be no further talks on the principle of one-man trains.

A special meeting of the NUR executive has been called today at Blackpool which will discuss recommendations to be put to the recalled delegate conference as a consequence of the ballot vote.

WEATHER

ENGLAND and Wales will have sunny intervals and showers, some heavy, with longer outbreaks of rain at times. Northern Ireland and western Scotland will be rather cloudy with rain turning more showery later. Northern and eastern Scotland will be mostly cloudy with periods of rain. Cool and windy. Outlook: Unsettled and cool with showers or rain at times and some sunny intervals. Becoming less cool in the south.

Conditions blamed for toddler's death

POOR housing conditions may have been partly to blame for the tragedy of battered toddler Jasmine Beckford, the resumed independent inquiry into her death heard yesterday.

Health visitor Judy Knowles said Jasmine's mother Beverley Lorrington, who was pregnant, 'constantly complained' about conditions in the cramped one-bedroom flat in Kensal Green, north London.

'It was one of the things that always came across when I visited. The housing was the great pressure on Beverley. She felt life would be much easier for her and the family if they weren't in this grotty flat,' she said.

'We tried everything to get her out.'

Knowles was giving evidence as the inquiry at Brent town hall resumed for its final week after the summer break.

Jasmine died aged four in July last year from wounds inflicted by her stepfather, Maurice Beckford, who was later jailed for ten years at the Old Bailey for her manslaughter.

Beverley Lorrington, 25, was jailed for 18 months for wilful neglect.

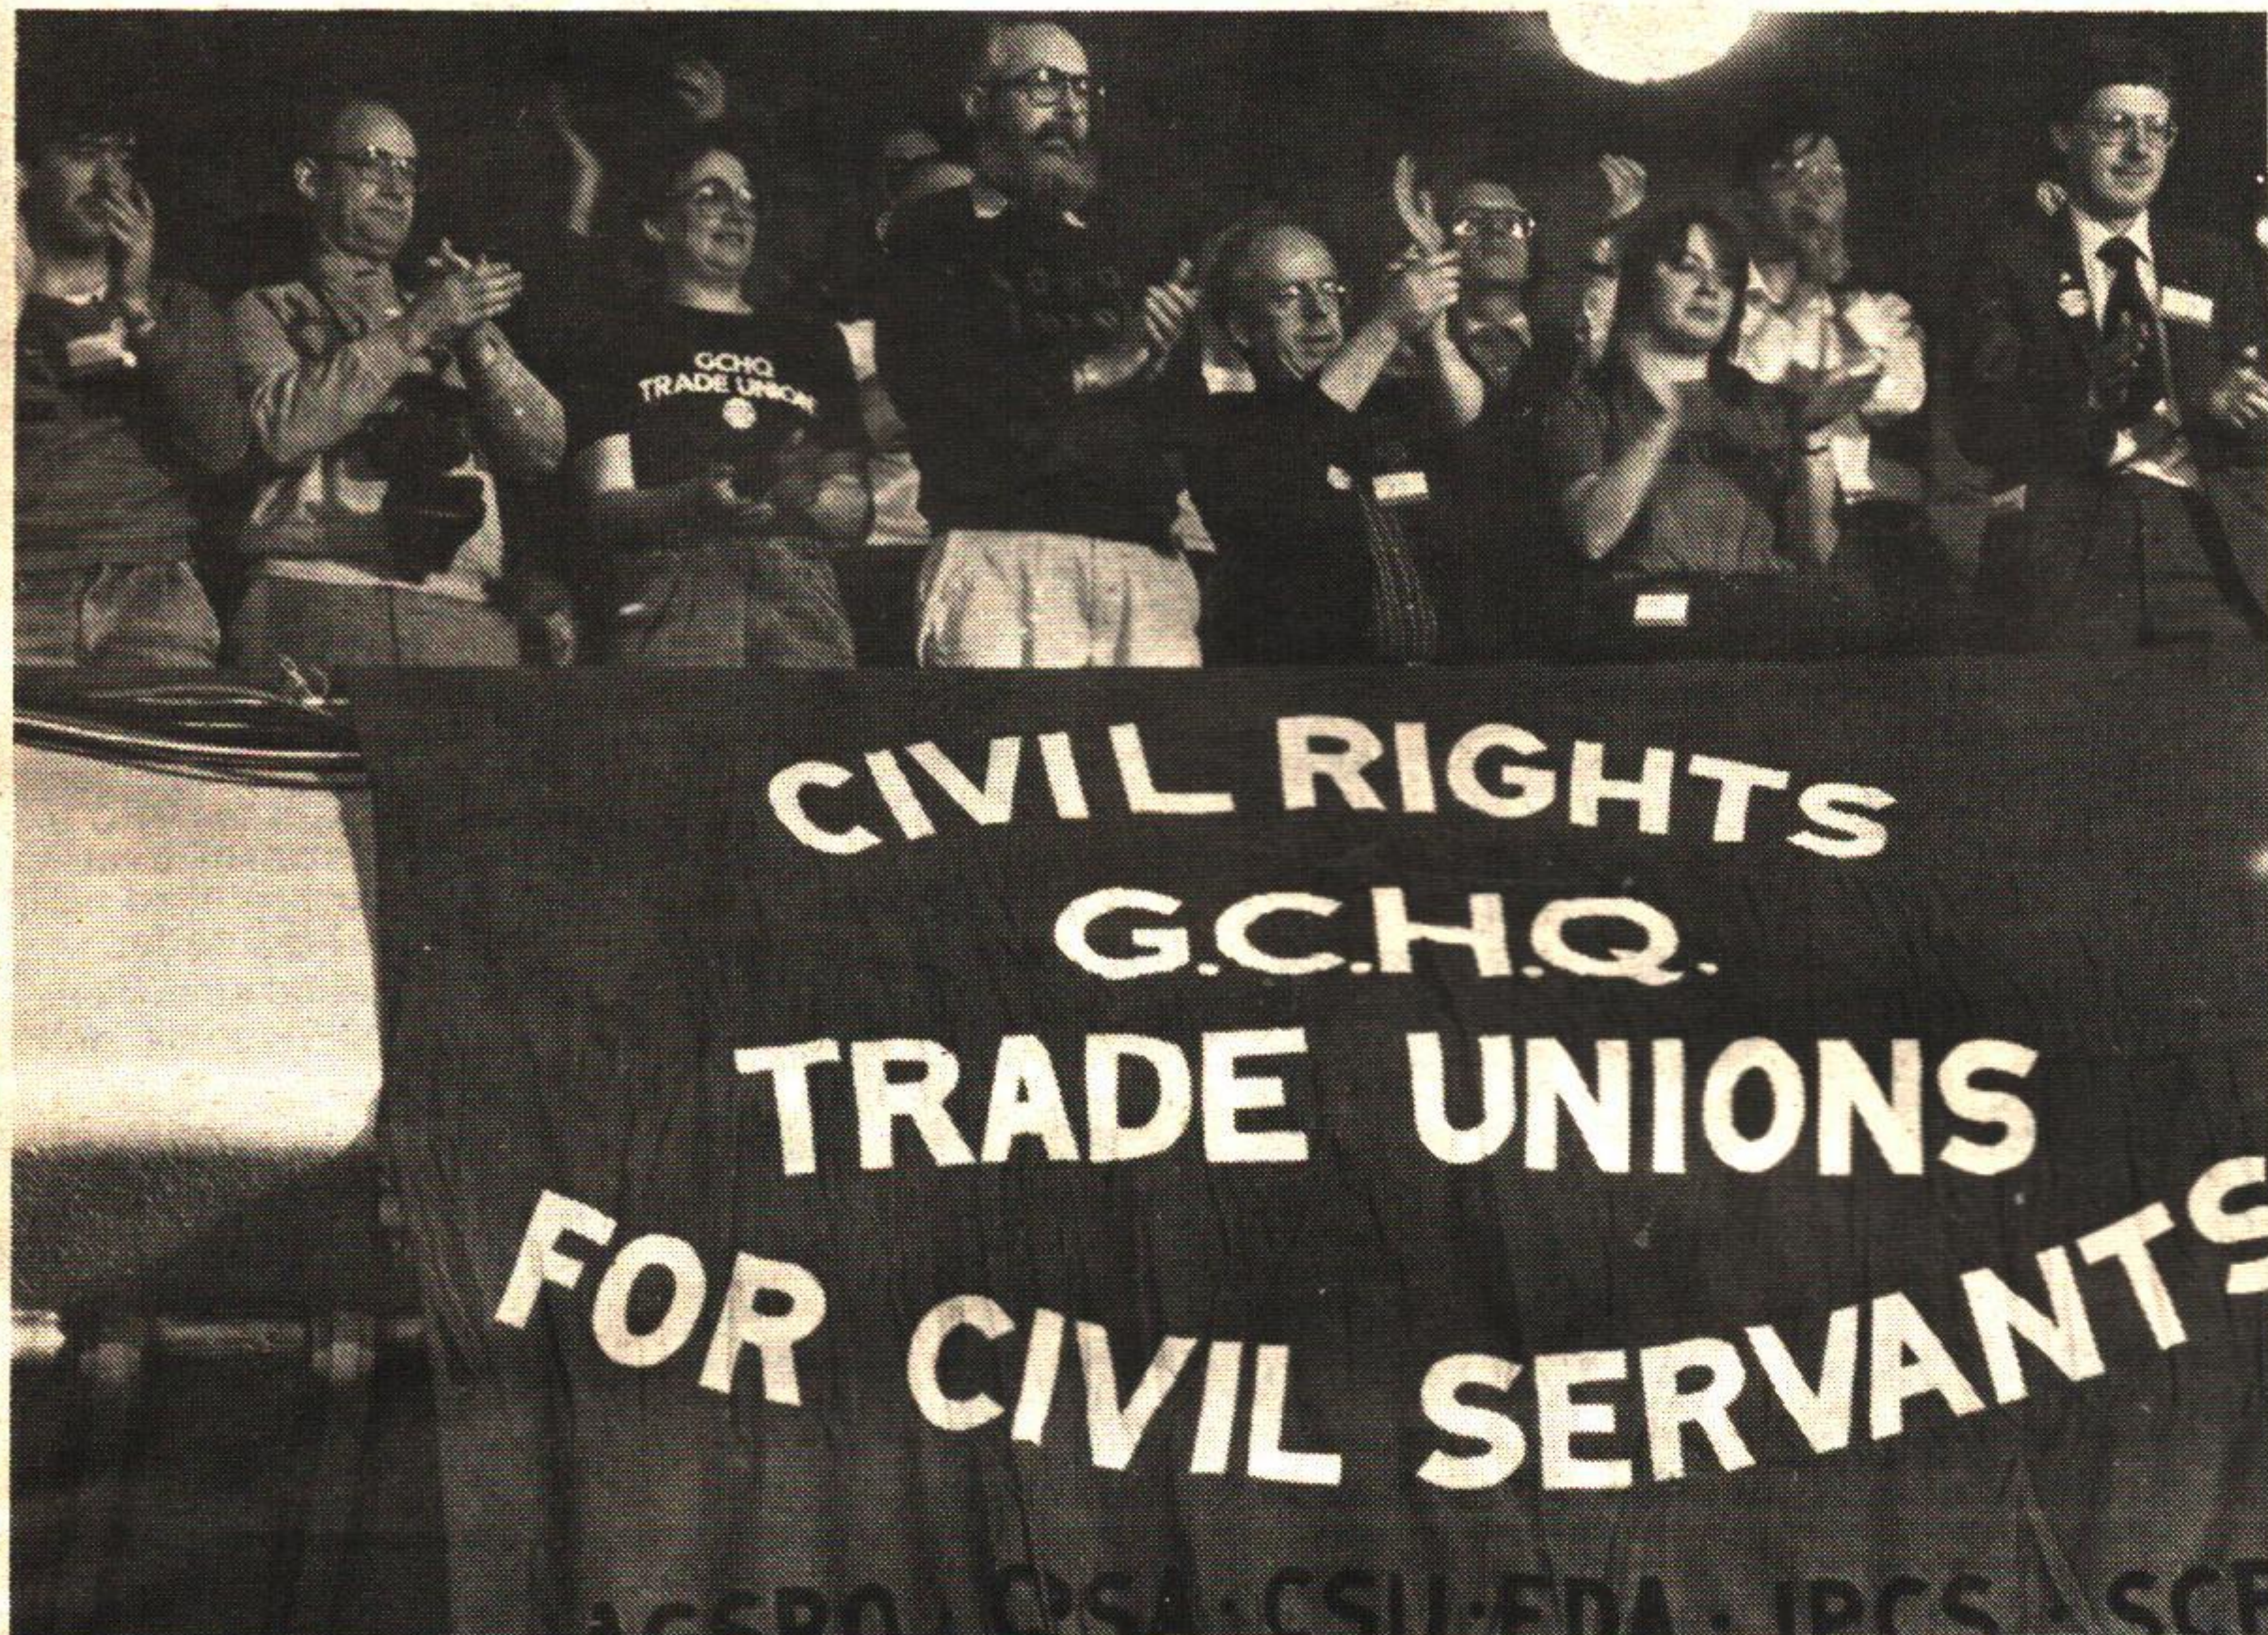

Knowles, now a health visitor in Exeter, said that when she left Brent social services in 1982 she wrote in Jasmine's case file that she looked 'pathetic, with little speech or concentration'.

She told the inquiry: 'Her appearance was pathetic because she had had many changes and many traumas in her life over the last few months.'

TUC

Call to defend GCHQ unions

A group of GCHQ workers (above) were given a standing ovation at the TUC yesterday

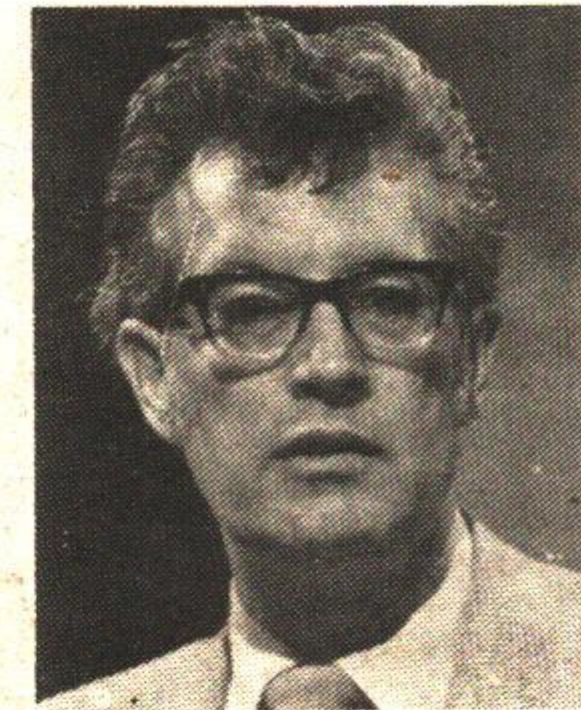

THE sacking of a single trade unionist at the GCHQ spy centre must be the cue for a day of strike action by the whole trade union movement, the TUC congress was told yesterday.

Rodney Bickerstaffe, general secretary of the National Union of Public Employees (NUPE), said that a day of action must involve 'massive industrial action the like of which this government has not seen before'.

A sea of hands went up as the congress unanimously backed the call for a day of protest to defend GCHQ union members who are again under threat.

Delegates had earlier given a standing ovation to a delegation of GCHQ union members in the visitors' balcony who have defied the Tory ban on trade union organisation at Cheltenham.

GMBATU leader David Basnett and electricians' union general secretary Eric Hammond pledged to ballot their members in the electricity supply industry on strike action.

Basnett said: 'The time for resolutions, motions and rhetoric are fast disappearing. What we need now is solidarity and firm purpose of action.'

Hammond said he was confident of securing a massive vote for strike action from workers at power stations and depots if the Thatcher government sacks GCHQ staff.

Moving the resolution, Civil Service Union (CSU) leader John Sheldon said that despite pressure from the Tory government and management, 100 workers at GCHQ had retained union membership.

'It is the view of the trade unionists at GCHQ that nothing can compensate for the loss of dignity and human rights imposed by that ban,' he said.

The Tory ban on unions at GCHQ had lowered morale and only 20 per cent of workers there had joined the 'sweetheart', state-run staff association.

Sheldon said the Thatcher government was using 'threats to national security' as a smokescreen for its attack on basic rights.

'We, as trade unionists stick firm to the belief that the right to belong to a trade union should be enjoyed by all the British people as a fundamental right.'

'We are calling on the movement to act on its previous pledges. If any union members at GCHQ are dismissed we are asking you to take action in their support,' he added.

Diana Warwick, the general secretary of the Association of University Teachers (AUT), said the Tory ban was a demonstration of the 'sheer tyranny' of the Thatcher government and an example of its 'authoritarian ideology'.

Warwick linked the treatment of the GCHQ union members to state censorship at the BBC and the Tories' attack on all basic rights.

Sacked Glasgow rail guard Pat Devitt took advantage of the GCHQ debate to tell the congress how British Rail is using 'jackboot' industrial relations to impose changes on the railways.

BR issued an ultimatum to the guards to accept one-man trains. When they refused they were sacked. 'This is the industrial tyranny we've faced as railway workers,' he added.

Fight no-strike deals

A STINGING attack on no-strike deals and planned government legislation to ban strikes in 'essential' services came during the main debate at the TUC yesterday on anti-union legislation.

Firemen's union leader Ken Cameron, whose members will be in the front line of the proposed strike ban, demanded of those backing no-strike deals:

'You tell me where that leaves me and my members?'

He said trade unions were the only effective opposition for the working class in what was a class-war with the Tory government.

'Let's realise that our class is under attack and unite to fight this Tory government,' he said.

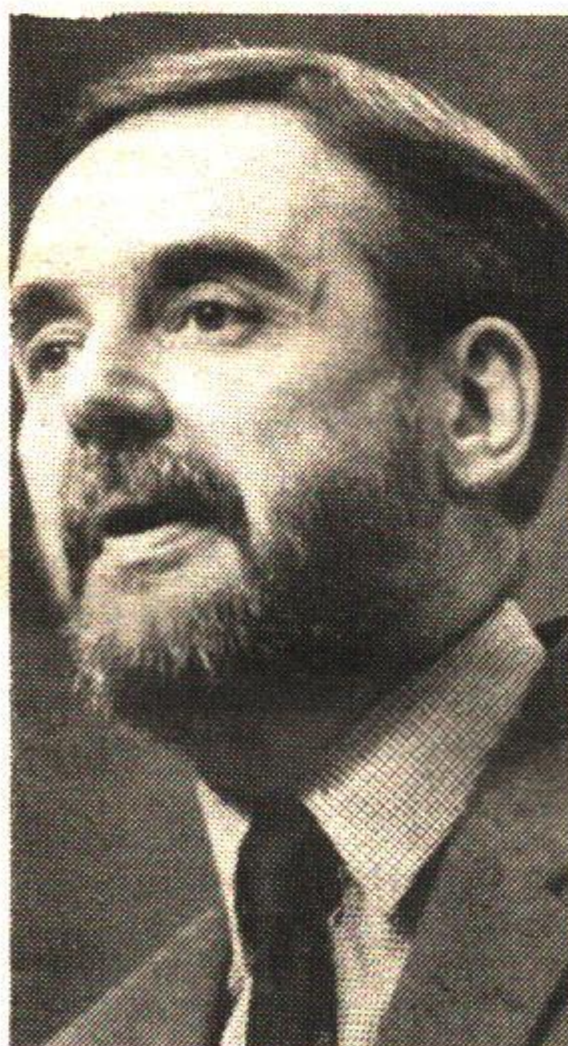

Warned

He warned that workers in the electricity supply industry, whose union, the EETPU, has agreed no-strike deals, were certain to face legal strike bans under the new laws planned by the Thatcher government.

Tom Sawyer, from the public service workers' union NUPE, said the definition of 'essential' services by the Tories was an 'endless list'.

The government want to stop strikes in all areas where people are standing 'up, and fighting for David Norman, from the NCU telephone engineers' union, said a repeal of the Tory anti-union laws was essential, but he also favoured a new legal framework for trade union rights.

His union was calling for the scrapping of the government-funded ACAS arbitration body, which he said had been 'tainted by six years of Thatcherism'.

Brenda Dean, general secretary of the SOGAT print union, said her union favoured new laws to allow unions to impose injunctions on employers who lock out members who are not in breach of their own contracts.

Ray Buckton, ASLEF general secretary, urging support for the Wembley conference decisions, said:

Unite

'If we unite instead of fighting among ourselves, we could put a stop to the chaos caused by this government.'

He added that TUC decisions should be obeyed.

'If everybody stood strictly by what we decided to do last year for the miners, we wouldn't have been in the mess we are in today where people are drifting away.'

He said his union wanted a firm commitments and communities,' he said.

And referring to no-strike agreements, he added: 'No one has the right to sell our right to strike won in struggle by our forefathers.'

Earlier in the debate, Alistair Graham had put his own interpretation on the motion reaffirming Wembley conference decisions.

He said the motion would allow a Labour government to retain parts of the anti-union law which were popular with trade unionists — though he did not say what these were.

He said the TUC should work out a framework for 'positive legislation' to give trade unionists the right to strike, though there would also be a self-policing system to ensure that unions did not breach agreements.

This position had been criticised by the retiring chairman of the TUC Employment Committee Bill Keys.

He told the conference that the strength of the trade union movement came from its members and not from the law.

He warned that a bill of rights would result in lawyers taking over the interpretation of union matters, which was something the TUC would

'Sporting Life' up for sale

THE 12-day-old Mirror shutdown ended yesterday when printing workers accepted a formula under which Mr Robert Maxwell will sell the 'Sporting Life'.

The production of today's 'Daily Mirror' began after members of the National Graphical Association voted to accept a deal put to them by national officials.

The 300 employees on 'Sporting Life' will be absorbed into the staff of other papers under a policy of no automatic replacement of staff who retire or leave.

Maxwell secured the agreement after dangling the prospect of a colour evening daily for the greater London area.

He told the NGA the giveaway daily, with a circulation of one million, would come into production as soon as he had installed a new modern press.

He has kicked 'Daily Mirror' editor Mike Molloy upstairs and made him editor-in-chief of the 'Daily Mirror', 'Sunday Mirror' and the 'People' with the task of organising the conversion to colour printing.

Speaking at the Blackpool TUC, Maxwell claimed to have received six offers for the 'Sporting Life' which will be sold off in the next four weeks.

He said: 'This is an excellent result after prolonged but good-tempered discussion between management and unions, and shows a realism of the problems of central London newspaper production which is greatly welcomed.'

'Good sense has prevailed without the need to pursue the battle through the courts.'

This was a vastly different tune from the one he played last Friday night when he shut down Holborn Circus saying he would move the printing of his Mirror titles out of Fleet Street for good.

Trade union leaders in Blackpool said the peace-maker in the talks between Maxwell and the NGA was Bill Keys, outgoing secretary of SOGAT 82 and chairman of the TUC's printing committee.

Delegates at the TUC yesterday

No to single union deals

THE TUC yesterday overwhelmingly condemned single union agreements which destroy the rights of other affiliated unions.

The vote again left leaders of the AUEW engineering and EETPU electricians' unions isolated as the only delegations opposing the motion.

Tony Dubbins, general secretary of the National Graphical Association (NGA), said: 'Single union agreements stand our traditional principles on their heads. Under this system it's not which union the workers want to represent them but who the employer wants to represent them.'

Dubbins said the NGA had faced colossal fines and sequestration in its battle with Eddy Shah.

He said the NGA believed that it had been fighting on behalf of the whole trade union movement.

Now leaders of the EETPU were prepared to go behind the backs of the NGA and Sogat 82, enter secret negotiations and conclude a single-union, no-strike deal with Shah for the production of his new national daily paper.

'They say they are willing to consult us after the event. I don't know what we are supposed to be consulting about.'

We've lost our bargaining rights, they've given away the closed shop — the very basis of our organisation in the national newspaper industry,' said Dubbins bitterly.

Harry Conroy, the newly elected general secretary of the National Union of Journalists (NUJ), also condemned the electricians' planned deal with Shah.

'We believe that unions which have traditionally organised in areas should be left to get on with it,' he said.

Conroy said that the NUJ wanted negotiations with Shah, but he had refused them until he has chosen the journalists for the new paper.

He added: 'We cannot treat the right to belong to a trade union which has been handed down to us as if it was a franchise or the next step will be house unions or sweetheart unions.'

Roy Grantham, leader of the clerical workers' union APEX, who moved the resolution, said the TUC had a central responsibility 'to reduce the excessive and damaging competition between unions'.

The resolution called for an amendment of the TUC disputes procedure to curb such abuses of its Bridlington agreement covering the relationship between unions.

Grantham attacked the role of the electricians' union and particularly the no-strike deal it reached with management at the Hitachi factory in South Wales.

Labour Party adopts a low profile

THE LABOUR Party speaker at the TUC yesterday, Alan Hadden, made a very low-key speech to the Congress.

Neil Kinnock, Labour leader, has fought shy of delegates this year, and declined the traditional right to address trade union delegates.

Positive

Hadden merely said that the Labour Party had very close ties with the TUC to judge by the positive votes in all 13 political-fund ballots to be held so far.

He described Kinnock as 'young and vigorous' and said that Labour's most important asset was its 'will to win'.

A similarly low-profile contribution was made by president Jack Eccles, but whilst attacking government policies, he defended parliamentary democracy, saying 'whilst I remain sharply critical of the government for its unfair and incompetent policies, we must not fail to remember that we live in a democratic country'.

Argument

The logic of this argument was that in the final result the Tory government had to be obeyed, it appeared.

'Government has to be recognised as the final authority,' Eccles said, 'Elections are a means of conferring that authority.'

KIEREN DOYLE

lost 230,000 jobs under the Reagan administration.

The job-cutting programme undertaken on both sides of the Atlantic was the major problem facing both his organisation and the TUC.

Youth medallist attacks YTS

THE YTS government schemes were attacked by Kieren Doyle a nursing auxiliary from northern Ireland, and winner of the TUC's Congress Award for Youth.

'The YTS programmes offer little more than cheap labour for the employer,' he said, accepting the Youth Award for the first time for COHSE, and the first time for a delegate from the north of Ireland.

Doyle also urged the maximum unity of the trade union movement to fight for a future for the youth and to preserve the National Health Service in the face of government attempts to abolish unions altogether, he said, it was vital that workers were not set against workers.

His contribution came amid yesterday's heated internal arguments over the AUEW engineering union's acceptance of Tory cash for ballots against TUC policy.

Monty Montes, winner of the Gold Badge, spoke of his experiences fighting for the Republican Movement in Spain.

He was captured in 1937 by Franco's forces and given a 25-year jail sentence while all the colleagues arrested with him were sentenced to death.

He said the Thatcher government had a very similar attitude to that of the Franco regime, but added that despite 30 years of tyranny in Spain, Franco's forces had been defeated.

He won applause from a section of the audience when he said he had not respected the police when he was young, and still did not respect them.

Jo Hewitt, winner of the women's Gold Badge, and a member of TASS, the white-collar engineering union, paid tribute to the struggle of the miners' wives both during and since the miners' strike.

DON'T TRUST THE TUC LEADERS

WRP general secretary tells march meeting

BY OUR OWN REPORTER

THE MERCILESS exposure of TUC traitors must take place as part of the preparation for the General Strike, WRP general secretary Mike Banda told a rally in Blackpool yesterday.

Hundreds of people packed into the Grand Theatre after a powerful demonstration through the town, led by the March to Release the Jailed Miners.

'Keep an extremely wary and distrustful eye on these leaders,' Banda said.

The only exceptions were Scargill and Heathfield, because they had said 'to hell with ballots' and shown their firmness in practice in the miners' strike.

Banda said what had emerged was two ways in which the capitalist class ruled.

'One is by the ballot and the other is by the bullet. And what we shall see is a combination of both.'

The ruling class was preparing for civil war, as shown by the mobilisation of troops in the Brave Defender exercise this week.

And they wanted to obscure their preparation with the use of ballots.

Now a very sinister development was emerging — corporatism — and the road to a General Strike was up a very rocky mountain.

Before declaring war through a General Strike the working class had to rid itself of the leadership of Duffy and company.

'They are working actively with the capitalist class against the working class,' Banda said.

Banda warned against leaders like Willis who was working hand in glove with Kinnoch in preparation for a Bonapartist Labour Government.

It was hypocritical to demand the expulsion of the AUEW and EETPU from the TUC while at the same time preparing for the same laws under a Labour Government, Banda said.

March leader, Simon Pirani bitterly condemned those such as TUC General Secretary Norman Willis who refused to speak to the marchers during the morning lobby.

One, Jimmy Airlie, of the Scottish TUC, had said he did not support the release of the two South Wales miners jailed for life.

'The two lads in Wales are there because of the Thatcher regime. They are class war prisoners,' said Pirani.

'This cowardly and twisted logic we came across today stood in sharp contradiction to our discussions along the road with miners, shop stewards, engineers, railmen and many others.'

People had agreed that there had to be a General Strike to bring down the regime, but asked, could it really happen under these conditions and with this leadership?

Conditions

It was the Tories with their attacks on the unions which were creating the conditions for a general strike. But the government were acting from a position of weakness. The biggest factor was the movement of the black masses against the apartheid regime in South Africa.

John Barrie, secretary of the NUR guards at Glasgow, Queen Street, bitterly condemned the Stalinists, revisionists and those in the Labour Party who were trying to say that the NUR guards were defeated.

The issue was that the NUR leaders had complied with the Tory anti-union laws by conducting a ballot, Barrie said.

'Ballots are nothing but a trap. Everything was gained through bitter class struggle. We have never achieved a single gain through ballots.'

The Glasgow guards, including 165 sacked men — were demanding an AGM to call an immediate and indefinite strike of all NUR members without a ballot and to link this with the fight of the NUM to release all jailed miners and reinstate sacked men.

The secretary of Durham mechanics NUM, Bill Etherington, said the evil of ballots was that not all people taking part were affected in the same way.

As a Labour Party member, he supported all the demands of the march, including the call for a General Strike.

'We must organise it because it's eventually got to come.'

Elizabeth Hughes, whose son Kevin, a Dawdon miner, has been jailed, said: 'If there are any trade unionists or TUC delegates in this hall, it's time they take up the fight for the miners, because next time it may be them being put in jail.'

YS National Secretary Julie Hyland said that three years ago, the YS had lobbied the TUC to demand they withdraw from the cheap labour manpower services commission.

Those who continued to collaborate with the MSC should be dealt with like those who were collaborating with the Tory anti-union laws.

'We warn them, watch the way the South African masses deal with their traitors,' she said.

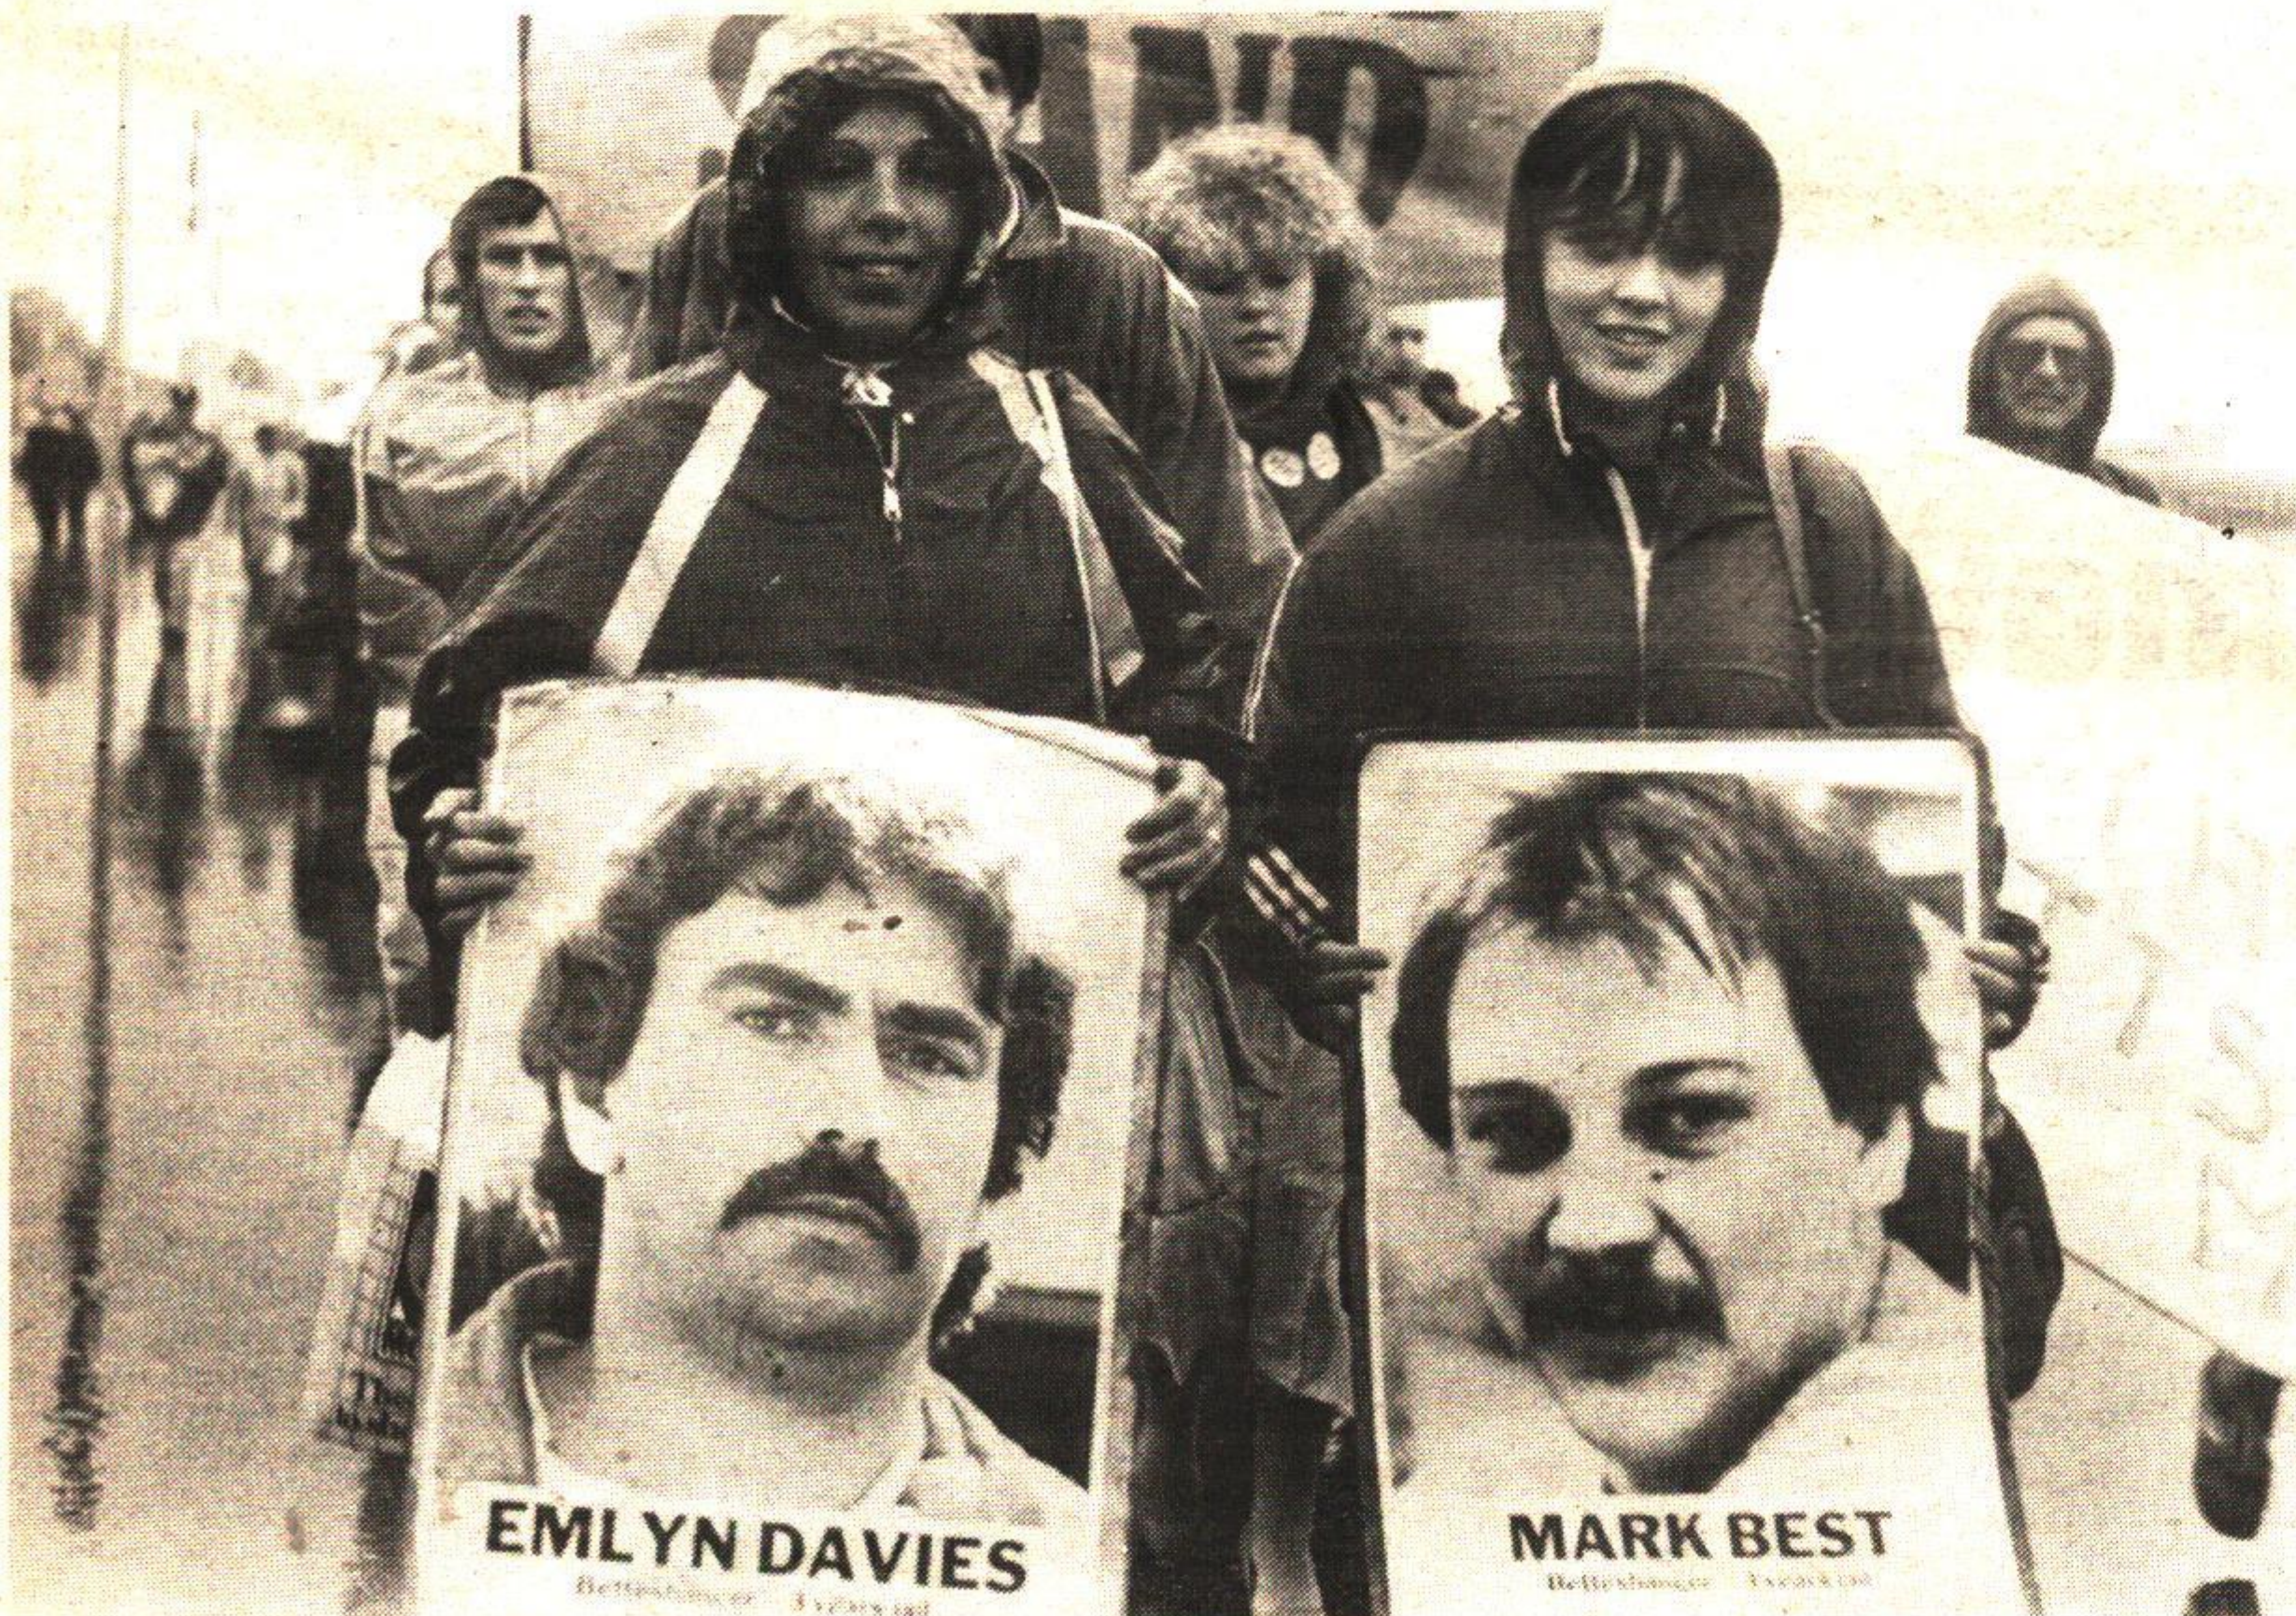

Kent miners' leader, Jack Collins recalled that one year ago, the TUC leaders had given standing ovations to Scargill, and promptly forgotten about the miners.

Organise

'If these leaders are not prepared to organise and fight to get them out of jail, then they are jailors just as much as the Tories,' he said.

Mick McGinty, treasurer of the Nottinghamshire Forum, greeted the marchers on behalf of striking Notts miners.

He condemned those like Scottish Stalinist NUM leader, George Bolton, who, after the event were saying that there should have been a ballot before the miners' strike.

JILL DAVIES and Tracy Best whose husbands Emlyn and Mark are Kent miners serving two-year sentences joined yesterday's lobby and the march through Blackpool.

Commenting on the march, they said: 'It's good that people are still thinking of the jailed miners and sacked men. The TUC promised a lot of things last year, but they never got a lot off the ground. They should have had a general strike.'

'Now they should do something more positive.'

Papandreou's 'No' to IMF

ATHENS — Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou yesterday pledged that his government would not seek financial help from the IMF, describing the body as 'an organ of international conservatism'. His remarks followed a speech on Sunday in which he hinted that his PASOK government could adopt a more conservative economic policy.

Thorn-EMI's Iran windfall

TEHRAN — Britain's Thorn EMI and its Iranian technical representative Pars-Link have won a £2 million lighting contract for an airport at Mashad, the eastern city, Pars-Link representatives said yesterday. Thorn EMI supplies lighting equipment to Pars-Link, which undertakes the installation. The agreement was signed last month and is expected to take up to one year to complete.

GUNMEN SHOOT ARAFAT AIDES

BY A FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT

SIDON — Hussein al-Haybi, a prominent deputy of Palestine Liberation Organisation chairman Yassir Arafat, was seriously wounded by unidentified gunmen yesterday.

Al-Haybi was hit at his house in the Ein el-Helweh refugee camp on Sidon's outskirts in south Lebanon.

The attack on al-Haybi followed the assassination two days previously of Arafat's chief deputy in Sidon, Mustafa Qassem Khalifah, by masked gunmen at his house in Ein el-Helweh.

The wounded PLO leader is one of four of Arafat's top lieutenants ordered out of Sidon last July by the Mediterranean city's pro-Syrian militia leaders.

Al-Haybi, in his 50s and commander of a security unit of the PLO's Fatah organisation, was taken to a Beirut hospital in serious condition.

He had several bullet wounds, Lebanese security sources said.

Tension at Ein el-Helweh and the nearby Mieh Mieh Palestinian refugee camp has mounted since Shi'ite Amal militiamen besieged Sabra, Shatila and Bourj al-Barajneh camps in Beirut's southern suburbs last May and June.

Sidon's civic and militia leaders have recently made unsubstantiated allegations against Arafat and accused him of smuggling arms into Sidon.

The Muslim leaders in Sidon claim Arafat is trying to rebuild a power base in south Lebanon after failing to regain a foothold in Beirut.

On July 26, the bodies of four Palestinians, three of them Fatah members, were found riddled with bullets near Mieh Mieh.

Al-Haybi, a chief of a Palestinian tribal group of the same name, left Sidon after Israel's June 1982 invasion but returned to Ein el-Helweh when Israeli occupation troops left the area in February.

The PLO's political affairs director, Farouk Khadumi, is scheduled soon to visit Damascus to try to iron out differences over the Amman accord, the Arabic daily 'Al-Qabas' has reported.

It quoted Khadumi saying he would head a delegation to the Syrian capital for talks 'to clear the air between Syria and the PLO'.

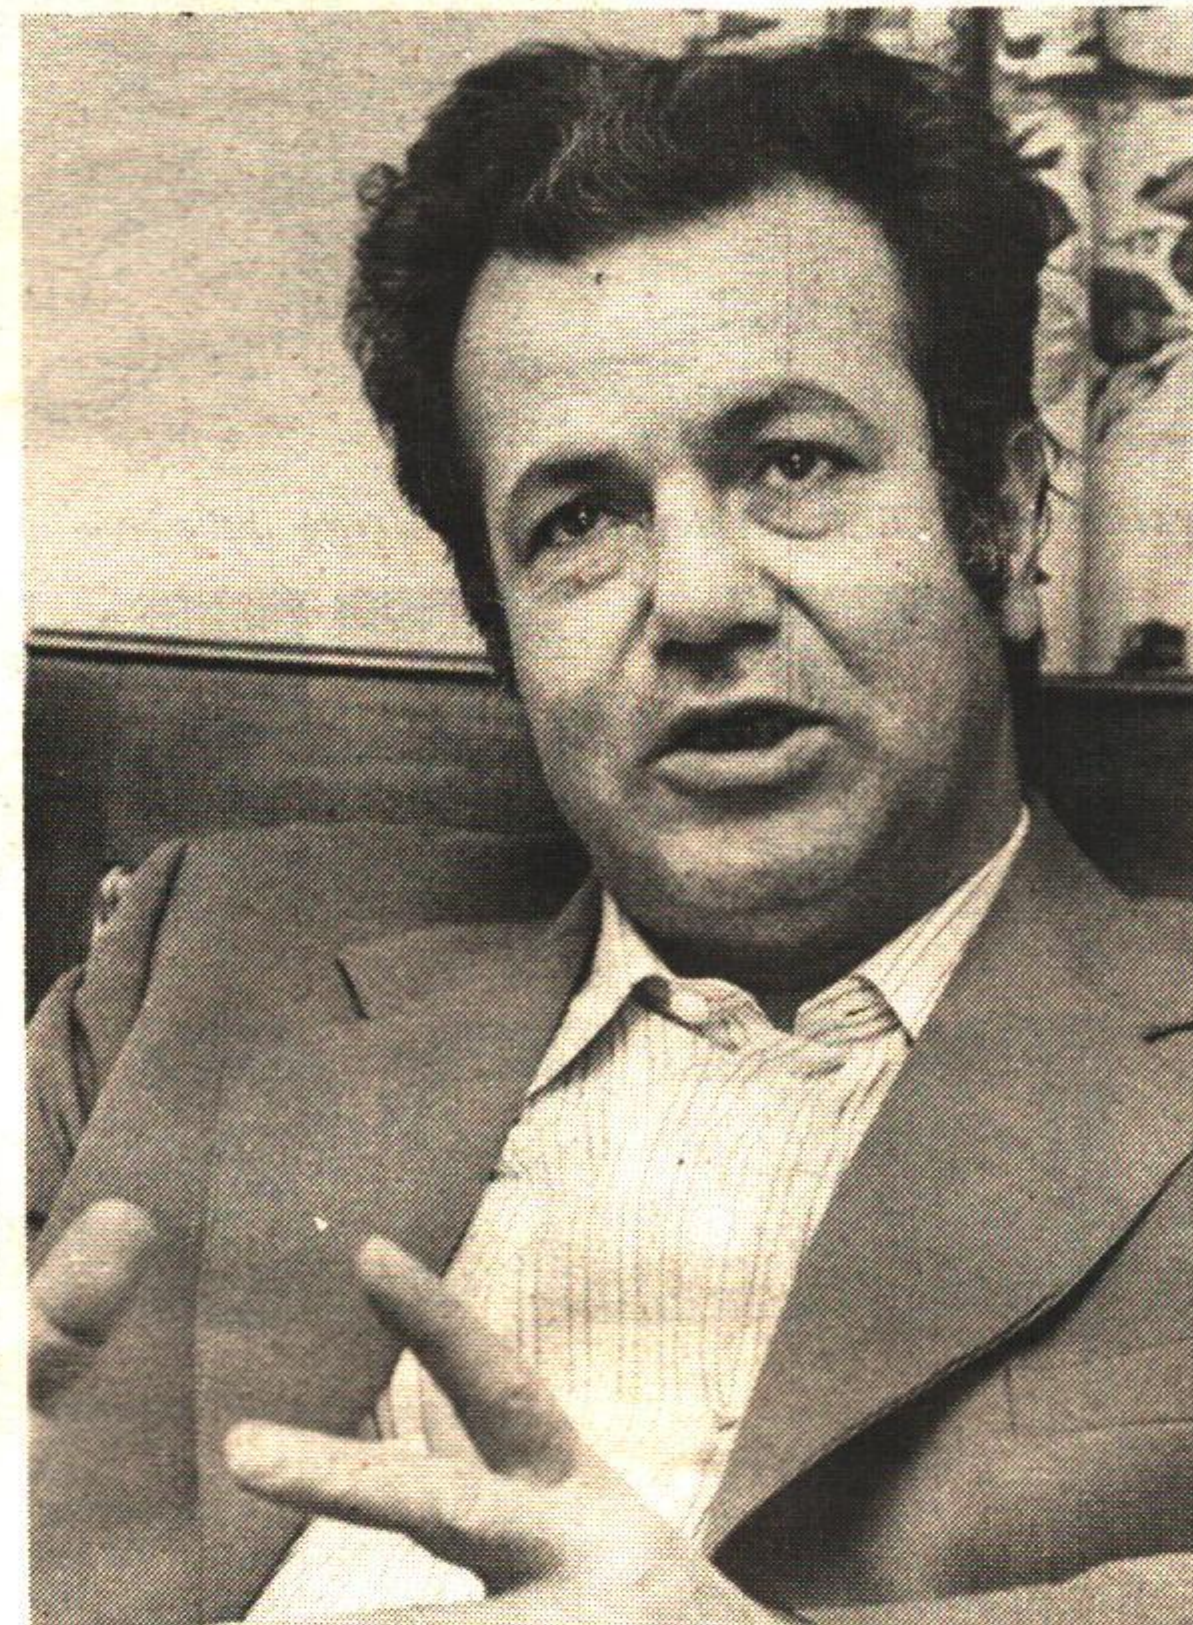

Proposed

The paper said the proposed visit followed moves by Arab and other states, including the Soviet Union, to arrange peace talks.

The PLO ten-man inner Cabinet, meanwhile, ended a two-day meeting at the weekend during which it discussed future policy.

● In Jerusalem, Defence Minister Yitzhak Rabin said the navy would be sent anywhere in the Mediterranean to foil alleged PLO attempts to land seaborne commandoes in Israel.

The remarks to a gathering of American Zionist fundraisers follows Prime Minister Shimon Peres' claims last week that Arafat was personally conducting a guerrilla campaign.

Saudi prince talks

KUWAIT — Prince Faisal Bin Fahd, a son of King Fahd, says he had 'extremely good' talks in Moscow last week on global and Middle East affairs.

Prince Faisal met the First Deputy at the Soviet Foreign Ministry, George Korninke, during the visit — the first recent visit to Moscow by a member of the Saudi Arabian royal family.

He also met the head of the Soviet Foreign Ministry's Middle East Department, Vladimir Polyakov.

He told reporters: 'I describe them (the talks) as extremely good.'

Pol Pot removed from leadership

BANGKOK — Deposed Kampuchean dictator Pol Pot has been removed as president of the Khmer Rouge and chief of the Democratic Kampuchean National Army.

Khmer Rouge radio said Pol Pot, 60, had reached retirement age and had been replaced by Son Sen as army chief and Khieu Samphan as president.

It added that he had been appointed chairman of a 'high-level technical office for national defence'.

He was replaced under an order signed by Khmer Rouge vice-president Khieu Samphan, the radio said.

A spokesman for Prince Norodom Sihanouk, president of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea that includes the Khmer Rouge and Son Sann's Khmer People's National Liberation Front, welcomed the announcement.

He said: 'It is the wish of all the Kampuchean people. We don't like him.'

The Khmer radio said Son Sen would also assume the post of vice-president of the counter-revolutionary Khmer Rouge as well army chief.

Son Sen was the Khmer Rouge Defence Minister in the CGDK until his new appointment.

Pol Pot's sacking is a prelude to an accord that the CGDK leaders are trying to reach with Hanoi.

Vietnam has long made the ousting of Pol Pot and Ieng Sary, another Khmer Rouge leader, a condition for the withdrawal of its troops from Kampuchea.

Pol Pot headed the Khmer Rouge regime in Kampuchea from April 1975 and presided over a bloodbath of nearly 2 million people during his three-year reign of terror.

He forced urban Kampuchean out of the cities into forced labour in the rice paddies, abolished the currency and burned books.

Swiss move on Tamils

GENEVA — Swiss Justice Minister Elisabeth Kopp says the overwhelming majority of about 2,300 Tamil refugees will soon be repatriated to Sri Lanka.

She told the weekly 'Sonntagsblick' that the civil war in Sri Lanka had now 'calmed down decisively'.

'In our view the situation in Sri Lanka has calmed down decisively. It will thus only be a matter of time before the majority of Tamils are sent back.'

'They know that no one will be accepted as political refugees, with the exception of a very few cases.'

The Berne government has been bitterly criticised by the London-based Amnesty International and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.

Both organisations have called on the government not to repatriate Tamils because of the escalating civil war in Sri Lanka.

About 2,300 Tamils are awaiting a review of their political asylum applications.

Tanaka makes appeal

TOKYO — The Tokyo High Court yesterday began hearing an appeal by ailing former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka against his conviction for accepting $2 million in bribes from the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation.

A lower court sentenced Tanaka, 67, to four years in prison in 1983 for taking the money while holding office.

Tanaka was Prime Minister from 1972 to 1974 and retained such considerable backstage political power that he was known as Japan's 'shadow Shogun'.

A stroke last February diplomatically removed him from public life.

His 18 lawyers yesterday took turns reading a 3,024-page appeal that focused on three key issues — that Tanaka never received the money, that he had no influence over a decision to buy airliners and that the prosecution acted illegally in obtaining affidavits from former Lockheed executives.

Tanaka's former secretary, Toshio Enomoto, who was given a suspended sentence in 1983 for violating the Foreign Exchange and Control Law, also pleaded not guilty yesterday.

Three former executives of Marubeni Corporation, Lockheed's former agents in Japan, are also appealing against their conviction.

Pressure mounts on Marcos

MANILA — Philippine opposition leaders are making a Supreme Court appeal challenging the decision of the ruling party to block the impeachment of President Ferdinand Marcos.

National Assembly member Luis Villafuerte said the opposition was preparing a petition and it could be filed within ten days.

Fifty-two opposition members filed the resolution last month accusing Marcos of graft, corruption and other crimes.

It was dismissed by a parliamentary committee dominated by pro-Marcos MPs two weeks ago.

BOTHA'S IRON FIST AGAINST STRIKERS

JOHANNESBURG — Troops, police and armed security men have turned South Africa's goldfields into militarised zones as the Botha regime prepares to crush the miners' strike.

National Union of Mineworkers general secretary Cyril Ramaphosa said some miners had not obeyed the strike call.

'Workers have been intimidated and there was nothing else they could do but go down,' he said.

Mining bosses told NUM members at some mines they would be shot on sight if they try to picket other miners who are not members of the union.

Ramaphosa said that telephones at the union's offices suddenly failed when the strike began on Sunday night.

'It is a very strange coincidence that when we need the telephones most of them are not working,' he said. 'The strike centre is cut off from the workers who are not able to get news to us or instructions from us.'

The United Democratic Front, most of whose leaders are in jail or in hiding, called on supporters to prepare for 'strong solidarity action' with miners if management used force to suppress the strike.

'We warn the police and the mine bosses that if they continue with the violent suppression of the workers' strike, we will have no option but to call on our affiliates to embark on strong solidarity action,' it said.

Sweat

'The wealth and power of the apartheid state has been built on the sweat and blood of the miners. That is why the continued exploitation is so crucial to the bosses.'

Gold Fields of South Africa Ltd said less than half its morning shift had reported for work at the Deelkraal gold mine west of Johannesburg. The mine employs some 9,000 workers.

Twenty-three miners have been arrested at Gold Fields' Kloof mine west of Johannesburg for alleged 'intimidation' of other miners. Six were injured at the same mine, the company said.

At General Mining Union Corporation's Beatrix mine in the Orange Free State, seven miners were hurt when police teargassed a stop work meeting and fired rubber bullets.

When the Johannesburg Stock Exchange reopened yesterday shares in gold companies fell due to fears about the course of the strike.

Jumped

The rand jumped ten cents to 45 cents when the country's money markets were reopened yesterday after a five-day shut-down.

The scramble for rands which pushed the price up does not express any inherent strength in the currency. On the contrary, purchases were being made by companies wanting to meet contracts following the closure of the markets.

The South African economy is now under siege conditions. The repayment of all foreign debts has been halted for four months and a two-tier currency system has been set up to stem the flight of capital abroad.

Under the currency changes, a new financial rand will be quoted at a discount below the commercial rand. The financial rand will be used by foreigners investing or disinvesting in South Africa while normal trade will go through the commercial rate.

The regime's foreign debt is an estimated $20 billion of which $12 billion is due for repayment this year.

Apartheid regime is 'tottering'

HARARE — South Africa is tottering on the brink of collapse, a top official of the African National Congress (ANC) said yesterday.

John Makatini, international affairs spokesman, said the racist state's financial and political situation is rapidly deteriorating and will worsen in the next few months.

'This is no time for dialogue with South Africa,' he said.

'It is time for action and how to dismantle apartheid.'

'We are witnessing an unprecedented flight of capital and a rapid decline in confidence in South Africa.'

'The situation can never be the same again. The regime is tottering on the brink of collapse.'

A funeral march in South Africa

Gorbachev appeals for dialogue

NEW YORK — Relations between the Soviet Union and the US government were in an 'explosive' state but there were 'high' hopes for a summit, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev said in a 'Time' magazine interview published yesterday.

But President Reagan's 'star wars' space militarisation programme could doom arms control talks being conducted in Geneva, Gorbachev warned.

The Soviet leader was giving the first interview to a Western news organisation since assuming the post of general secretary of the Communist Party in March.

Gorbachev, 54, described the state of US-Soviet ties and world affairs in general as 'highly complex, very tense'.

He said: 'I would even go as far as to say it is explosive.'

Relations between the Kremlin and the White House were 'continuing to deteriorate, the arms race intensifying and the war threat not subsiding'.

But Gorbachev said the November summit with Reagan in Geneva could lead to better relations and a relaxation of tensions but that it did not appear as if Washington shared his view.

Washington's approach to the summit was 'a scenario of pressure, of attempts to drive us into a corner, to ascribe to us, as so many times in the past, every mortal sin'.

Gorbachev accused the Reagan government of launching a 'campaign of hatred' against the Soviet Union and said this revealed confusion and uncertainty in Washington and a lack of responsibility.

Results of the summit depended to a large extent on current events, he said.

He rejected US allegations that recent Soviet proposals, including a moratorium on nuclear weapons tests and a ban on anti-satellite weapons tests, were only propaganda.

'Anyone even slightly familiar with the matter would easily see that behind our proposals there are most serious intentions and not just an attempt to influence public opinion,' he said.

The Kremlin was 'prepared to submit to the summit some very serious proposals', he told 'Time' magazine.

A West European diplomat remarked on the interview: 'He combined reasonableness with an appeal for concrete action that must put the Americans on the defensive.'

Congress must back miners

THE decision by the TUC General Council to oppose the NUM's motion on the jailed and sacked miners due for debate in Blackpool today is a stab in the back for the whole working class.

Led by general secretary Norman Willis, the right wing voted to recommend rejection of the miners' resolution which calls on the TUC to campaign for, and a Labour government to legislate for, the reinstatement of sacked miners.

The resolution also calls on any future Labour government to review the cases of all the miners jailed by the Thatcher regime's policemen and judges.

Willis told the General Council yesterday that it would not be 'electorally attractive' for the Labour Party to be tied to these policies in a general election campaign.

This statement speaks volumes both for the reactionary nature of the Labour leadership and the right wing's total compliance with the Bonapartist diktat laid down by Thatcher and the state forces she directs against the working class.

Both Willis and Labour leader Neil Kinnock accept Thatcher's view that the sacked and jailed miners are 'criminals' punished by 'society' for 'acts of violence'.

Throughout the strike both men refused to defend miners against the attacks of the national riot police, condemning instead pickets for resisting the military-style assaults of Thatcher's men in blue.

Willis and the right wing refused to mobilise support for the miners, choosing to ignore the decisions of the 1984 Brighton Congress in support of the NUM's fight against pit closures.

Then the TUC right wing tried to force the miners to accept the National Coal Board's demand for unconditional surrender. But the NUM executive threw the Willis-NCB document out and exposed Thatcher's agents in the workers' movement.

Now the battle has moved to Blackpool, with the NUM still refusing to purge itself before the Tory courts by declaring that its strike was unlawful and unofficial, and Willis and company on their knees before Thatcher and the state.

Miners' president Arthur Scargill says he cannot and will not abandon his members who are sacked and jailed fighting for their jobs, their communities and trade union principles.

Willis and the right wing will not abandon their slavish support for the Bonapartist state machine because they accept completely the capitalist system and all its institutions of class rule over the working class.

The same goes for Kinnock and the Labour leadership. As far as Kinnock is concerned the miners can rot in jail and stay victimised in the same way the Wilson government kept framed-up Shrewsbury picket Des Warren in jail when it took office in 1974.

Even the modest request for a 'review' of the cases of the jailed miners is opposed by Kinnock, just to reassure Thatcher's regime and the state that he would never interfere with the 'due process of the law'.

It is clear that if such a Labour government ever came to office it would be a Bonapartist regime directing the forces of the state against the trade unions just as Thatcher does.

Thatcher's dictatorship is not planning a general election, however, but is pushing on rapidly for an all-out confrontation to smash the trade unions, in which the state will mobilise in civil war fashion against the working class.

The uncompleted miners' strike represented only the first rounds of such a conflict. Today Congress delegates must reject the General Council and back the class war prisoners and sacked miners by supporting the NUM's resolution.

RELEASE THE JAILED MINERS

Powerful lobby with wide support at

BY PENNY BLOOR

MORE than 1,000 trade unionists and youth joined a powerful lobby of the TUC in Blackpool yesterday.

At the centre of attention were the young marchers who have been on the road two weeks from Cortonwood to Blackpool, who led chanting of: 'Release jailed miners! Organise the General Strike!'

Also outside were NUM and women's support group delegations from all over the country and contingents from the Workers Revolutionary Party and Young Socialists.

As miners' leader Arthur Scargill arrived, a young marcher from South Wales presented him with a poster signed by all the marchers.

TUC general secretary Norman Willis walked straight past stony-faced, as marchers asked him: 'What are you going to do about the 60 miners in jail?'

As ASLEF general secretary Ray Buckton walked in, he said: 'As far as I'm concerned I'll support anything that will back the miners.'

Sponsored

Joe Marino, leader of the Bakers' Union, which has officially sponsored the march, said the union supported the call for a General Strike.

'It's the only way to answer all the attacks on the working-class movement.'

In answer to those who said it was impossible to achieve, Marino replied:

'Well, you've got to organise it and campaign for it. It certainly won't happen if you don't fight for it.'

NUM North West area general secretary Sid Vincent said he was very pleased the march had taken place. 'The TUC should get together and get to the government and demand that these people are reinstated and organise days of action for protest.'

NGA print union FoC at the 'Daily Mail', Mike Power, said the issue was to 'get those unions who did support the NUM to commit this TUC to the NUM resolution without the amendment'.

Anne Scargill of Women Against Pit Closures said she hoped people in the trade unions could see the determination of the marchers.

film technicians' union leader said: 'All the sacked miners must be unconditionally reinstated as an immediate thing. We all at the Labour Party, and all left have to combine to ensure they are reinstated and the next Labour government must be committed to this.'

Direct action needed against apartheid

BLACKPOOL '85

TUC

Interview with JIM SLATER
of the National Union of Seamen

TRADE UNIONISTS must take 'direct action' to assist the fight against the apartheid regime in South Africa, says Jim Slater, general secretary of the National Union of Seamen (NUS).

In an interview with News Line Slater explained how his union had taken the initiative in forming 'Maritime Unions Against Apartheid' with the Danish and Australian seamen's unions and the Transport and General Workers Union.

He said: 'We decided to set an example. Some massive demonstrations and great rallies have taken place but these were not an end in themselves.

Policy

'We had to get beyond the policy of waiting for the next demo or lobby or things would never change. The authorities in South Africa, and those that support the regime in this country, could put up with all that.

'They could not put up with direct action and that's what we decided to do. Otherwise the question of fighting apartheid could be just something that people bothered with two or three times a year.'

Slater said the unions resolved to form a plan of action to ensure that oil supplies to the racist regime were cut off. 'Without oil the entire transport system could become seriously affected - trains can't run, aircraft, tanks and military lorries would lie idle,' he said.

It meant initially, he explained, writing to oil companies, and warning them of industrial action if they continued to ferry supplies to South Africa.

The NUS recently played a key role in tracking down a shipment which was bound for the South African airforce. The cargo was traced to Southampton where dockers immediately refused to touch it.

In October the maritime unions are holding a major international conference of seafarers' and dockers' unions in London to extend the blockade on illegal arms and oil supplies to the racist regime.

'Apartheid is the one issue where there should be no division at all. We hope to generate enough impetus from this conference to encourage people to take up this fight.'

Slater insists that the TUC congress must draw the lessons from the miners' historic fight for jobs and maintain total opposition to the Tory anti-union laws.

'The miners' struggle was tremendous. It cannot be compared with anything else that's ever happened in the trade union movement. They resisted everything that a reactionary government could throw at them,' he said.

Slater believes the TUC must stand by the 600 miners who have been sacked for fighting for jobs and communities.

'The conscience of the trade union movement in general, and the General Council in particular, will never be cleared until these mass sackings are resolved and these men are back to work.'

'As long as they remain sacked then people will recognise that it will be permitted by the only protective body that they know of - the TUC.'

'There should be a clear instruction to the TUC this year that the workers of this country will not be prepared to tolerate mass sackings.'

'As things have turned out now it's been proved that the leaders of the miners' union were absolutely right.'

Slater, whose own union gave solid support to the miners by blacking coal shipments, is fiercely critical of the TUC for failing to back the NUM.

Support

'The TUC had a certain task before them and that was to carry out Congress policy. Apart from a couple of dissensions, mainly from the engineering and power unions, there was overwhelming support at congress for the miners' struggle.'

'To plan co-ordinated action would certainly have brought a very rapid end to the dispute. Instead of that it appeared that the General Council, as custodians of Congress policy, failed to carry out this task.'

Slater believes that 'automaticity' - the system used by the right-wing to consolidate positions on the General Council - was a fundamental reason for the failings of the TUC.

'There are people who

JIM SLATER... TUC must stand by miners sacked for fighting for jobs and communities get automatically onto the General Council who then cock a snook at Congress policy and do their own thing.

'That was sadly demonstrated by those unions, who not only did not give their support, but actually attacked the miners' strike.'

'The whole credibility and the standing of the TUC has a big question mark against it as to what we can expect from the General Council in respect to any future policies laid down by Congress.'

'Anything other than clear, total opposition to the anti-union laws would mean acquiescing to the opponents of trade unionism in general,' Slater stressed.

'We were well-warned by Mrs Thatcher, on both occasions when she was elected, that she wanted the end of trade unionism as we know it - and the type of trade unionism that you see in places like South Korea and Chile.'

The seamen's union itself came under severe judicial attack in a bid to halt its support for the NUM during the miners' strike.

The NUS contested the matter in the courts and agreed to hold a ballot of its members, with the captains of each ship acting as scrutineers.

The ballot was conducted during a weekend and the judge then promptly ruled that he would not be taking any notice of the result!

'That showed what a sham the whole question of balloting is. It appeared to me and the seamen who took part that the only ballot that the government and the judiciary, which they had appointed, would accept would be one that favoured them.'

A truly memorable tribute to Sir Michael Redgrave

BY KATHY HILTON

THE PACKED audience at the Old Vic Theatre in London on Sunday night was itself part of a powerful and moving tribute to the actor Sir Michael Redgrave.

The star-studded cast of artists from the widest spectrum of stage and screen, and from at least three generations, combined their skill and talents to provide a truly memorable and remarkable occasion.

Uniting them was a total respect for the late actor's work and the major contribution he made to 50 years of theatre.

Among the artists were, from his own generation, Peggy Ashcroft, Wendy Hiller, Constance Cummings, John Gielgud and Michael Redgrave's wife, Rachel Kempson.

From the generation of his son and daughter, Corin and Vanessa, were Ian McKellen, Jonathan Pryce, Frances de la Tour, Ian Charleson and Julie Walters.

His grand-daughters Natasha Richardson and Jemma Redgrave represented the emerging generation of young actors and actresses.

The evening began though, not with theatre, but with film of Sir Michael reciting one of the Shakespeare sonnets he loved best, 'Shall I

ELISABETH WELCH

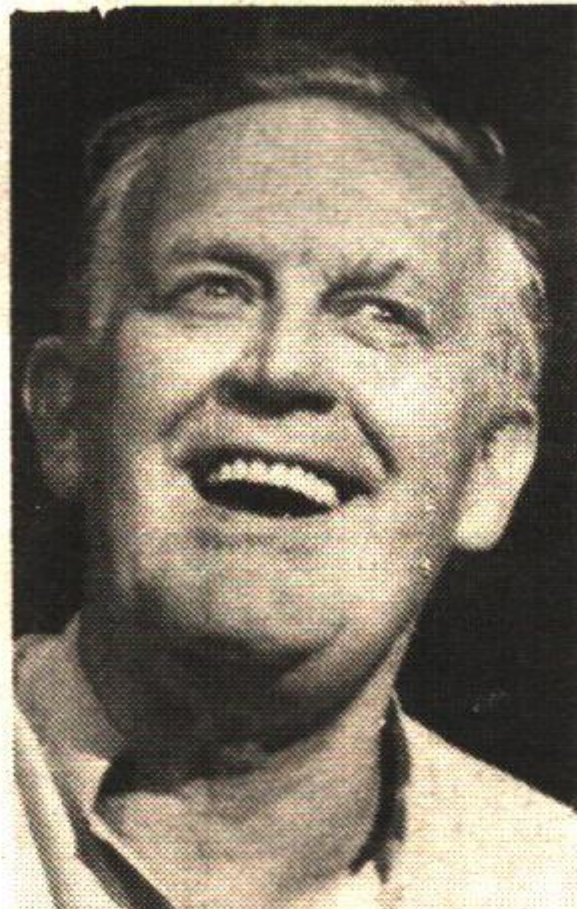

Compare Thee to a Summer's Day?" and appearing together with his family at the Liverpool Playhouse in 1982.

In his opening remarks Corin Redgrave outlined some of the major influences on his father's life and work: the French director, Michel St Denis, Stanislavsky and the work of the Moscow Arts Theatre, and the Group Theatre in America.

Influences

All these had a showing in Sunday's tribute, but there were even earlier influences, his mother and father, Daisy (Margaret) Scudamore and Roy Redgrave.

Kika Markham played Daisy Scudamore as she related an amusing account of life in the early days of the theatre while Corin Redgrave was the rakish Roy Redgrave, who left England and Daisy to make his fortune on the Australian stage in the early part of this century.

A rousing duet from 'The Pirates of Penzance' from Marion Studholme and Andrew Downie followed by an hilarious 'clip' by Ian Charleson and Julie Walters from their soon-to-be-released comedy film 'Car Trouble', gives an indication of the range of Sunday's performances.

Rachel Kempson brought to life Thomas Hardy's poem and truly became 'The Ruined Maid' a sharp contrast to American actress Constance Cummings tragic scene from Eugene O'Neill's 'Long Day's Journey into Night'.

Ian McKellen said he found Soviet actor Ramaz Tchikvadze's powerful Richard III, spoken in Georgian, a hard act to follow, but follow it he did.

His drunken Richard could't remember on which leg to limp and to assist his Henry V 'After the Battle of Agincourt' scene he brought half the audience onto the stage.

His messenger on the battle field was none other than National Theatre director, Sir Peter Hall, making a surprise guest appearance.

Wendy Hiller joined Vanessa, Jonathan Pryce and Joseph Long in a scene from 'The Aspern Papers'. A play by Michael Redgrave from the story by Henry James, it provided Vanessa's own tribute to her father.

Travelled

David Dodimead and Philip Bowen, two actors who travelled with Michael from 1973-1978 on a world tour of 'Shakespeare's People', performed the shepherd scene from 'A Winter's Tale'.

Lutist Rod Willmott, who provided a scene setting musical preamble to the Shakespearean scenes, had also travelled with the company.

Michael's grand-daughter Natasha, and Jonathan Pryce captivated the audience with a scene from their current much-acclaimed West End production of Anton Chekhov's 'The Seagull'.

Natasha's 'Ophelia' in the Young Vic production of 'Hamlet' earlier this year was the last production Michael saw.

Another grand-daughter Jemma gave a spirited performance as a 'punk' 'Katharina' to Guy Roberts-Arnold's 'Petruccio' from 'The Taming of the Shrew'.

To complete the Shakespearean section Joss Ackland played a splendid 'Falstaff' and Frances de la Tour recited two of Michael's favourite sonnets.

RACHEL KEMPSON in rehearsal for the tribute performance

The musical tributes where as varied as the acting.

Stephen Pruslin and Alan Gravill gave a brilliant piano recital of Franz Schubert's 'Fantaisie in F Minor', Elisabeth Welch 'wowed' the audience with her rendition of 'My Cousin from Milwaukee' and the classic 'The Man I Love' and Maria Ewing's extraordinary voice soared through 'Le Spectre de la Rose' by Berlioz.

David Tomlinson joined other members of the cast for a rendition of 'Let's Go Fly a Kite' from his film 'Mary Poppins' while veteran American actor and director John Houseman presented a selection of three pieces from the labour opera

'The Cradle Will Rock', currently in production at the Old Vic.

A silent tribute came from Popov the clown, in London with the Moscow State Circus.

Peggy Ashcroft gave a cameo performance as Lilian Baylis, founder of the Old Vic, bringing theatre and art to the widest audience.

But the biggest applause came for Sir John Gielgud. Sir Michael said of Gielgud: 'When I played Richard II at Stratford, some reviewers found traces of Gielgud in my performance. I do not see how it could have been otherwise.' On Sunday at the Old Vic Sir Michael Redgrave was embodied in Gielgud.

His voice and presence held the audience in total silence as he ended the evening with the final words of Shakespeare's 'Prospero'.

The production was flawless and demonstrated the unseen hand of director Anthony Page, producer Thelma Holt and the stage management team led by Griffith James.

The evening was organised to pay tribute to a great actor and it was the family's wish that all the proceeds should go to the Young Socialist Training Centres which Sir Michael had helped to launch in 1981.

Sir Michael would have enjoyed the evening immensely and the cause to which it was dedicated.

IRISH RAIDERS COULD DO DOUBLE

BY OUR RACING CORRESPONDENT

GENIAL Irish trainer Matt McCormack mounts a two-horse raid on HAMILTON and may complete double with two-year-olds Withstyle and St Croins Castle.

Withstyle (2.15) made his racecourse debut in the Granville Stakes at Ascot and finished fourth to Plaid. He appeared a bit outclassed on that occasion, and will certainly be more at home in the Halleath Stakes.

His only serious rival seems to be Ambronisi, who after a promising second at Yarmouth was out of her depth when fifth to Ianaos at Newmarket.

St Croins Castle (3.15) with decent form early in the season and a recent fifth at Newbury after a long lay-off, should be in peak condition for the Neisland Nursery

Mark Birch gets close to his minimum weight to partner Lochfast in the Drumclog Selling Stakes and the tip should be taken. Although this Lochnager filly is only a plater, her rivals are not very good, and the one she has to beat is Wappy Springs.

Henry Cecil does not often send his runners as far north as Hamilton, so it is significant that Baroncourt (4.15) runs in the Whistleberry Stakes. This strongly-made individual, who does not have much to beat, is a confident choice.

Distance

No-U-Turn (4.30) who won over course and distance last month, can make a winning re-appearance at FONTWELL in the Friary Meux Handicap Hurdle.

Stan Mellor's versatile seven-year-old was ridden out to beat Chronicle Lady by two lengths and the opposition on the Sussex track this time looks tougher.

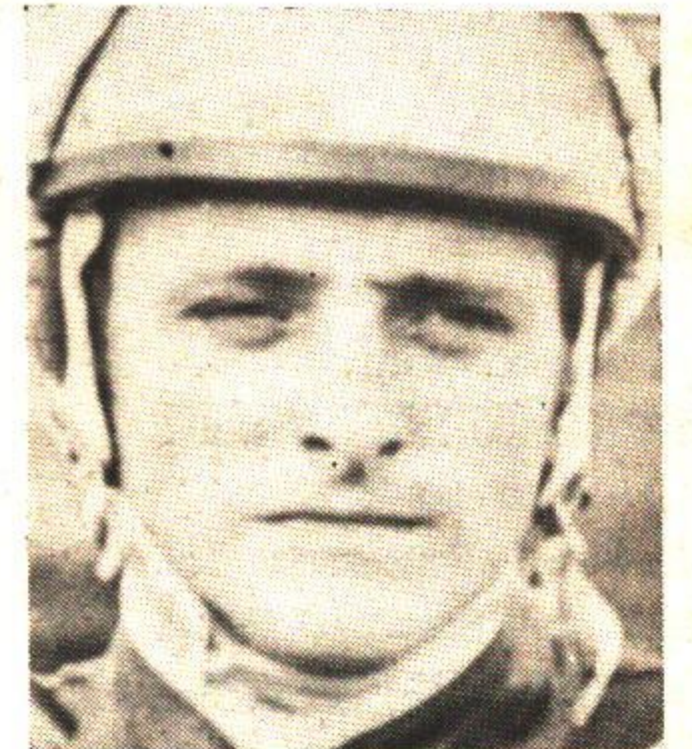

Jack Ramsey is reported to be fit, but Fulke Walwyn's charge may have trouble conceding 9lbs to No-U-Turn.

Josh Gifford has a fine record at Fontwell and Hubli (4.00) a beaten favourite at Huntingdon last time, can recoup losses in the Tangmere Novice Chase.

Performance

Newcomer Taqdir (3.30) is expected to make a winning performance in the Aldringbourne Novice Hurdle, while Bright Fellow (2.30) can notch a hat-trick for the season in the Ford Novice Hurdle.

PAT EDDERY is on Baroncourt in the 4.15 at Hamilton

SQUADS NAMED FOR WORLD FINGERS CROSSED FOR KENNY

JOCK STEIN had no surprises to spring yesterday when he announced a predictable 21-strong Scottish squad for next Tuesday's vital World Cup clash against Wales in Cardiff.

And the Scots manager is keeping his fingers crossed that Kenny Dalglish will be available to inflict further damage on the Welsh at Ninian Park.

The Liverpool player-manager, now 34, scored the goal against Wales eight years ago which took Scotland to the final in Argentina and Stein admitted yesterday: 'Kenny's experience could be vital to us — but he has to be fully fit.'

Dalglish is awaiting removal of four stitches in a knee gash which has forced him to miss Liverpool's last two games, but Stein said: 'The way Dalglish spoke this morning, I would be surprised if he isn't there next week.'

'He expects to get the stitches out tomorrow or Wednesday, but obviously I would like him to get a game in before we go to Cardiff. There is not much time between now and next Tuesday.'

The Scots boss acknowledged there was 'nothing strange' about the composition of his squad.

Clearly he feels this is not the sort of game to bring in any newcomers with a place in the World Cup finals at stake.

Dalglish, who missed the matches with England and Iceland at the end of last season, returns along with his Anfield colleagues, Alan Hansen and Steve Nicol, but there is no place for another Liverpool stalwart, John Wark.

Captain Graeme Sou-

SCOTLAND

SCOTLAND SQUAD: Leighton (Aberdeen), Rough (Hibernian), Nicol (Liverpool), Gough (Dundee Utd), Albiston (Man United), Malpas (Dundee Utd), McLeish, Miller (Aberdeen), Aitken (Celtic), Hansen (Liverpool), Strachan (Man Utd), McStay (Celtic), Bett (Aberdeen), MacLeod (Celtic), Dalglish (Liverpool), Sharp (Everton), Gray (Aston Villa), Archibald (Barcelona), Johnston (Celtic), Speedie (Chelsea), Cooper (Rangers).

ness, who picked up his second booking in the 1-0 win over Iceland in May, is automatically ruled out of the Cardiff clash, while Aberdeen's Neil Simpson and Paul Sturrock of Dundee United have been omitted.

However, Stein gave a resounding vote to Chelsea's David Speedie and Murdo MacLeod of Celtic, who were called in at the last minute to make their debuts against England at Hampden Park.

Stein said: 'They will both have learned a few things from their first game. Speedie is a very fiery player — handy to have about the place — and he's scoring goals.'

Stein's biggest problem is likely to be deciding on who forms his strike force. He has included no fewer than six attackers in his squad and he admitted: 'We have got to be well covered in that area.'

Meanwhile Jim Leighton, who has missed keeping goal for Aberdeen for the first few weeks of the season with a dislocated finger, is not causing Stein any further worries. He said: 'Leighton seems to be 100 per cent again and Alex Ferguson is pleased with him. I might even go and look at him on Wednesday.'

Despite the fact that Andy Gray and Graeme Sharp have not made a prolific start to the season, the two strikers who played in Iceland, have been given another chance.

Gower looks to winter tour CARIBBEAN CONFIDENCE

AFTER wiping out Australia in just a morning's play yesterday to bring home the Ashes, England now look forward to a winter tour of the West Indies.

Captain David Gower, still suppressing the elation of taking the series 3-1, joked about the Caribbean trip: 'I am sure they will be quaking in their boots at the moment.' He added seriously: 'They have not been beaten too many times at home recently, or abroad for that matter, but we will try to do something about that.'

His confidence came from the ruthless victory of an innings and 94 runs in the sixth Test at the Oval. Australian captain Allan Border said of the series 'It was a justifiable result'.

He said it was 'the result of England's batting over the last three matches — we succumbed to the pressure they put on us.'

Richard Ellison was the spearhead of that pressure yesterday when he took four wickets for 35 in his ten overs as Australia slid from their overnight 62 for four, to 129 all out.

It took England only 95 minutes to work their way through Australia's middle order and tailenders. Wicket keeper Paul Downton grabbed three catches and Ian Botham took two at second slip.

With three specialist batsmen left, England could not have expected to be triumphant before lunch, but Australia had neither the determination nor talent to block England out for long.

The erosion could have even begun earlier, as Border escaped a difficult diving catch to Downton off the day's second ball.

Downton was soon successful though when he held an edge off Greg Ritchie, who failed to add to his overnight six. Border was left isolated when, at 96, Wayne Phillips edged Botham to Downton.

After just 70 minutes, England's victory was finally assured when Border, who had made 58, contributed to a long succession of loose shots by Australia's batsmen. He edged Ellison to Botham and it was slim consolation to him that his status in the game was honoured when the crowd gave him a standing ovation.

Ellison finished his devastating morning's work by taking two wickets in his

Maradona raises hopes

ARGENTINE striker Diego Maradona returned to Italian soccer in style on Sunday night, scoring twice to revive Napoli's flagging Cup prospects.

Maradona, who missed the first three Cup games through injury, scored after only five minutes and then netted a penalty in the 35th minute to set up a 3-1 victory over Salernitana — Napoli's first Cup win after two draws and a defeat.

But they still need to beat Lecce, newly promoted to the First Division, next Wednesday and see Vicenza beaten by Pescara, to avoid crashing out of the competition. With one match to go in round-robin group two, Lecce and Vicenza have six points with Napoli and Padova on four.

Gillingham newcomer for Swiss match

UNCAPPED Gillingham striker Tony Cascarino has been included in the Republic of Ireland squad for the World Cup qualifying match against Switzerland in Berne a week tomorrow.

Cascarino, who was 23 on Sunday, qualifies to play for the Republic because he has an Irish grandmother. He also has an Italian grandfather, English parents and was born in Scotland.

He is the only newcomer to the squad named by Eoin Hand, who has dropped Tottenham winger Tony Galvin and QPR striker Michael Robinson.

O'Callaghan (Portsmouth).

Cascarino made an impressive debut on Irish soil last July in a testimonial game in Dublin. He scored one goal and made another.

'I think he deserves this recognition,' said Hand. 'He has done very well in all matches I have seen him play.'

Galvin and Robinson are replaced by Portsmouth's Kevin O'Callaghan and John Byrne of QPR. West Bromwich midfielder Tony Grealish, outstanding when the Irish beat Switzerland 3-0 in Dublin in June, was not considered because he is recovering from a dislocated shoulder.

Manchester United defender Kevin Moran has a hamstring strain and was also unavailable for selection.

Joey is manager's 'welcome problem'

JOEY JONES gave Wales manager Mike England a welcome problem for the crucial World Cup qualifier against Scotland at Ninian Park a week tonight.

Huddersfield defender Jones, three caps away from a Welsh appearance record, is recalled to 'Mission Mexico' after missing the superb 3-0 success against Spain because of suspension.

Include

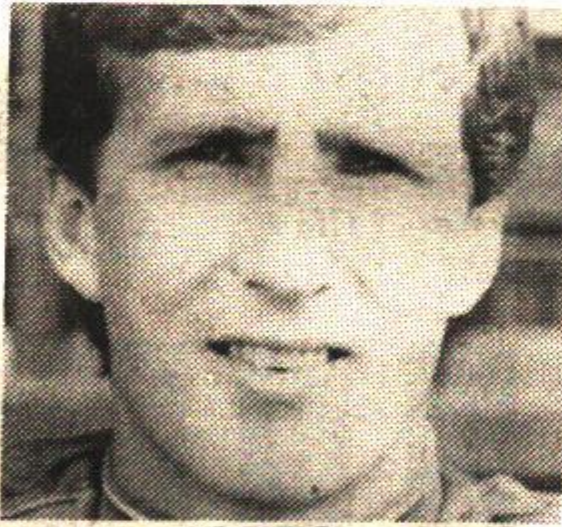

Adopted Welshman, Everton's Pat van den Hauwe, made his debut in place of Jones in that match, but England will now want to include both men in his starting line-up.

'Joey is a nice kind of problem to have,' said England, whose 16-strong squad virtually picked itself.

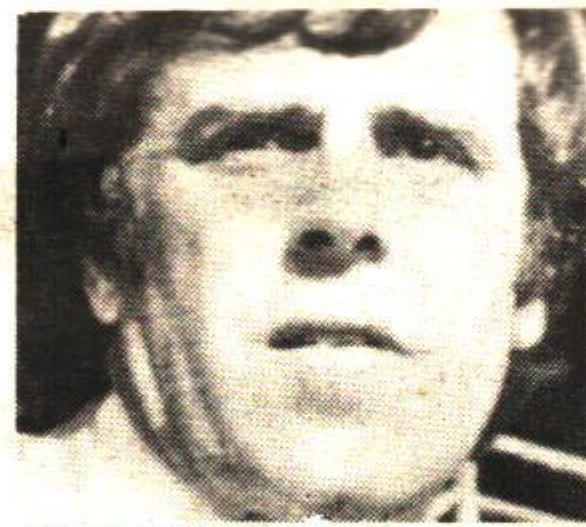

Jones excelled at centre-back in the 1-0 win at Hampden Park in March and Van den Hauwe — he also operates at full-back for his club — was equally impressive in an unfamiliar role against the Spaniards.

WALES

WALES SQUAD: Southall (Everton), Slatyer (Oxford), Ratcliffe, Van den Hauwe (Everton), Jones (Huddersfield), Jackett (Watford), James (QPR), Phillips (Man City), Thomas (Chelsea), Nicholas (Luton), Currie (Southampton), Rush (Liverpool), Hughes (Man Utd), Lovell (Millwall), Blacmore (Man Utd), Niedzwiecki (Chelsea).

JOEY JONES ... Re-called

hold the key to the team's performance.

They destroyed the Scots in Glasgow and also scored the goals which beat Spain to confirm Wales' World Cup comeback after opening defeats in Seville and against Iceland in Reykjavik.

'I'm just keeping my fingers crossed that Rush and Hughes arrive in Cardiff injury free,' said England, whose team missed out on the 1982 World Cup finals on goal difference to Czechoslovakia.

Wales have only qualified for the finals on one occasion. That was back in 1958 — after an unexpected play-off against Israel — although they still feel aggrieved about their 2-0 defeat by Scotland in 1977.

Jones and Mickey Thomas are the only survivors of that match, which hinged on a controversial penalty awarded when striker Joe Jordan appeared to handle the ball in the Welsh area.

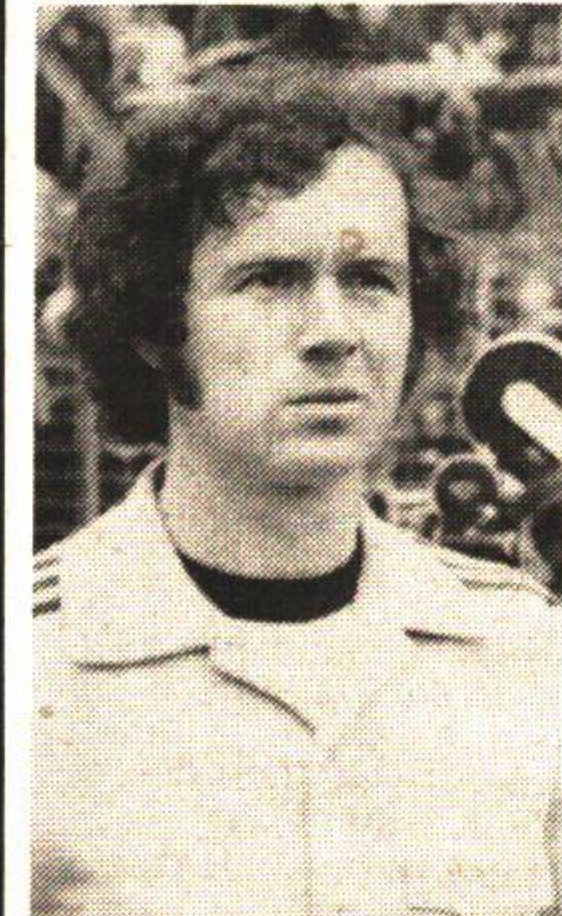

Incident

'I didn't see the incident because I was playing in America at the time,' said England. 'I believe it was a pretty blatant hand ball by Jordan.'

'There is a score to settle there. Not only that, the Scottish FA secretary has referred to us as "inferior opposition". That left a nasty taste in the mouth.'

The comment came when Scotland and England scuppered the British championship, which now deprives Wales of much-needed revenue.

Franz picks three new names

FRANZ BECKENBAUER ... still looking for win

WEST GERMAN soccer manager Franz Beckenbauer, who threatened changes after his team slumped to its third defeat in a row last week, has called three uncapped players into his squad.

Beckenbauer named utility player Wolfgang Funkel and young defenders Juergen Kohler and Dietmar Roth in a squad of 25, who will spend three days training together next week for the World Cup qualifier against Sweden in Stockholm on September 25.

But he has dropped none of the team which lost 1-0 to the Soviet Union in Moscow last Wednesday — West Germany's third successive defeat without scoring a goal. The only missing member of that team is the injured Klaus Allofs.

Funkel, 27, who plays for cup-winners Bayer Uerdingen in the back four or midfield, has been widely tipped for top honours, although he made his Bundesliga debut only last season.

Kohler, 19, of Waldhof Mannheim, and Roth, 21, of Schalke, both play in the West German under-21 side.

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP

Rain hits title bid

RAIN again undermined Gloucestershire's championship pretensions yesterday. Not a single ball was bowled at Cardiff and only 44 overs were possible on Saturday, when they toiled to 123 for four against Glamorgan.

They have not yet been able to make up the two points they lag behind leaders Hampshire, who do not have a game.

With only one day's play left, weather permitting, it seems likely that respective captains David Graveney and Rodney Ontong will have to make a deal to give the sides a chance of the 16 win points.

But that would deprive Gloucestershire of possible bowling bonus points should Glamorgan forfeit their first innings — a prolonged rain showers are forecast for Wales today.

■ PAUL PRICHARD and David East were both stranded on 69 not out against Warwickshire at Edgbaston when rain also interrupted fifth-placed Essex's hopes of making out ground.

They are on a 28-run lead at 170 for five in 51 overs.

■ RICHARD HADLEE took a career best eight for 41 to bowl out Lancashire for 126 at Trent Bridge, but Nottinghamshire's hopes of pressing home their advantage were also frustrated as rain wipes out play after lunch.

Lancashire, resuming at 81 for four in reply to Notts' modest 140, had no answer as the New Zealand all-rounder followed his three for 18 on Saturday with five for 23 in 12 overs.

Only Lancashire captain John Abrahams (35) and Mike Watkinson (35 not out) put up a fight as Hadlee inspired Notts.

He said: 'This couldn't be a better way to warm up for the NatWest final.' Notts play Essex for the honours on Saturday.

Rugby race tour demo

ANTI-APARTHEID campaigners are to go ahead with demonstrations against the Welsh rugby club Crawshays, whose team flew home yesterday from a three-week tour of South Africa.

Players and committee members issued a statement declaring that more tours should be encouraged because, they claimed, South African rugby was fully integrated.

Hanif Bhanjee, secretary of the Welsh Anti-Apartheid Movement said: 'It is amazing that they can talk about enjoying playing rugby there at the same time as the rest of the world has been seeing people dying on the streets of South Africa in the current unrest.'

Pickets will be mounted at Crawshays club fixtures in Wales this season.

TELLY SOCCER SOON

FOOTBALL could be back on our television screens by the end of next month.

The pressure from the Football League's top clubs has led to a change in the attitude of the League sub-committee set up to negotiate a deal with the BBC and ITV.

The hard-liners on that sub-committee, Robert Maxwell and Ken Bates, chairmen of Oxford United and Chelsea respectively, are now in the minority.

They wanted an increase in the fees paid by the television companies, along with a much reduced schedule of live and recorded matches.

Already many of the smaller clubs are suffering because their pay-out from the television pool — in the region of £18,000 last season — has not been received.

Brunt

But it is the bigger clubs, like Manchester United, Liverpool, Everton, Tottenham and Arsenal, who will particularly bear the brunt in the loss earnings this season.

And with the UEFA ban set to strike them hard too this season, these clubs have now mounted a major campaign with the Football League to have negotiations with the television companies re-opened as soon as possible.

'We need the television exposure to keep our sponsors and those who advertise on our ground hoardings happy,' Manchester United manager Ron Atkinson said at the weekend, echoing the line being taken by directors at most of the top clubs.

Atkinson also believes that the absence of recorded or live televised football from the small screen this season has played its part in the drop-off in attendances.

Recent

The leading clubs also cite the recent agreement signed between the Football League and Thames Television.

While the national game has been blacked from the television screens over the past month, Thames TV have been transmitting major games live to the Scandinavian countries at the weekends.

Recordings are also being sold by the southern-based television company to companies as far away as Hong Kong and Australia.

The Football League and the television companies, News Line has been told, have met in secret on two occasions in the past few weeks, and a more public meeting is expected in the next fortnight.

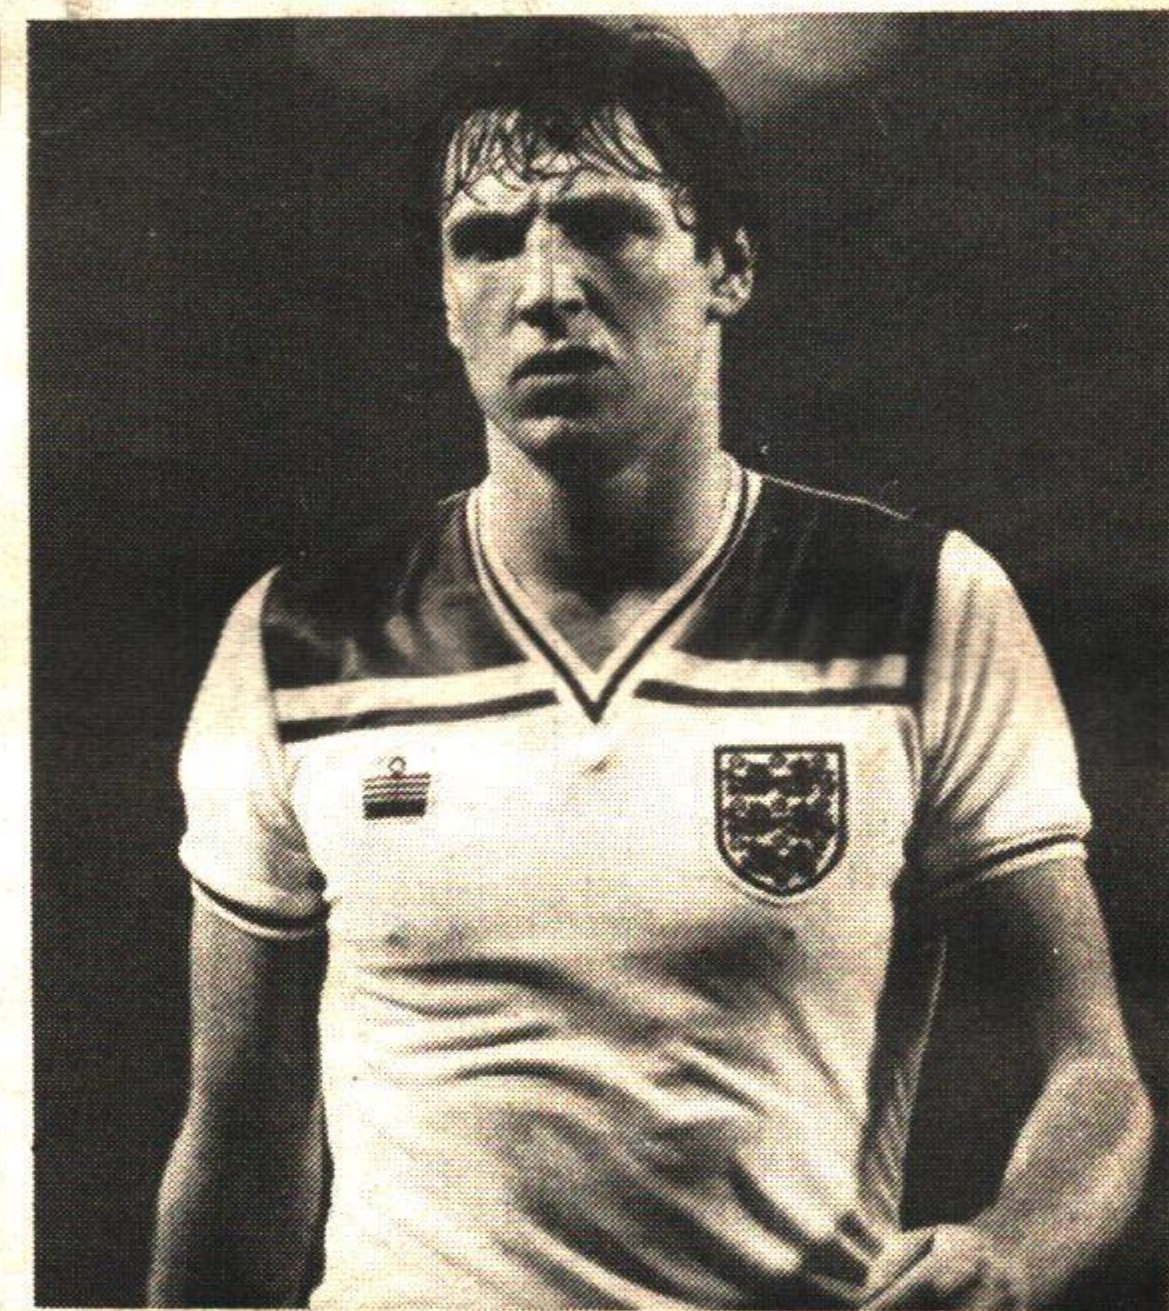

The mounting pressure by the Football League's premier club suggests that soccer will be back on the small screens very soon.

ALVIN MARTIN ... A welcome re-call for West Ham defender

ENGLAND JINX

ALVIN MARTIN and Tony Woodcock are two welcome re-calls in Bobby Robson's squad for next week's World Cup qualifier against Rumania at Wembley.

West Ham's Liverpool-born defender seems to have overcome his international injury jinx and Arsenal striker Woodcock has shown impressive form, also after coming back from injury.

They are added to the 22 who went to Mexico in the summer to test the climate and altitude.

Martin has only been named as a cover for the injured Terry Butcher, but his early season composure at Upton Park suggests he will be in the Wembley line-up.

An unhappy catalogue of injuries — a hernia operation, cracked ribs, a broken collarbone, a thigh strain and twisted ankle — has restricted Martin to only two internationals in the past two seasons.

But in the three years of Robson's managerial reign, he has only once failed to make the team when in the squad and fully fit.

'I suppose it's true I usually got a game when fit. But I seem to have have had so many interruptions for injuries I haven't had a run of England games for a few years,' said Martin.

'I would rather get in on merit rather than because Terry is injured. The good thing though is that I am back in the manager's thoughts in World Cup year.'

Injury

Woodcock, who has 39 caps, last played for England in the 1-0 victory over Northern Ireland in February, but injury and loss of form have kept him out of reckoning since then.

He is the leading scorer among the current England players with 16 goals and has already won widespread praise for scoring three spectacular goals for Arsenal this season.

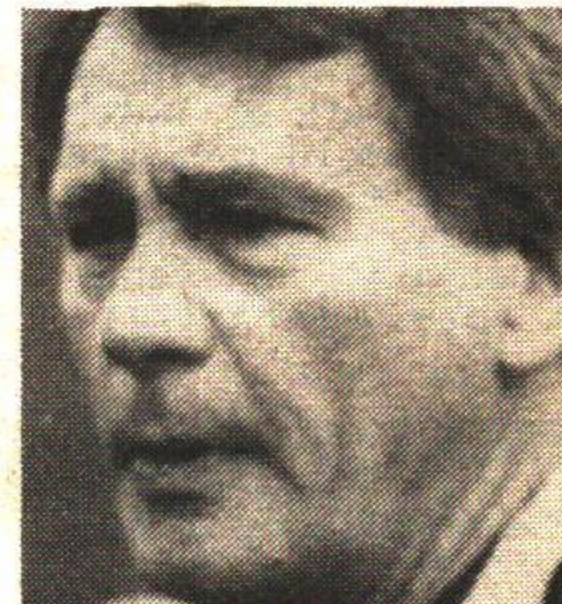

Said Robson: 'I have not seen Tony Woodcock this season. I am just going on reports from people I can trust. He appears to be in good early goal form.'

Robson said Butcher was retained 'because of who he is and what he has done for me in the past', though there are doubts about his fitness.

competitive match this season. Three weeks ago he underwent a cartilage operation and he tests his right knee in a reserve game tomorrow night.

Knee

'I feel fine in myself and there have been no setbacks with the knee. Hopefully I can get the match practice I need on Wednesday and then in the first team on Saturday,' said Butcher.

The only surprise in the squad is the retention of a third goalkeeper Chris Woods. 'We will take three keepers if we get to the finals and it is important not to upset morale by leaving one out at this stage,' said Robson.

The manager is in the dark about his Italian-based trio — Ray Wilkins, Mark Hateley and Trevor Francis — but retains all three.

'Their League programme has not yet started, but they are playing competitive football in their domestic cup competition.'

Francis and Hateley formed England's attacking spearhead against Italy and Mexico on the first half of the tour, but Gary Line-er and Kerry Dixon both did well when they took over.

The return of Woodcock gives Robson even more alternatives in attack and his main problem will be to decide whether to go for experience or youth.

Assure

Victory at Wembley would virtually assure England of a place in next summer's World Cup finals, although they still have home games against Turkey and Northern Ireland to fall back on should they slip up.
