Street fights flare again

THERE were fresh clashes between police and youth in Brixton yesterday evening.

As dusk fell, groups of riot police chased black and white teenagers up and down main streets.

With tension rising in the south London borough, a major confrontation seemed possible for the second night running.

By early evening a couple of cars had been set alight in the area outside the dole office.

Police vans were stoned but firemen were able to put out the blaze.

Black activists had been holding a meeting in Railton Road, centre of the 1981 riots. Some were advocating a showdown with the police in retaliation for the shooting of mother-of-six Cherry Groce on Saturday.

Lambeth awoke yesterday morning to find many parts of the borough littered with debris. But while the majority of wrecked and burnt-out buildings were in and around the high street, there were damaged

CLASHES between youth and police in Brixton are the response of the community to the repression by a state which offers them nothing, Lambeth Council leader Ted Knight said yesterday.

Knight and the Labour administration in the deprived inner-city area put the responsibility for the disturbances squarely on the backs of the Thatcher government and the police.

Brixton's police committee chairman Gordon Ley said: 'We told the police that unrest was reaching boiling point — but obviously no one heeded our warning.'

The street clashes erupted on Saturday following the police shooting of a 38-year-old black mother of six, Mrs Cherry Groce.

She is now in a stable condition in St Thomas's Hospital but is expected to be paralysed for life.

'The shooting of Mrs Groce was the final straw for a lot of people,' Knight said. It produced a strong anti-police reaction from young blacks and whites.

In a statement issued on behalf of the administration, Knight said that the disturbances in Brixton had come as no surprise to the councillors, as they had been 'continuously warning the government of this potentially explosive situation'.

He added: 'By contemptuously breaking into a law-abiding black woman's home in Brixton and shooting her, is it surprising that local people in and around Brixton have shown their outrage and revulsion against the state oppression and continued police brutality against black people by taking to the streets?'

'The value of property damage is nothing compared to the injuries sustained by Mrs Groce and the constant contempt with which the black community has to live.'

Knight said that the situation had worsened dramatically following the clashes in Handsworth in Birmingham earlier this month.

'Since then the black community has been under constant attack by the police and all the instruments of state led by the Prime Minister and Home Secretary.

'The British newspapers, TV and radio have aggravated the position by portraying the entire black community as criminals.'

'Margaret Thatcher has branded black people. Enoch Powell has repeated his call for repatriation of black people born here; former Tory Minister Nicholas Fairbairn has labelled Afro-Caribbeans as "lazy" and said they should be sent home.'

Knight said that it was not a law and order issue but a 'social and economic crisis'. The answer was not to give the police 'more power to enforce state racism with even more heavy-handed and repressive measures'.

He added: 'The people in Brixton, both black and white, who took to the streets are saying very loudly: "Enough is enough".'

'They are not going to take any more harassment, they will fight for their rights.'

The Lambeth leader also pointed out that the youth who revolted — about 25 per cent of whom were white — were mostly unemployed and had little prospect under Thatcherism.

Ratecapping and cuts in grant had undermined many local schemes.

Knight, together with 31 other councillors, is under the shadow of disqualification and surcharge for defying government cuts policies.

'The government is responsible for this disastrous situation and they are the guilty party.'

£100,000 Emergency Fund

PLEASE make a special effort to bring in hundreds of donations, large and small, to help us to a speedy completion of our £100,000 Emergency Fund.

The events in Brixton this weekend demonstrate the urgency with which we have to proceed.

The cold-blooded shooting of Cherry Groce has been termed by the state as an 'accident' while those whose anger boiled as a result are being termed 'criminals'.

The real criminals are this Tory regime which will stop at nothing to impose the conditions of the slump — poverty, mass unemployment and the destruction of basic democratic rights — on the working class.

Yesterday's powerful demonstration in Bournemouth led by the Workers Revolutionary Party and Young Socialists was the sharpest reminder of the nature of the struggle.

The marchers and the dozens of trade unionists and jailed and sacked miners who took part made it clear that the release of the jailed miners poses the organisation of the General Strike and the taking of power by the working class.

Kinnock has made it clear that no Labour government will release the miners. Yesterday conference organisers decided to simply push an emergency motion dealing with Lambeth off the agenda.

The building of revolutionary leadership is the burning question facing the whole working class and the millions of jobless young people in areas like Brixton, who have no future under capitalism.

We are urging you to make an extra-special effort to bring us closer to our fund target. Please ask every WRP member,

News Line reader and supporter, and Young Socialists member to contribute. Every penny and pound counts and our time is running out.

Yesterday we received £103 from the following branches:

Glasgow East End £4, Crewe £5, Runcorn £2, Edinburgh £50, Cardiff £30, Finsbury £2, Peckham £10.

The grand total is now: £77,169.57.

Please respond urgently to our appeal. Send off your donations today to: WRP Emergency Fund, 21B Old Town, Clapham, London SW4 0JT.

Court order on print union

EDINBURGH — A court order has prohibited a print union from giving official backing to a strike by clerical workers on two Scottish newspapers.

Lord Gowrie, in the Court of Session, granted the order on Friday on the petition of Scotsman Publications Ltd.

John Cameron, QC, for the company, said the strike by SOGAT 82 union members in the advertising, accounts and editorial departments had not been proceeded by a ballot, and was therefore in breach of contract.

An interim interdict was granted by the judge, prohibiting the union from inducing employees by 'instruction, encouragement, financial support or otherwise,' or otherwise interfering with the performance of contracts of employment.

The company, which publishes 'The Scotsman' and 'Evening News', said in its petition to the court that the SOGAT 82 clerical chapel had rejected a pay offer and struck work on Thursday.

Both newspapers were being printed and distributed as normal, the court was told. Terms of the Trade Union Act 1984 were read to the court.

Police alert

FRANKFURT — Police were alerted for new unrest yesterday after angry West German militants called for demonstrations over the death of a man who was run over by a water cannon truck in clashes with police on Saturday night.

The death of Guenther Sare, 36, resulted from police violence when about 500 anti-fascist demonstrators gathered outside a hall where neo-Nazi National Democratic Party members were meeting.

Seven of the demonstrators were arrested and 22 policemen were injured, struck by stones and other missiles, according to the authorities.

Jarvis condemns Thatcher

TEACHERS' leader Fred Jarvis yesterday attacked Tory Prime Minister Thatcher for inviting a group of right-wing 'moaning minnies' in education to visit Downing Street this week, but refusing to see the employers in the teachers' pay dispute.

Race-row headmaster, Ray Honeyford, is believed to be one of the 30 educationalists summoned to Downing Street next week for talks on the future of Britain's schools and colleges.

Meeting

Thatcher will chair Wednesday's meeting, flanked by Education Secretary Sir Keith Joseph, Employment Secretary Lord Young and Trade and Industry Secretary Leon Brittan.

The reason for the 'private' gathering is claimed to be to make the education system 'more relevant to the jobs market'.

Jarvis said yesterday: 'The country can now see just how little the Prime Minister cares about the education of the nation's children.'

'She refuses to meet the employers to discuss how the government can resolve the biggest and most bitter dispute in the history of public education, but she can find time to invade the moaning minnies of the right-wing education lobby to a seminar.'

Groups

Jarvis said he also had to marvel at the Prime Minister's insensitivity in inviting Honeyford, and how this would be received by the ethnic minority groups in the country.

● THE NATIONAL Union of Students will warn the government today that many middle-income parents who voted Tory in the last election are being forced to take out bank loans because they can ill afford to send their children to university.

This is just one point made in the NUS grants submission being presented today.

properties in many different parts of the borough.

This was as a result of the police's policy on Saturday night of dispersing the youth into the residential areas from the centre.

Police said 55 cars had been burnt out and 155 people arrested. There were 53 injuries, including ten police officers.

Throughout Sunday workmen boarded up shattered shop front windows but fire alarms set off during Saturday's clashes continued to ring.

Underneath a carnival-like atmosphere, there was deepfelt tension.

Police and youth eyed each other nervously before the riot police made their reappearance at around 6p.m.

Few felt in the mood to discuss the conflict.

● John Dommelle, West Yorkshire Assistant Chief Constable, who is in charge of investigating the shooting of Mrs Cherry Groce, was refused admission to her home yesterday.

A member of the family refused to let Dommelle and four Brixton plainclothes officers into the house until a lawyer was present.

● Michael Groce, 19, went to Kennington Road police station yesterday accompanied by solicitor Paul Boateng, chairman of the GLC police committee.

He was later interviewed by Hertfordshire and Scotland Yard officers.

● Home Secretary Douglas Hurd declined to visit the riot-scarred south London suburb yesterday.

Following the bottles and bricks which greeted his tour of Handsworth three weeks ago, the Home Office said Hurd would delay his visit until today or tomorrow.

NEC defy Kinnock on rate-cap fight

LABOUR'S National Executive Committee yesterday defied Neil Kinnock by backing a resolution supporting Labour local authorities and trade unionists in 'non-compliance with unjust laws' on rate-capping.

The executive voted 15-13 to back the resolution submitted by Sheffield Heeley to be debated at Bournemouth on Wednesday.

During the heated meeting, Kinnock once again said that Tory laws, however repugnant, must be obeyed.

The NEC rejected a call from Eric Heffer, MP, to meet Liverpool's Labour councillors during this week's Labour Party conference.

Deputy leader Roy Hattersley told Heffer that to do so would result in 'a noisy demonstration of the type you are making now'.

Heffer retorted: 'I am no hooligan.'

But the executive made clear it was prepared to meet the delegation on some other occasion.

Liverpool NUT is to take out an injunction in the High Court today against the Liverpool council's decision to issue three-month redundancy notices to its members.

The white collar union NALGO has instructed its members not to process the sack notices.

Ian Lowes, chairman of the joint shop stewards' committee, said national union opposition to the redundancy plan was 'unfortunate'.

He said the national leaders 'don't seem to understand that the issuing of these notices is merely a tactic to enable our members to receive wages

Lambeth motion rejected

THE crisis in Brixton was the focus of a stormy opening to the Labour Party conference last night when Labour Party conference organisers turned down an emergency motion on the rate-capped borough.

Sharon Atkin, one of the Lambeth council's surcharged members, declared to the conference: 'As Brixton burns, you are saying Lambeth should not be discussed.'

She was making a passionate plea for a special resolution to give unequal support to councillors refusing to comply with Tory rate-capping legislation, and to give maximum financial support in the council's fight against the disqualification and surcharges imposed by the district auditor.

The motion has been opposed by Labour leaders because it demands retrospective legislation to remove all bankruptcies and disqualification imposed by Tory law.

Labour leader Kinnock has opposed this motion alongside that of the NUM demand for reimbursment of funds seized by the Tory state during and since the miners' strike.

Lorna Boreland, Norwood CLP, told the conference she was horrified that the conference was not to discuss the surcharge already imposed on the Lambeth councillors alongside those in Liverpool.

Lambeth council deputy leader Graham Norwood later accused the Labour Party leadership of deserting the borough council.

WE STILL have not reached our £8,000 target. So far there is £4,062.18 in leaving a large amount still to raise. Please don't delay, collect in every amount you possibly can and rush it in.

Riots in Brixton over the weekend show the explosive political nature of this period. Workers and youth are ready to do battle against state attacks. An armed police force is allowed to roam into residential areas with no curbs or control.

The News Line speaks out loud and clear on these issues. We say this Bonapartist government will use the state more and more against the working class. The only way forward is to mobilise the strength of millions of workers in the struggle for power.

Release Jailed Miners

OVER 500 youth and workers demanded the release of all jailed miners in a powerful demonstration through Bournemouth on the first day of the Labour Party conference yesterday.

Recently-released jailed miners and several sacked miners were on the march, which carried red flags and the banners of the Workers Revolutionary Party and Young Socialists through the town. The slogan: 'Release jailed miners! Organise the General Strike!' rang through the centre of the south coast resort.

The national banner of the ACTT film technicians' union was carried on the march as were those of Islington COHSE health workers; NUR Marylebone railmen; London Bridge, the London-wide council shop stewards' organisation; the Lambeth Workers' Joint Shop Stewards; Manchester EETPU electricians; Bloomsbury NALGO; T&GWU transport union Leicestershire and Reading trades council.

Workers Revolutionary Party banners from as far afield as Scotland, Exeter, Barnsley and Cardiff were also carried through the town.

Struggle against the state

AT A PUBLIC meeting after the march Simon Pirani, from the Workers Revolutionary Party Central Committee welcomed two Hem Heath miners who had just been released from jail and families and friends of miners still in prison.

The jailed miners were not criminals, he said. They were political prisoners. They were the same as the young men incarcerated in northern Ireland and in South Africa.

Pirani said that the Workers Revolutionary Party had been in the forefront of the struggle to release all working-class political prisoners, an issue tied to the struggle for power.

A Labour government led by Kinnock would not release the jailed miners. 'This movement has to confront the struggle to bring down the Tory government and the struggle for power,' said Pirani.

Geoff Hartnell, a member of the Workers Revolutionary Party and Durham Mechanics, who had been sacked for his role in the miners' strike told the meeting: 'As a result of the strike 60 miners are in jail and 600 sacked.'

'We felt the full force of the state — judges, police, road-blocks — and they sequestered the NUM's funds.'

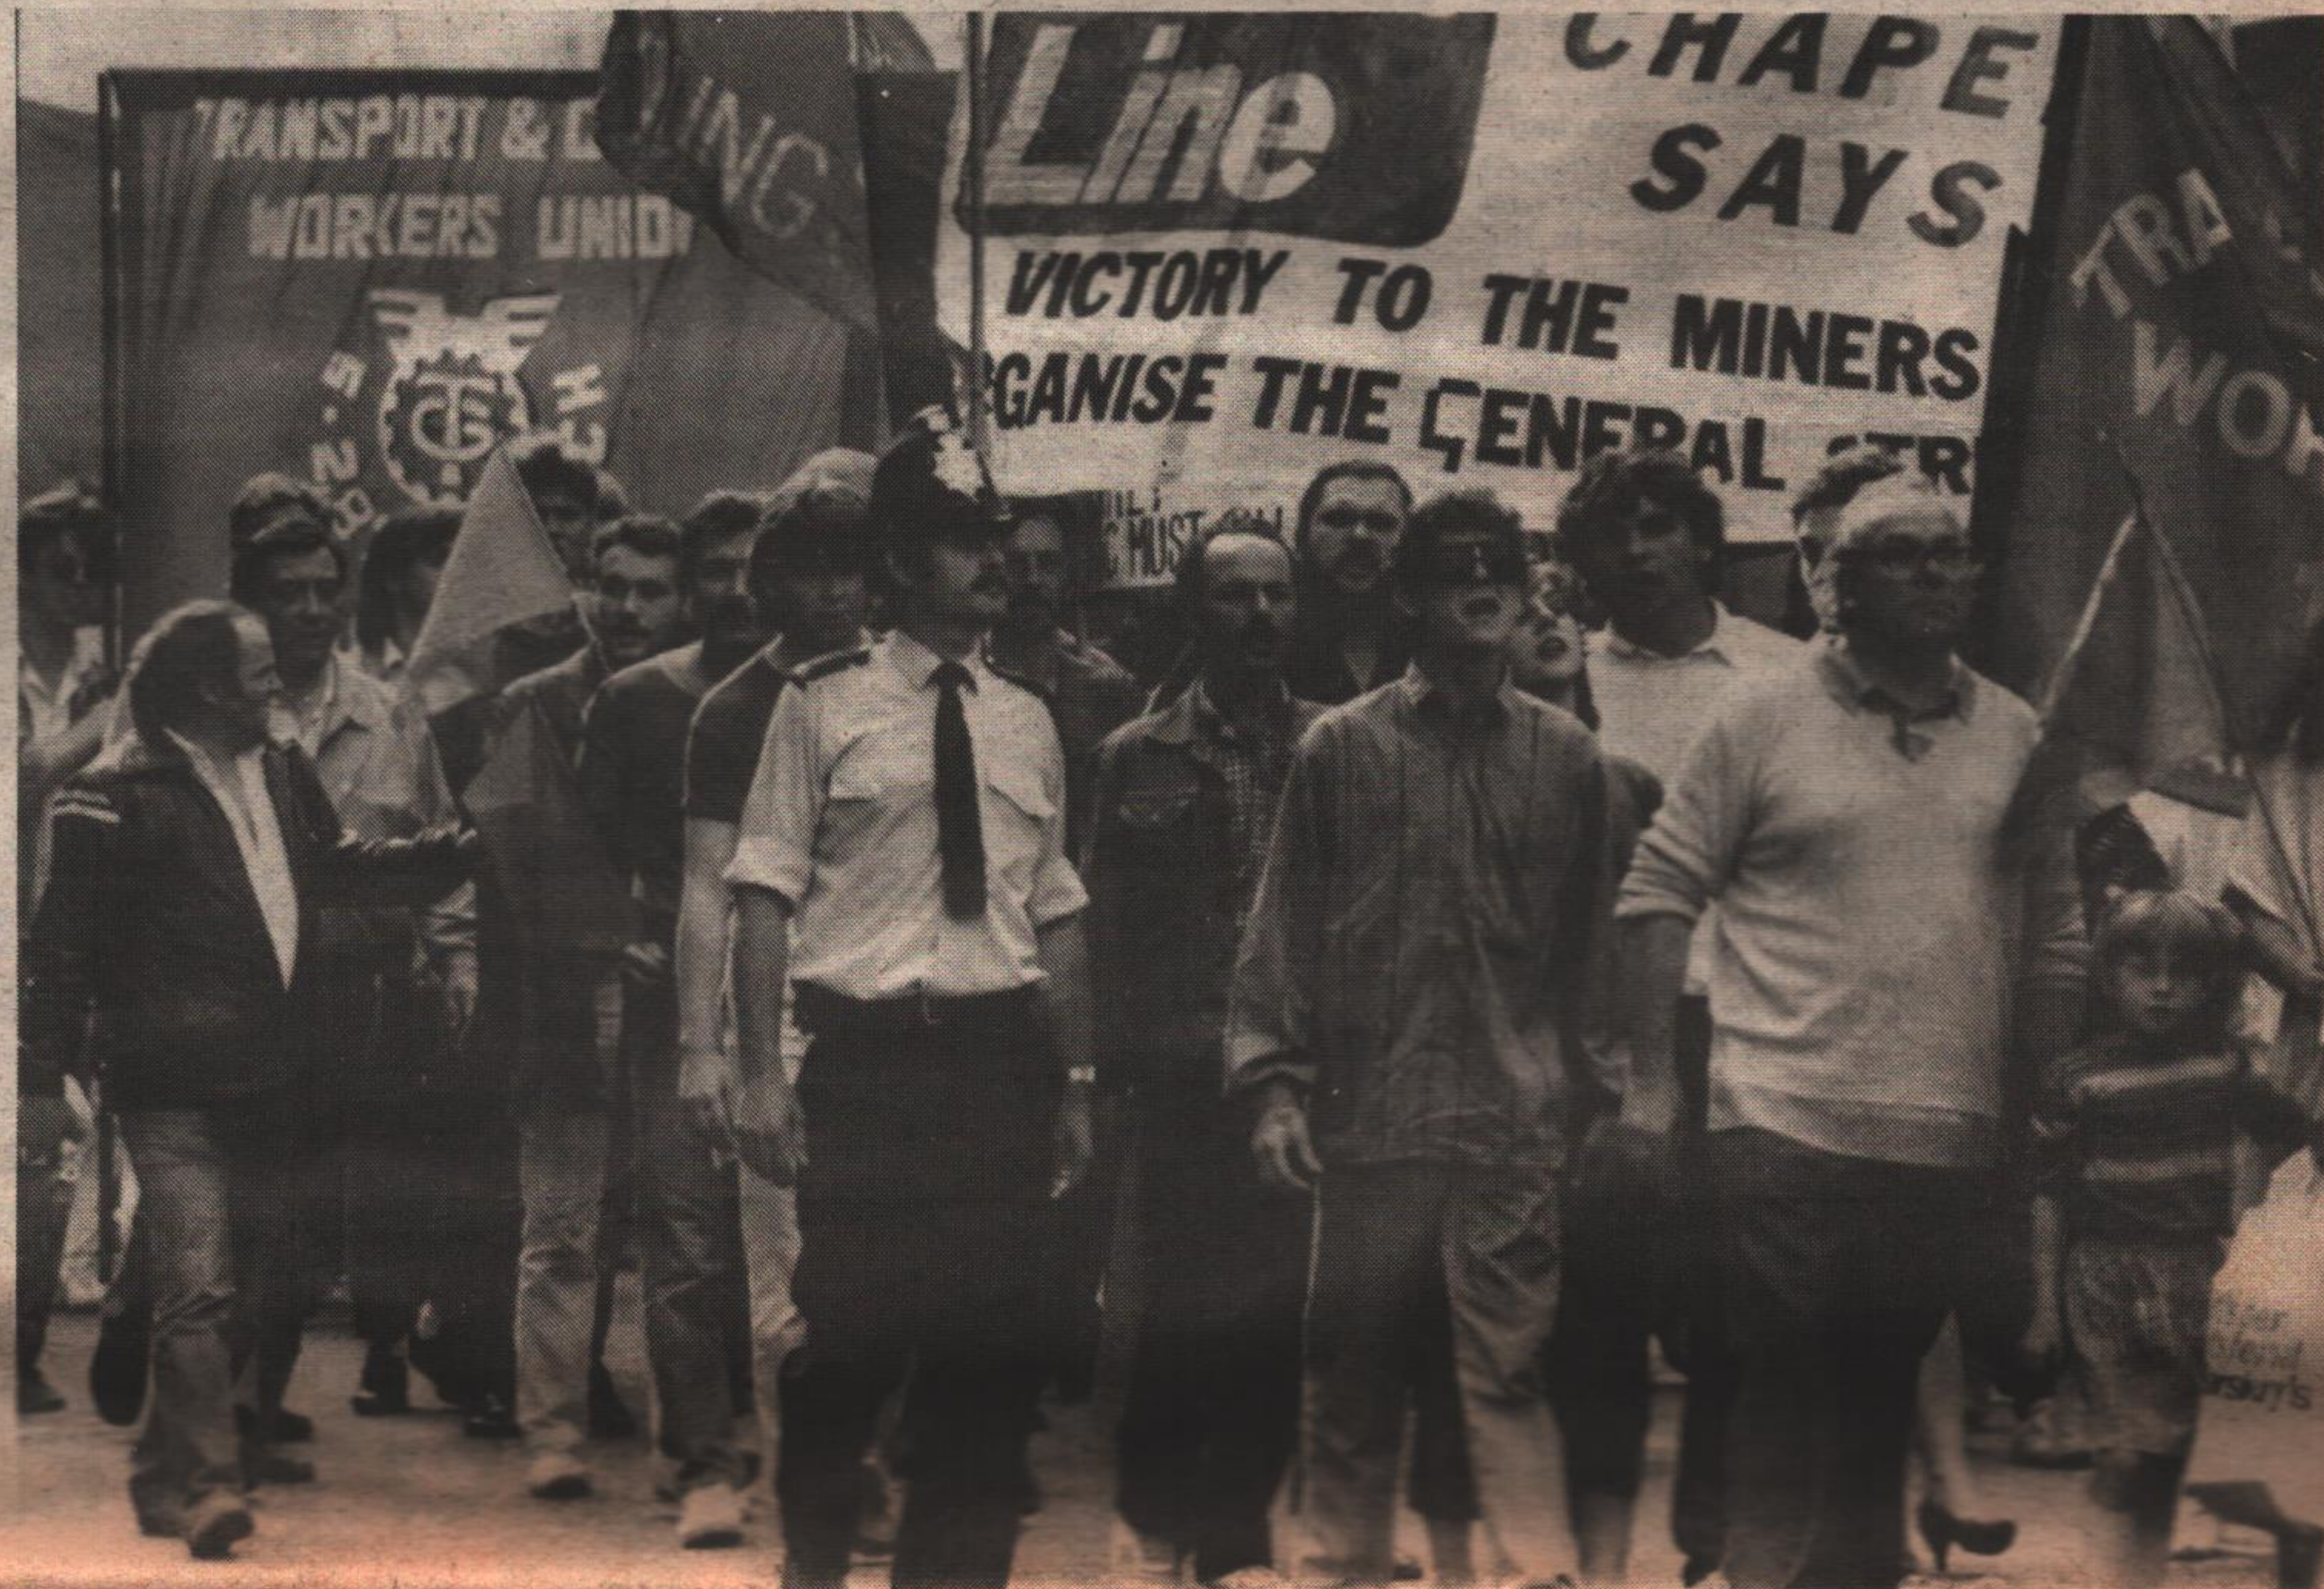

BY A NEWS LINE REPORTER

'As a result of our struggle prisoners were taken.'

'Although we were very pleased to get the resolution passed at the TUC calling for a Labour government to release the jailed miners and reinstate the sacked men, Kinnock has said that a Labour government will not release the miners.'

'This means that if there were to be another Labour government the men will remain in jail. The working class has got no choice but to take the power.'

Julie Hyland, Young Socialists national secretary said young people in Handsworth and Brixton have demonstrated that they will not stand by with mass unemployment and enormous depriv-

Marchers demanding the release of the jailed miners in Bournemouth yesterday tion backed up by police harassment.

She said: 'The same state which shot the five-year-old boy and a young mother in Brixton is the same state that jailed the miners and killed two miners during the strike.'

'Any leader who makes deals with Thatcher maintains that state.'

Malcolm Greenhow, secretary of the GMBATU boilermakers' shop stewards committee at British Shipbuilders' Hebburn yard on the Tyneside said:

'We on the Tyneside are fighting for the retention of the shipyards and to save the communities of Hebburn and Jarrow.'

'The Labour Party and the delegates here in the conference hall in Bournemouth should ask themselves, who do they represent?'

'In another term of Thatcher not only will the trade unions be obliterated, but every part of the welfare state as well.'

Bill Bowring, Lambeth councillor, said to loud applause: 'We have no plans to issue redundancy notices to the workforce in Lambeth.'

Struggle

'And contrary to what it says in the "Militant" newspaper, we are not about to take lessons from what has been done in Liverpool, though we are with them in a common struggle against the Tories.'

Bowring is one of the 32 councillors who resisted the threat of the district auditor and two weeks ago were presented with a certificate of surcharge.

They now face large fines as individuals, possible bankruptcy and being banned from office for five years.

Liz French, the wife of Kent miner Terry French, serving four years also addressed the meeting, as did Corin Redgrave of the Workers Revolutionary Party Central Committee.

More pressure to drop resolution

THE LABOUR leadership yesterday decided to make further attempts to pressure the National Union of Mineworkers into withdrawing its resolution from Wednesday's debate.

Labour leader Kinnock is utterly opposed to the miners' call for the reimbursement of funds confiscated by the Tory courts and the sequestrator.

But miners' president Arthur Scargill said: 'The NUM composite motion will stand. The NUM national executive and its delegation will be calling for maximum support of all sections of the Labour Party.'

The three-point NUM resolution also wants a future Labour government to review the cases of jailed miners and the reinstatement of miners sacked during the year-long strike.

One suggestion being discussed on the fringes of the conference was that Kinnock and deputy leader Roy Hattersley may meet Scargill in a final bid to get the NUM resolution taken off the agenda.

The media has been focussing on a 'High Noon' between Kinnock and Scargill, and the Labour leader is worried about the humiliation suffered by TUC general secretary Norman Willis at Blackpool a month ago.

In a cynical move to avoid a showdown on Wednesday, the NEC has decided to recommend a statement on industrial relations during tomorrow's session.

Miners' leaders phones tapped

MINERS' leaders had their phones illegally tapped during last year's strike, Phil Holt of the telephone engineers' NCU told the Labour Party conference yesterday.

There was substantial evidence that Labour Party leaders in Liverpool were now subject to the same surveillance, he said.

Speaking to a successful motion demanding a Freedom of Information Act, Holt said his members were intimidated by official secrets law from testifying to well-documented cases of unauthorised and illegal phone-tapping.

He warned that new technology and computerised telephone networks allowed phone-tapping on a more extensive scale and without his members knowing which lines were connected to the state intelligence agencies.

Dave Barton, Newark

CLP, said his constituency party had discovered police secretly photographing a tenants' lobby from a council building.

Peter Smith, Uxbridge CLP, told the conference: 'If Watergate had occurred in Britain, no-one would have heard a thing about it.'

He denounced the secret deal between the British government and the United States permitting the requisition of transport and drivers by the US army in case of emergency.

News Line reporters attacked

RIOT police refused News Line reporter Simon Vevers access to an ambulance after he was beaten up and knocked out in Brixton on Saturday evening.

The ambulance was only for people who had been knocked out by bricks, he was told — and he shouldn't be in the area anyway.

Vevers was walking down Acre Lane towards the scene of the clashes but out of the immediate area when he was attacked. It was about 8.30p.m.

'Everything appeared to be very quiet,' he said from hospital yesterday. 'Suddenly from across the road a group of eight or ten youth who had obviously just clashed with the police came towards me.'

'I heard them say "money" and before I could answer I was knocked over and kicked several times in the face and back, mainly around the head and face.'

'I must have lost consciousness.'

'Then one of them said "that's enough" and at that moment three other young people, two white and one black, came up and helped me down the road towards where an ambulance was parked.

'But we were stopped by a line of riot police who said I couldn't go in the ambulance because that was only for people who had been knocked out by bricks and that I would have to find my own way to hospital.'

Doctors

'Two of the people with me then took me to the home of their parents, who were doctors.'

The doctors then took Vevers to hospital, where he was found to have a broken nose and was kept in for observation.

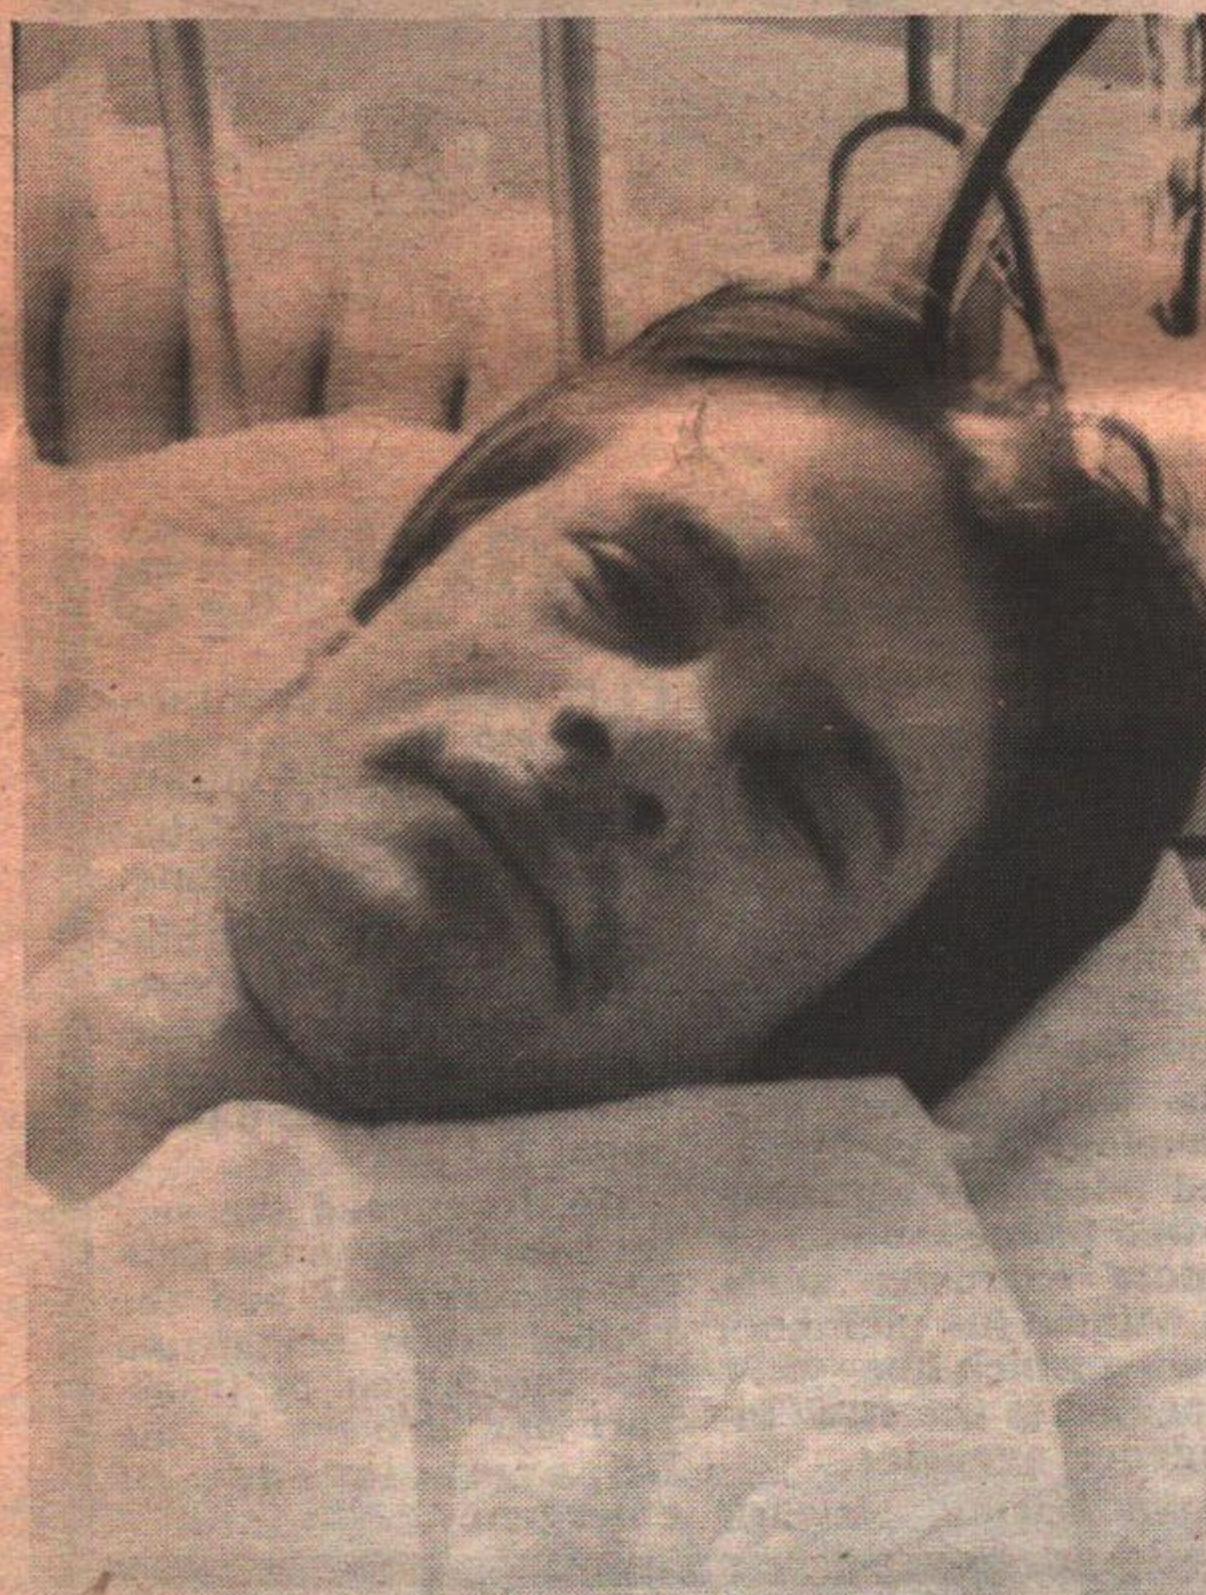

● EARLIER, as the clashes started, News Line photographer P.J. Arkell was attacked in a separate incident near the police station.

He was beaten about the head and a Nikon camera and telephoto lens were forcibly taken from him, and another lens damaged.

Consultative groups ignored warnings

News Line reporter SIMON VEVERS in hospital yesterday

THE build-up to the confrontation in Brixton was ignored by the official police-community consultative group.

That was the charge levelled against the body yesterday by Gordon Ley, chairman of Lambeth council's own police committee.

His committee of elected councillors closely monitors the activities of the police — but is ignored by the Home Office and local commanders.

Instead, the authorities work through the consultative group which came to prominence following the Scarman report into the 1981 riots.

Ley poured scorn on the group, accusing it of being part of the establishment police machinery.

BRIXTON REVOLT

'For example, you've got members of the group making statements about target surveillance, giving the seal of approval to the Special Patrol Group.'

'Yet the vast majority of the community totally detest the SPG. They see it as one of the major causes of the 1981 riots.'

'So here they have a group which is supposed to represent the community saying bring in the

SPG. This can't be right.'

Ley said the consultative group, made up of various individual representatives and church leaders, was not prepared to criticise police behaviour or tactics.

'If they were the voice of the community they would be saying today what people have had to say on the streets.'

Ley said tension had been rising all summer in Brixton, as a result of increasing despair about jobs, living standards and the attitude of the police.

The police had for example gone out of their way to make a huge show about evicting women from the South London hospital.

Many members of the black community had complained to his committee about being unable to get assistance from the police.

'The local commander is well aware of this situation. The day after Handsworth, for example, the police here behaved as if they were treading on glass.'

'But the atmosphere created by the government gets through to the police too, and whatever the senior officers say, those on active duty simply get out of control.'

'They feel the support of the government for their actions against the black community.'

'They read in the papers statements to the effect that black people are lazy and are criminals.'

'And they feel that any action, however extreme, is legitimate and will get the support of the government.'

'We saw that in the miners' dispute and now we have this attitude in the inner cities.'

'Police will burst into a black family's house with guns firing knowing that Thatcher is right behind them.'

Ley admitted that his committee had few powers, that the police in the capital are answerable to no one else but the Home Secretary.

But he noted how even the limited role it played was now under attack from Sir Kenneth Newman, Metropolitan Police Commissioner, with his talk of Labour being an anti-police party which might not get support from the force if it came to office.

'Newman's remarks don't surprise me,' said Ley.

'It is something the leadership of the Labour Party ought to feel concerned about — but it doesn't.'

'And that's even more worrying because it means on this basis a Labour government would not feel able to resist the kind of repression we have seen here in Britain.'

NCB 'conned' sacked man

A SACKED Fife miner has been pressured by the coal board into signing a document giving up his industrial tribunal claim for unfair dismissal, it was stated yesterday.

Jimmy White, a young tradesman, is being re-employed as a 'new start' at Cowdenbeath NCB workshops after signing the document.

Now his local committee of SCEBTA, the Scottish pit craftsmen's union, are demanding that document he signed is torn up.

'The feeling is very strong indeed that everyone must have the right to go to an industrial tribunal, and this applies to Jimmy White as much as anyone else,' Cowdenbeath SCEBTA committee member Robert Ross told News Line yesterday.

'We are firmly of the view that Jimmy White was subjected to pressure to sign. We are pressing that he must be free to proceed with his claim.'

White was the first of nine sacked Scottish miners — out of 206 in the coalfield altogether — selected and asked to sign the document as the price of re-starting as an NCB employee.

He was called in by management a week last Thursday. Two days later, on Saturday, a letter arrived at his home from the NUM and SCEBTA Scottish area, directing sacked miners not to sign any documents of this type.

White therefore had no knowledge of this directive when called before management. The other eight men were not asked to sign it until the following Monday — and they all refused, in line with union policy.

Was White 'conned'? 'In a way I was. I was given no alternative,' White commented at the weekend. Did he regret signing? 'In a way, yes,' said White, who has gone through intense hardship over the last 18 months.

'My sister's shooting was no accident'

INTERVIEWS
by Sue Laird

ANGRY people gathered throughout the day outside Brixton police station on Saturday as news spread about the cold-blooded police shooting of 38-year-old mother of five, Cherry Groce.

By 5p.m. on Saturday several hundred protesters, black and white, old and young had joined the protest.

Cherry's brother, her sister Lorna Gayle and a group of friends were vociferously protesting to police at the side entrance to the police station about the dawn raid by armed police.

Exchanges with the police were heated and angry.

Lorna, distraught with anger, and shaking with emotion denounced the police action. She told News Line:

'My sister was in her house when the police came. They were looking for my nephew. But he has not lived there for three years.'

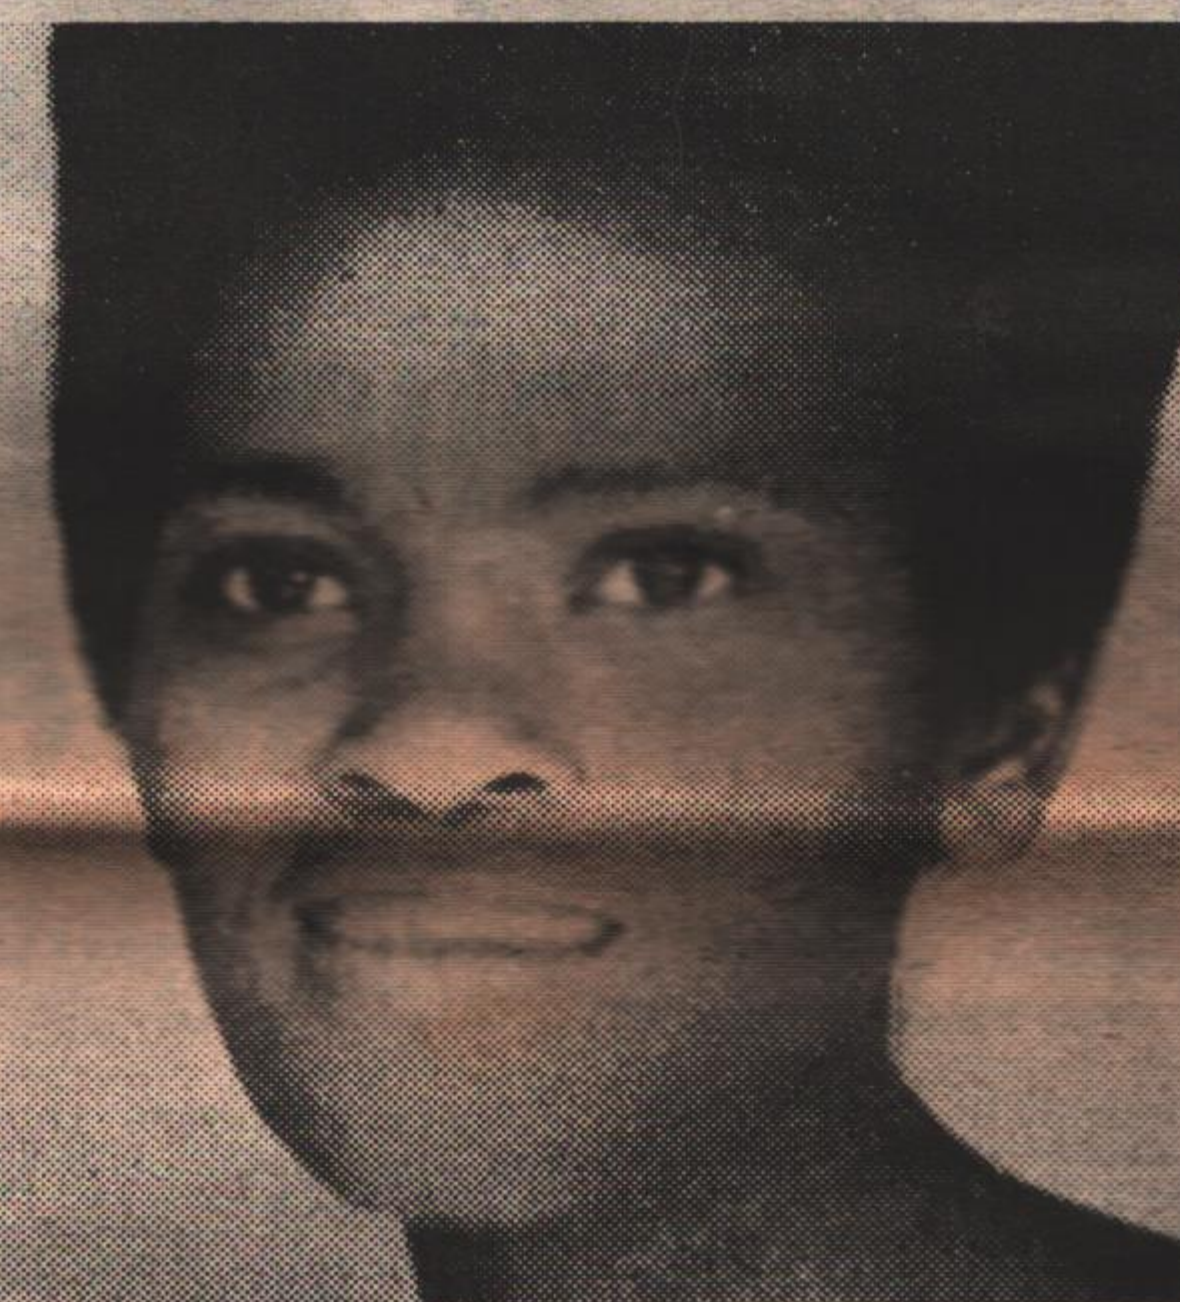

Lorna said the police had broken down the door: 'You can see that', she said. 'The lock is broken.'

She said her sister had heard the noise, gone to answer the door then returned to her room for her dressing gown.

The police had burst in and gunned her down Lorna added.

'It was no accident', she said. 'They came with the

BRIXTON REVOLT

CHERRY GROCE ... severely wounded by police shooting intention to shoot my nephew.'

Gregory, a local artist told News Line: 'I am here because they shot a black woman in the back.'

'This is not building community relations. If they shoot a black woman it shows they have no respect for black people.'

'Most of the black youth in Brixton have a police record before they leave school. That is not right.'

'When they say we must unite, how can we unite with people who are murderers? As far as I am concerned the police are out of order.'

The statement put out by Scotland Yard saying the incident was a 'mistake' and issuing a 'wholehearted apology' served only to enflame the anger.

Martin Headlam denounced the statement as 'lies'.

'You do not go in someone's house and within two seconds shoot her.'

'He shot the lady and when her son told him to leave her alone told him to "fuck off".' Headlam claimed.

Slav CP paper banned

BELGRADE — A Yugoslav court has banned the sale of the latest issue of the weekly newspaper 'Mladina', an official organ of the Communist Party-led youth organisation. Journalists at the newspaper said the ban arose because of an interview with lawyer Vladimir Seks, a defence attorney at a trial of six intellectuals in Belgrade earlier this year.

FIRST ATTACK ON TRIPOLI REPULSED

BEIRUT — Four Lebanese militias backed by units of the Syrian army yesterday besieged the port city of Tripoli in an attempt to crush the Islamic Unification Movement, Tawheed.

First reports said the invading militiamen had encountered fierce resistance from Tawheed fighters and been repulsed.

Singing battle songs, soldiers of the SNSP advanced into southern Tripoli on Saturday but were halted at the main boulevard. Other units are also bogged down on the city outskirts.

Ranged against Tawheed are the militias of the SNSP, the Lebanese Communist Party, units of Walid Jumblatt's Progressive Socialist Party, the Arab Ba'ath Organisation in Lebanon, the Lebanese Socialist Action Party and the Arab Democratic Party.

Mahmoud Wawi, the Communist Party's chief in north Lebanon, said: 'Tawheed has blocked every attempt to find a political solution.'

'As a result, we have arrived at the disaster Tripoli is suffering today. We are obliged to use all methods needed to end this crisis.'

All telephone lines to Tripoli were cut at the weekend as Syrian batteries on the outskirts of the city continued to pulverise the port district with heavy shelling.

About 500,000 residents

BY A FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT

of the city's 700,000 population have now fled since the siege began two weeks ago. The number of killed is more than 250 with about 1,000 wounded.

Wealthy families from Tripoli have rented chalets outside the war zone while others have gone to live with relatives or are sheltering in nearby schools, mosques and churches.

Afford

Some have nowhere to go. A 59-year-old telephone operator told a Reuters correspondent: 'The rich can afford to go, but we poor people can't even feed our children properly.'

The Syrian regime gave the go ahead for the ground assault on the city after last week's peace negotiations broke down.

Damascus had demanded that Tawheed relinquish political control of the city, disarm and allow the deployment of Syrian troops in key areas.

Top Solidarity man arrested

WARSAW — Stanislaw Wadolowski, a former deputy chairman of Solidarity, has been detained amid opposition reports that a group of nine political prisoners have been beaten up during a recent protest.

Lech Walesa, leader of the banned trade union movement, said Wadolowski was arrested on Saturday after Zomo secret police planted a 'compromising document' in his flat.

Mrs Wadolowski told Solidarity that police searched their flat in the Baltic port of Szczecin and found a stencil referring to general elections to be held on October 13.

She said the stencil had been left by a provocateur who had visited the flat.

The contents of the stencil were not disclosed but Solidarity has urged voters to defy the government and boycott the elections.

Nine political prisoners, including senior Solidarity official Wladyslaw Frasyniuk, have been beaten up by warders, the trade union has also revealed.

They were beaten up during an incident at Leczyca prison in central Poland last week.

An aide of government spokesman Jerzy Urban confirmed that force was used to move a group of inmates to new cells on September 24.

Solidarity sources identified the prisoners as Janusz Sreniowski, Tadeusz Wypych, Gregorz Sendek, Miroslaw Andrzejewski, Andrzej Filipczak, Krzysztof Gos and Jerzy Rojak, as well as Frasyniuk.

The name of the ninth man is unknown.

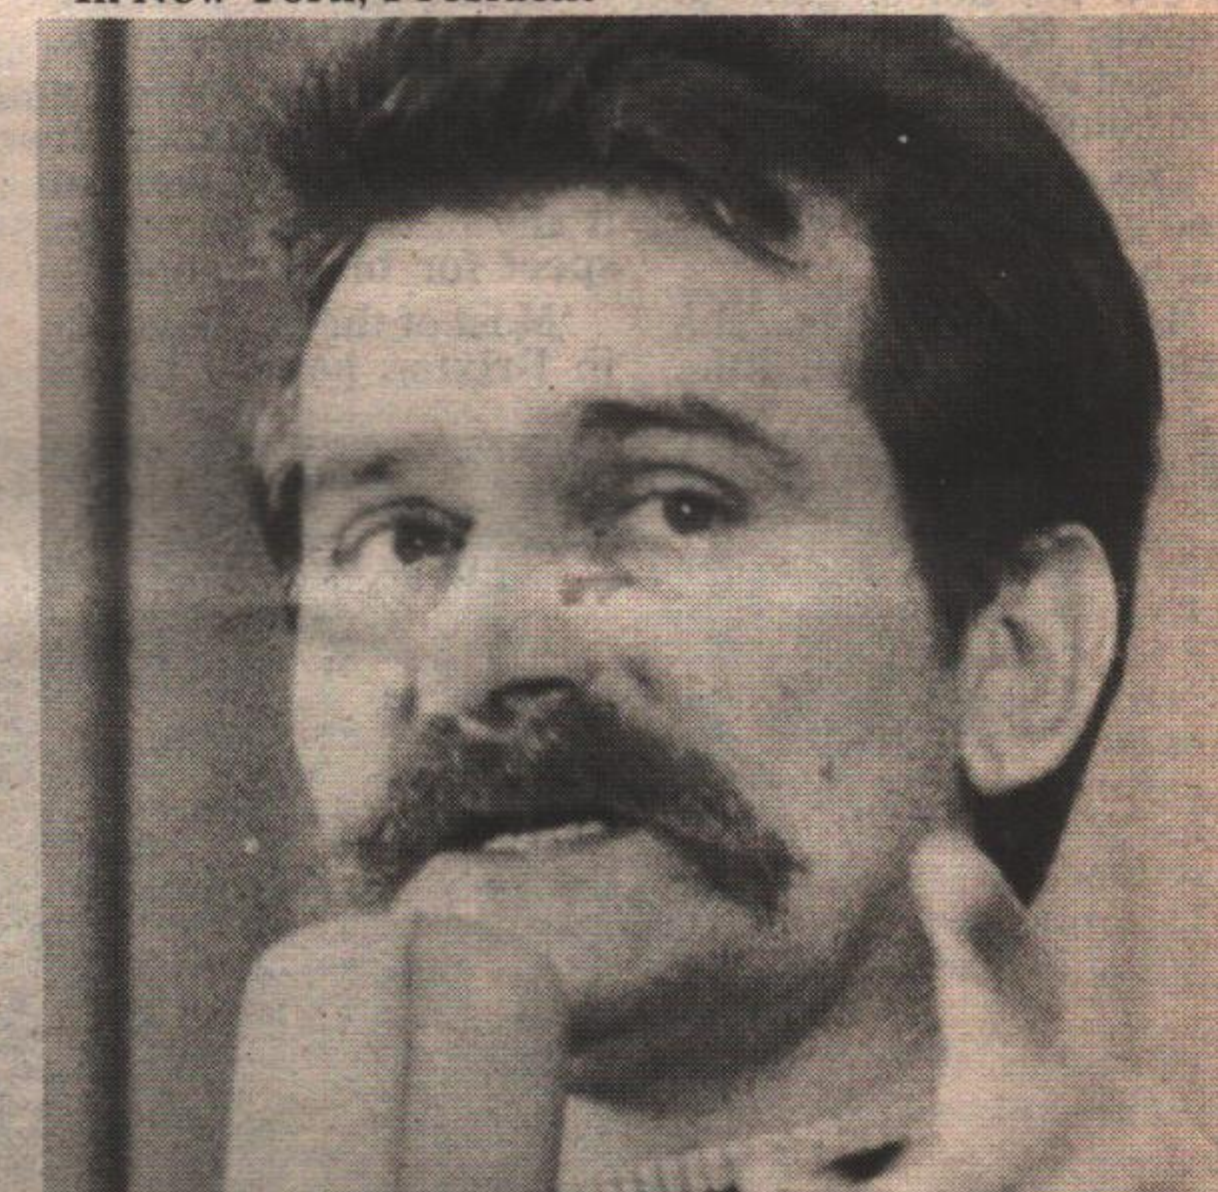

Sreniowski began a hunger strike on Thursday in protest against their treatment, according to the opposition spokesmen.

In New York, President and Prime Minister General Wojciech Jaruzelski was quoted as saying Solidarity no longer existed as a 'real and organised force'.

In an interview with the 'New York Times' during a visit to the United Nations, he did not dispute estimates that his regime was holding up to 390 political prisoners.

He told the paper also that the government was pursuing an investigation into Walesa's 'conduct' as a leader of Solidarity.

Plot against secret service

PARIS — The new French secret service (DGSE) chief, General Rene Imbot has introduced a new riddle into the 'Rainbow Warrior' sabotage scandal.

He claimed at the weekend that he had uncovered a plot to destroy his agency.

Imbot, named last Wednesday as successor to sacked Admiral Pierre Lacoste, called a news conference to make his extraordinary allegation.

Despite the blaze of publicity Imbot failed to convince the French press that DGSE agents did not blow up the Greenpeace ship in Auckland harbour on July 10.

Prime Minister Laurent Fabius was forced to admit a week ago that the French government was responsible for the sabotage in which Greenpeace photographer Fernando Pereira was killed.

Imbot, who said he was weighing his words carefully, declared he had uncovered a 'malign operation' to destabilise and destroy the secret service.

He refused to answer questions but the French press has begun to speculate that his statement was linked to the arrest of five DGSE agents.

All five were arrested last Thursday on charges of leaking top-secret DGSE information on the sabotage operation to the press.

Leaks

Imbot implied that that there would be no more leaks to the press because he had personally ensured the DGSE was now 'locked up'.

He said ominously: 'From now on, any information that one could claim to have obtained from this service is a lie.'

Panama's President stands down

PANAMA CITY — Panamanian President Nicolas Ardito Barletta resigned yesterday after less than a year in office, saying he had lost the support of the army.

He was succeeded immediately by First Vice-President Eric Arturo del

Valle, 54, an industrialist.

The resignation capped two days of widespread rumours of a military coup after he pledged to order an independent inquiry into the murder earlier this month of a leading critic of the military.

Ardito Barletta said in his letter of resignation, read to an emergency session of parliament soon after midnight on Friday:

'The main political parties making up our (ruling) alliance . . . and the national defence forces consider that they can no longer work with my presidency.'

Ardito Barletta, 48, a former World Bank vice-president, took office last October after a wafer-thin victory as the military's candidate in the May elections.

Arrests follow coup attempt

KHARTOUM — The Sudanese military regime has arrested 162 people in connection with an abortive coup attempt, allegedly by non-Muslim southerners last Thursday.

A night curfew has been clamped on the capital, while Sudanese newspapers said the coup leaders had called off the plot at the last minute but failed to inform all the army units involved.

'Al-Sahafa', the newspaper of the ruling Transitional Military Council, quoted Defence Minister Osman Abdullah Mohamed saying the detainees included army officers.

Photographs of a missing alleged plotter, named as Corporal Samuel Bol Jok, appeared in newspapers yesterday with appeals for information on his whereabouts.

Plot

Prime Minister Al-Gazouli Dafa-Allah said the politicians from southern Sudan and the Nuba mountains were behind the coup plot and that it remained a threat.

He claimed the first stage of the coup was to have been the assassination of the ruling military council of generals, the civilian Cabinet and three prominent politicians.

Al-Sahafa named the politicians as Hassan al-Turabi al-Mahdi of the New Umma Party and Al-Sherif Zein Al-Abidin al-Hindi of the National Unionist Party of deposed President Jaafar Numeiry.

Dafa-Allah claimed also that investigations and confessions from the detainees had allegedly confirmed foreign involvement.

He mentioned no name but one detainee, Philip Abbas Ghaboush, a Nuba politician, is an outspoken supporter of southern liberation army leader Colonel John Garang.

Garang's Sudanese People's Liberation Army is backed by the Ethiopian military regime of President Mengistu Haile Mariam.

The SPLA, which demands the dissolution of the Muslim-dominated transitional administration in Khartoum, this month launched an offensive against government-held garrisons in the south.

BUTHELEZI CONDEMNED FOR TOWNSHIP TERROR

JOHANNESBURG — The United Democratic Front (UDF) has accused Chief Gatsha Buthelezi's Inkatha movement of 'unleashing a reign of terror' in South Africa's black townships.

The UDF statement said Buthelezi's thugs were 'collaborating with the security forces' and said the terror campaign 'belies some of its leaders' hollow commitment to peace and justice.

BY A FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT

Buthelezi is an arch-collaborator with the racist regime. Ten years ago he was appointed Chief Minister of the racially-segregated Kwa-Zulu 'homeland', one of 10 set up by the apartheid regime.

Nine days ago Buthelezi sponsored the formation of the Convention Alliance, a multi-racial group sponsored by capitalist interests.

The UDF criticised the new grouping at the weekend, attacking the participation of the white opposition party, the Progressive Federal Party.

On Saturday at a rally at Umlazi, on the outskirts of Durban, Buthelezi ordered the mobilisation of his Inkatha supporters to use physical violence against the UDF and left-wing organisations.

Four blacks were killed in clashes with Buthelezi's gangs during the rally. Two others were rushed to hospital with stab wounds.

Zulu King Goodwill Zwelithini told the rally that elements in the UDF had 'done their damndest' to set black against black in Durban townships.

He and Buthelezi condemned the banned African National Congress led by Nelson Mandela and said it was in alliance with the UDF.

'These things are a recipe for a civil war in South Africa which will make the conflicts we see in Angola, Mozambique and Zimbabwe look like wedding receptions or Sunday school picnics,' the king, who is Buthelezi's nephew, said.

'We, as a people, are committed to the ways of peace,' he said.

Struggle

Buthelezi said the ANC's 'armed struggle so-called' had been a 'dismal failure' and could not succeed against 'the most efficient killing army on the continent'.

He denounced ANC calls for the liquidation of collaborators with apartheid.

The National Convention got support in yesterday's newspapers from a group of white businessmen who took out full-page advertisements calling for an end to racial discrimination.

Israel deports Palestinians

TEL AVIV — An Israeli High Court yesterday upheld military expulsion orders against three Palestinians from the occupied West Bank.

Their deportation has been delayed until tomorrow pending a second review, their lawyer Felicia Langer said.

The men, Amin Makbul of Nablus, Walid Nazal of Jenin and Bahjat Gaousy of Tulkarm, have been accused of belonging to the Palestine Liberation Organisation and engaging in 'subversive activity'.

Two weeks ago the Israeli regime expelled to Jordan 18 Palestinians who were among 600 prisoners released in May during a prisoner of war exchange with the Syrian regime.

The Israeli regime

yesterday clamped a curfew on the West Bank towns of Hebron and Halhoul following Arab unrest.

And in Haifa two bombs exploded, one of them slightly injuring four people. Police swarmed the area arresting dozens of Arabs.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres yesterday welcomed an offer of direct talks with Jordan's King Hussein saying the king's proposal was 'important, progressive and intelligent'.

In a separate statement to the 'US News and World Report' magazine, Peres said: 'I do not see a real alternative to immediate direct talks without prior conditions' with Jordan and other Middle East states — but not the PLO.

Hussein told the UN General Assembly last Friday he was prepared to negotiate 'under appropriate auspices with the government of Israel, promptly and directly...'

Peres' response contradicts the stand of Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, head of the Likud bloc in the coalition regime.

Leaders condemned

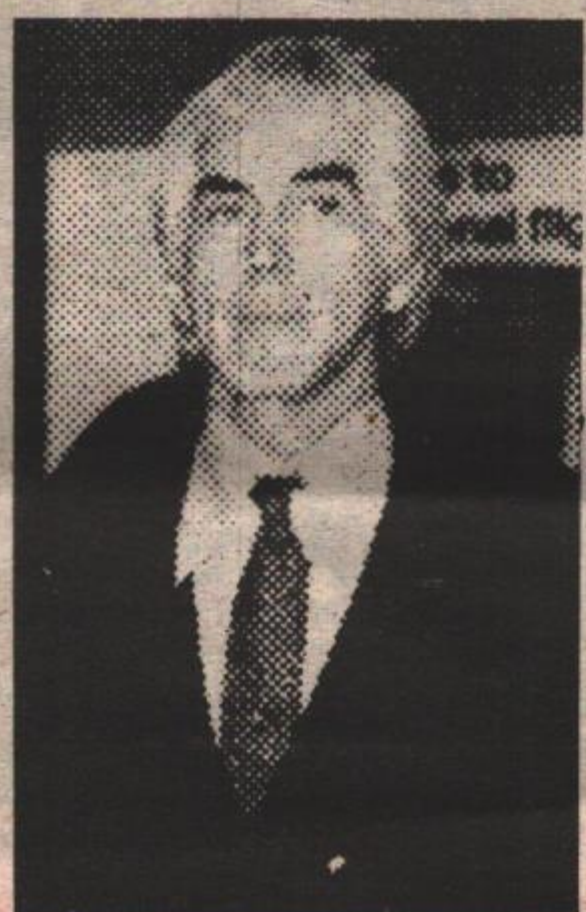

MOSCOW — The presidium of the Supreme Soviet yesterday issued a stern attack on the leaders of the Baltic republic of Lithuania.

The Soviet bureaucracy's highest body accused the Lithuanian leadership of economic failures and failing to heed public opinion.

The presidium's resolution said they were permitting excessive waste and absenteeism and their fight against drunkenness and juvenile delinquency was ineffective.

Housing construction was lagging and the republic had failed to fulfil official targets.

DeLorean trial today

JOHN DeLOREAN

DETROIT — John DeLorean will be arraigned today on criminal charges of defrauding investors in his former car business.

DeLorean, 60, is accused of diverting $8.9 million to his own personal use.

He is expected to plead not guilty when he appears before the Detroit Federal Court.

In pending civil actions, the Thatcher government is seeking to recover some of the $80 million handed over to DeLorean for his gull-winged car project in the north of Ireland.

Earlier this month a grand jury handed down a 15-count indictment accusing DeLorean of fraud and racketeering violations along with tax evasion, causing false tax returns to be filed and interstate transportation of stolen money.

If convicted on all counts he could face maximum penalties of 87 years in prison and fines totalling $82,000.

Last year DeLorean was found not guilty of trading in drugs to finance his business interests.

Our reply to 'The Observer'

'THE OBSERVER', owned by multi-millionaire Mr Tiny Rowland, yesterday published its pathetic witch-hunt against the Workers Revolutionary Party.

Its prominence across the top of page two in the first edition was overtaken by events — the Brixton riot. In later editions it was cut down to two measly sentences.

'The Observer's' smear job, exposed in Saturday's News Line, said that Astmoor Litho Limited, printers of the News Line, had printed three editions of the 'Notts Collier' free of charge.

In the eyes of the Fleet Street press barons, the Tory government and its scabs' association this ranks as some kind of 'crime'. For our part, we see nothing to defend and nothing to hide.

The Workers Revolutionary Party gave total support to the miners in their year-long struggle against the Tory government's pit closure programme. Since then, major marches have been organised across Britain to campaign for the release of the jailed miners and the reinstatement of the sacked NUM members.

Like the overwhelming majority in the labour and trade union movement, we are utterly opposed to scab and company unionism. On the working-class principle of 'An injury to one is an injury to all', we have given what assistance we can to the preservation of the national union.

The 'Notts Collier' is a four-page paper which is campaigning for Notts miners to stay within the NUM. Its editorial policy and its content is the sole responsibility of its publishers — former Notts area general secretary Henry Richardson and president Ray Chadburn.

Henry Richardson correctly explained the situation when he said: 'We have no money. The WRP print the paper for nothing. How else do we get our view across when the breakaway enjoys support from anti-union newspapers and can employ public relations staff at £200 a week to fight their campaign?

'I have no money to fight a campaign. Our funds are sequestered. Every penny I receive goes to support the 24 Notts miners sacked during the strike.'

'The Observer' claimed: 'The WRP has refused to comment on allegations that its funds include receipts from Libya or come direct from Colonel Qadhafi's government.' It is not that we 'refused to comment', we were never asked.

However, we are more than happy to comment now. The 'Libyan connection' is a pack of lies. It was invented by our political opponents to slander the WRP. The purpose was to try and wall off the WRP from the labour and trade union movement. It has signally failed.

Arch-scab Mr Roy Lynk told 'The Observer': 'This shows how low the national union can stoop. The WRP are not a democratic organisation.'

We don't take lessons in democracy from Tory-backed scabs. We need only point out that Lynk and his crew have shown nothing but contempt for all the democratically-reached decisions of the NUM since the return to work.

Their idea of 'freedom' is to work hand-in-glove with the NCB's MacGregor; their idea of 'justice' is to have the NUM destroyed by the Tory courts; their idea of 'democracy' is to lock out elected officials from their positions and to organise a scabs' federation against the TUC.

The British labour and trade union movement knows a scab when it sees one. And it knows what Tory press witch-hunts are all about.

The best answer to Lynk and 'The Observer' is to give a massive vote to the NUM resolution at this week's Labour Party conference in Bournemouth and to campaign with the utmost energy for Notts miners to stay within the national union.

Police had shoot to kill order says Kaufman and were such orders given?"

He said there was 'no evidence whatsoever' that the circumstances amounted to those under which police are permitted to shoot.

'What happened was that the shot that was fired, the shot that killed which has incapacitated the life of the person that was hit, was a shot against a woman of 38, mother of a large family and it is to me inexplicable how policemen could shoot a woman when looking for a man even if his instructions were to shoot the man.'

He said it was 'extraordinary' that it should have taken place 'in Brixton of all places, which has suffered such problems, has been the subject of a report by Lord

Scarman and is the most troubled of all our inner city areas'.

He complained the Scarman report, drawn up after the 1981 Brixton riots, had been 'swept under the carpet' with no action taken by the government.

'Lord Scarman should be sent back to Brixton, Toxteth and sent to Handsworth to give us an assessment of what has taken place in these four years and make recommendations which this time must be carried out.'

'The social ills of our inner cities are all part of the developments taking place during the six years of Thatcher government. It is significant and relevant that these events have taken place during Thatcherism for the first time in our history.'

Drugs battle is 'out of control'

A DRUG abuse expert is warning that the battle against heroin has been lost and that the authorities should now consider legalising its use.

Dr David Marjot, who runs the drug dependence unit at St Bernard's Hospital, London, said attempts at prohibition clearly were not working. It might be the lesser of two evils to legalise and tax heroin, as there would then be no drug pushers, the heroin would not be mixed with other harmful substances, and money would be raised for the exchequer.

Harm

Dr Marjot, a visiting psychiatrist at Wormwood Scrubs prison, and a former surgeon commander in the navy, stressed he was 'committed to the war against the harm drugs are causing'.

But he told a weekend meeting of the Medical Journalists' Association near Oxford that present policies to control drug abuse had failed and alternative strategies should be explored.

He said: 'I am not in favour of legalising heroin, but I am less in favour of the present situation because I think we have lost control of it.

'We are going to have the evil of prohibition without any benefit or successes. So I am saying there is an alternative — let us get rid of prohibition and let us license, control and tax.'

Cost

The cost of the present policy was huge. Addicts stole property worth millions of pounds each year to buy drugs. Even larger sums were going out of the country and being paid to international drug traffickers.

Enforcement could also cause a risk to civil liberties and spark inner city riots. By taxing heroin, the price could be kept low enough to prevent too much street crime but high enough to stop too many new users.

New monthly journal for print union

SOGAT, the biggest printing union, launches a new monthly journal today as part of a drive to increase 'membership involvement'.

The full colour journal will be distributed free.

'Our union has always been proud of its close links with members, but we've got to try harder,' said SOGAT general secretary Brenda Dean.

'The new look for our journal is all part of the story.'

She said the union would devote more attention to young people in its future activities.

The new journal is being produced by Centurion Press Ltd., with typesetting and artwork by Senator Graphics and printing by South-ernprint.

Lesson

The Band Aid concert organised by ex-Boomtown Rat, Bob Geldoff, was 'a lesson for us all', she said.

Cornish jobs march

MORE THAN 1,000 people including school-children and pensioners marched through a Cornish town at the weekend in protest against plans for 500 people to be made redundant by the largest employer in the area.

The redundancies likely to take effect at the end of the year were announced only six weeks after the take-over in July of the Compair Holman engineering works in Camborne by the Windsor-based Siebe Gorman company.

The job losses will cut the workforce by two-thirds in a town, once the centre of the Cornish mining industry, where the unemployment rate is already running at 19 per cent.

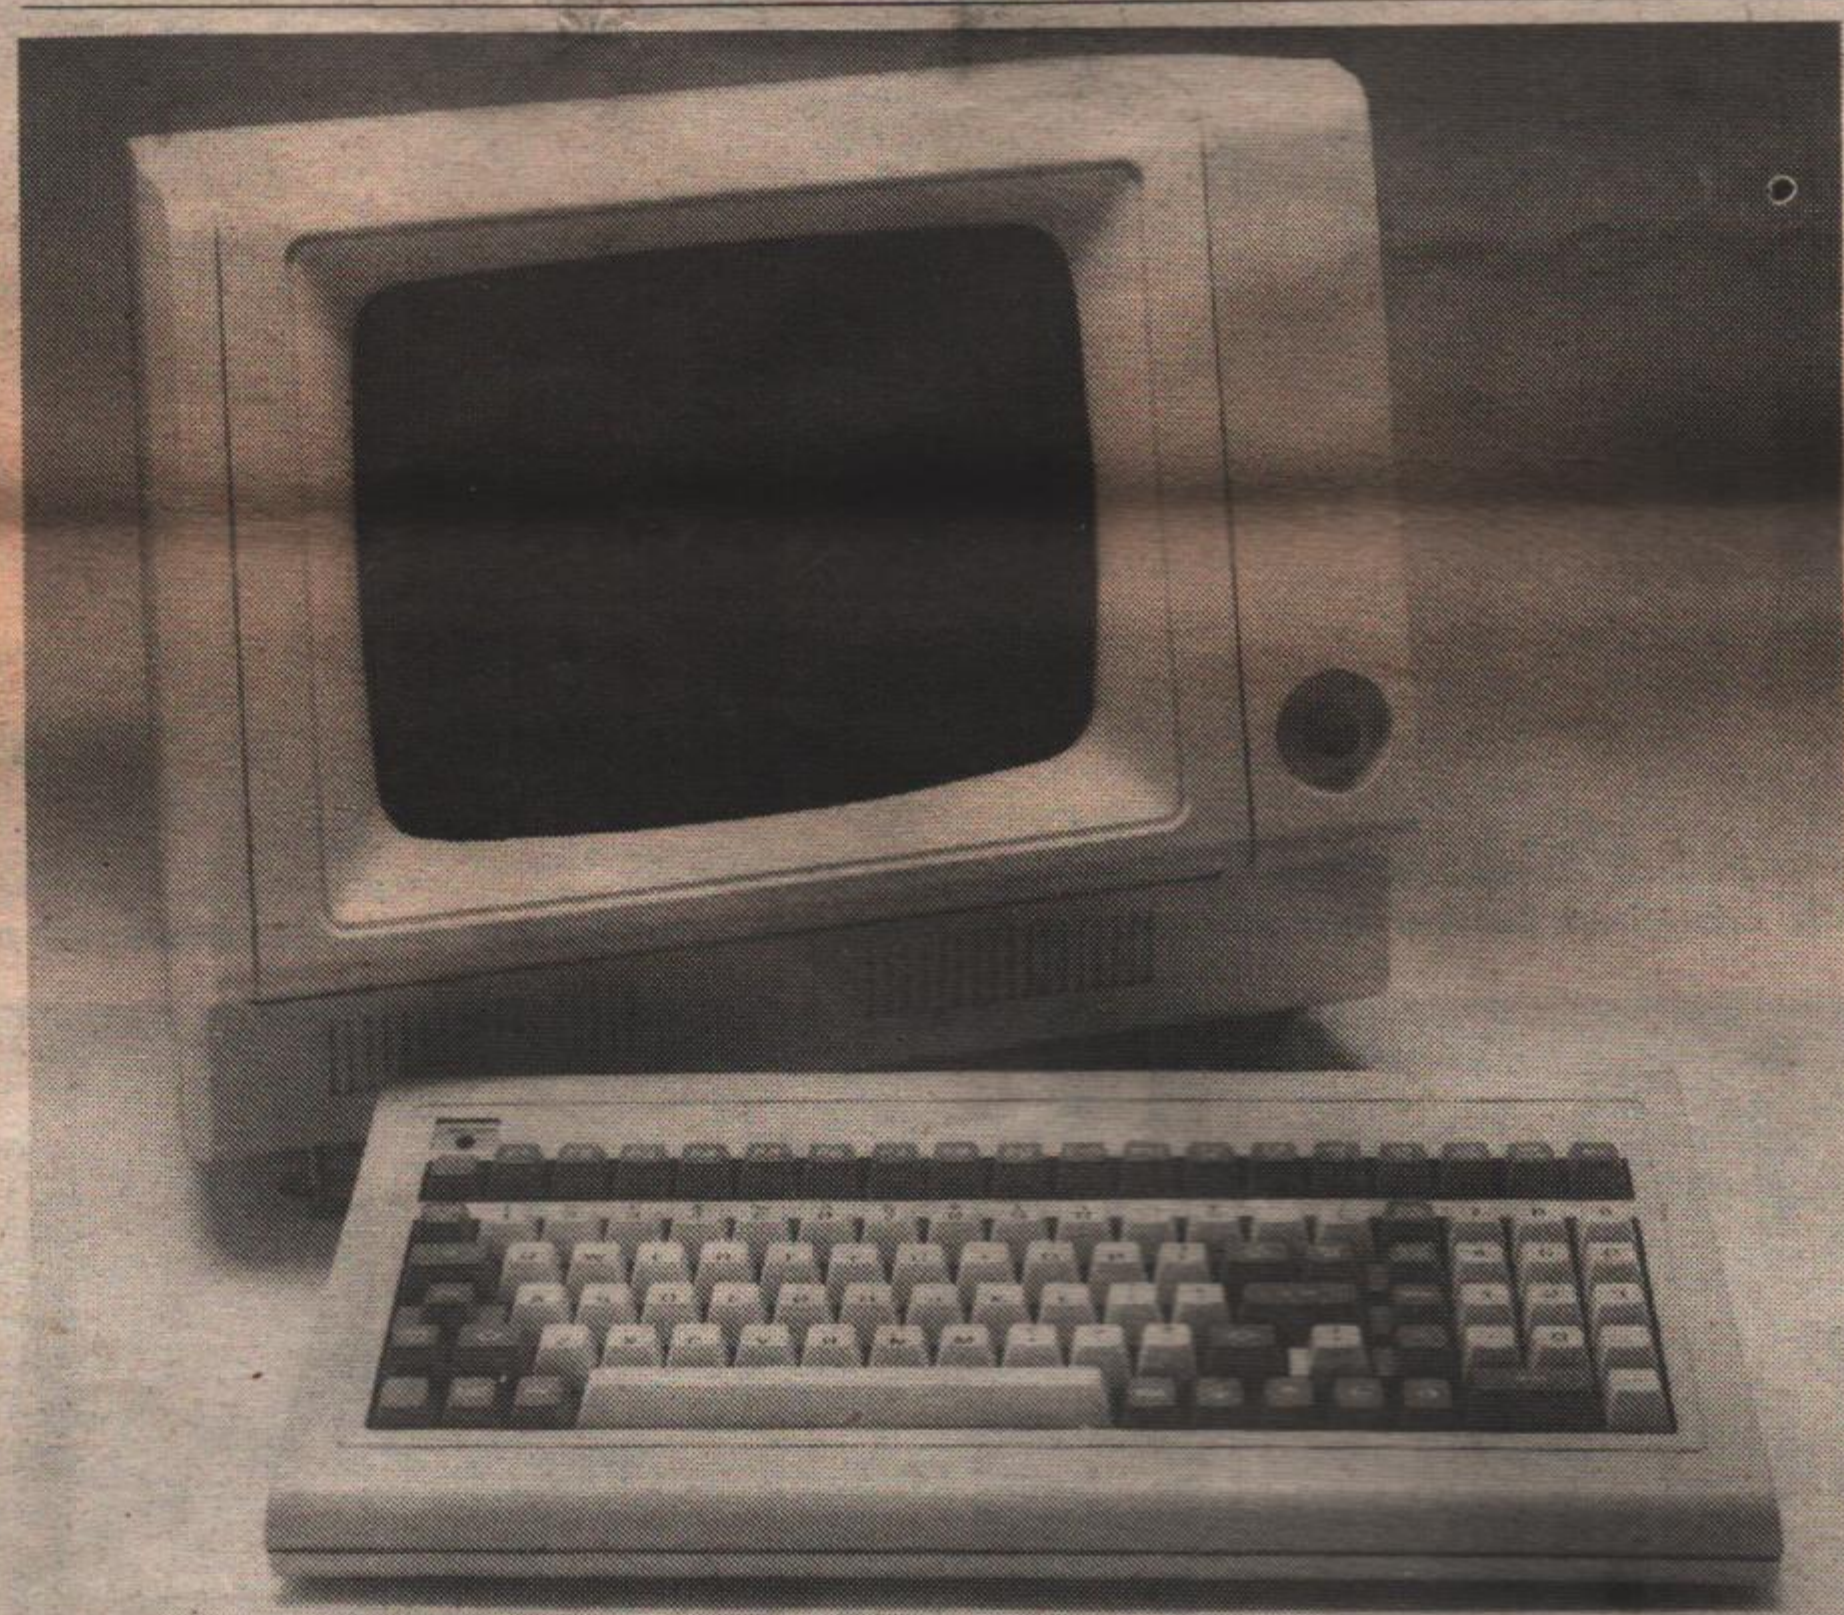

Among those who addressed the rally were Labour employment spokesman John Prescott and Liberal MP David Penhaligon, who represents a neighbouring constituency.

'Maniacs' slammed

VETERAN Welsh Labour MP Leo Abse, 68, the divorcee and family law reformer, has told his constituency party he will not stand for his Torfaen seat (formerly Pontypool) at the next general election.

In a retirement statement he said: 'I have no intention of joining the ranks of ageing politicians who, Reagan-like, maniacally deny the ageing process and death itself.'

Visual display units . . . a hazard to health?

Display unit warning

COMPUTER monitors and visual display units could be bad for your health and your job prospects, according to a report published today.

'Over two million VDUs are in operation in Britain and the last ten years has seen a tenfold increase in the use of computers by typists,' says the Labour Research Department.

'With this rapid spread of VDUs, questions have been asked about whether they are good for your health or your job prospects, and it appears they could be bad for both.

'The symptoms of video blues are: eye straining (e.g. burning, watering or itchy eyes); blurred vision; seeing coloured fringes around objects after using the screen; headaches; back, neck, shoulder, arm or finger pains; fatigue and irritability and general stress symptoms.'

Most people surveyed said they were most concerned with glare (68 per cent), stuffy, hot rooms (50 per cent), work stations (29 per cent), noise levels (26 per cent) and no regular breaks (17 per cent).

In 23 per cent of the workplaces surveyed there had been job losses with the introduction of new technology, with the greatest losses in general data processing jobs. Some new computer-orientated jobs had been created but generally in much smaller numbers than jobs lost.

Nearly a quarter of the workplaces indicated that union pressure or workplace agreements delayed or prevented job loss and almost all said new technology had brought benefits to workers in pay, hours and holidays.

THE future of the National Youth Theatre, the country's leading training ground for young actors, stands in jeopardy following the withdrawal today of commercial sponsorship for the company.

The NYT, founded in 1956, has been supported for four years by Texaco, the oil company, whose sponsorship has been worth nearly £100,000 a year.

But now the oil firm has decided to discontinue aid and the NYT's founder director Michael Croft, facing financial crisis, has bitterly attacked the Arts Council for its failure to help.

'The Arts Council is the one funding body from which we should logically expect support' he says. 'Regional youth theatres can get support from regional arts associations, which are heavily funded by the Arts Council.'

Croft added: 'It is deeply depressing that after 30 years of achievement and acclaim the NYT should once again be forced to go begging for commercial sponsorship.'

The theatre receives an annual grant from the Department of Education and Science — £36,000 this year — but this covers only a small part of running costs.

If fresh commercial sponsorship is not found, a drastic reduction of all the theatre's activities will be necessary, Croft warns.

The theatre, which each year gives 500 young people the chance to play in London theatres, boasts an impressive cast list of former protégés including Ben Kingsley, Helen Mirren, Derek Jacobi, Michael York and Simon Ward.

Texaco's general manager for public affairs, Stuart Cusden, said his company had enjoyed working with the theatre but added, 'all sponsorships have a life span, we cannot go on running things for ever.'

Two-year schemes mean Job cuts for college staff

FUNDING arrangements under the new two-year Youth Training Scheme will lead to job losses among college staff, local authorities warned last week.

More cash will go directly to employers and managing agents, who will then decide how to spend the 'off-the-job training' element of their funds.

A large number of YTS projects developed in colleges for the 13-week 'off-the-job' element of the one-year YTS will have to shut down unless local authorities subsidise the schemes more heavily.

'Special needs' places of the kind currently offered by local authorities or voluntary organisations, rather than by employers, will be cut from 90,000 to about 55,000.

The chairman of the Manpower Services Commission, which administers YTS, Bryan Nicholson, admitted on Friday

The 'Times Education Supplement' (September 27 1985) points out: '... ministers regard the schemes run by anyone except employers as a barely tolerable necessity, and have insisted on successive cutbacks in the amount of Mode B provision over the two years of the present YTS.'

Agents

On the two-year scheme employers or managing agents will get a basic grant of £160 a month per filled place, a management fee of £100 for each place per year, and an extra £110 per month for 'special needs' cases will go direct to them.

Out of this they will pay £27.30 a week to each youth for the first year and £35 a week in the second year, leaving £610.40 over in the first year and £210 in the second year to pay for the 'off-the-job' training element.

The block grant to employers and managing agents is not meant to cover the full cost of 'off-the-job' training of 13 weeks in the first year and seven weeks in the second year.

Difference

Employers are expected to recoup the difference out of the work their 'trainees' do. But there is no stipulation as to how much extra they will be obliged to spend on training.

Alongside encouraging

Young people on Youth Training Schemes protest in London over pay and conditions private firms to take on 'special needs' youth, the aim is to encourage private training agencies to conduct the 'off-the-job' element of YTS, as opposed to colleges.

The MSC argues that training with employers is better and carries better prospects of a job than training with local authorities, colleges, and voluntary organisations.

The result will be even less proper 'training' for youth on schemes. Private training agencies sought after by employers wanting to spend as little as possible will be more interested in shoddy, cheap training to make profit.

The assistant education officer of the Labour-controlled Association of Metropolitan Authorities, Mrs Elizabeth Reed, said last week: 'There is a great deal of pain ahead for the authorities and for many people who have committed themselves to these projects.'

Colleges face problems because for the first time, providers will only be paid for the places which are actually filled.

Places

They will lose money on places available from previous years which are not filled as more and more managing agents and employers opt for private training agencies' courses.

Many colleges have already run up major deficits on the existing YTS, which the Tory Education Secretary refuses to exempt from spending penalties.

Birmingham YTS report suppressed

THE MANPOWER Services Commission has tried to suppress a report which alleges racial discrimination on YTS schemes in Birmingham, it was claimed this week.

The report shows that more than 95 per cent of youth on employer-based schemes which offer the best prospect of permanent jobs in the city are white.

Members of the Birmingham MSC's area manpower board (the regional MSC body) has called for the publication of the figures.

Like the MSC itself, its area manpower boards are corporatist bodies consisting of representatives from employers, trade unions and education.

Members of the board were told not to release the figures, which were prepared by trade union representatives along with the West Midlands County Council.

The area board chairman, a representative of the CBI businessmen's organisation, Dr C Thomas, admitted last week: 'We were under strict instructions from the MSC not to release this information.'

'It was supplied in confidence to draw up the equal opportunities policy and a meeting of the area manpower board agreed the figures should be kept confidential.'

Thomas said he was 'very disturbed' that some of the information had been leaked.

Paul Mackney, a member of the area manpower board from the lecturers' union NATFHE said that when he saw the figures 'I argued that we were sitting on a time bomb and the figures had to be made public'.

BRYAN NICHOLSON

that the number of schemes catering for 'disadvantaged' youth and run by local authorities or colleges (Mode B) would be cut down on the new two-year YTS.

There will be a much greater emphasis on employer-based schemes (Mode A).

Nicholson said some schemes of formerly 'Mode B' type would remain, but that for the second year youth on these would move on to an employer-based scheme.

Book exposes child labour

CHILD labour is on the increase in Britain, according to a book published jointly by the TUC and UNICEF.

'All Work and No Play: Child Labour Today', shows that children are being taken on to do the work of adults for the pay of children.

The Low Pay Unit has carried out several surveys of child labour.

A 1985 survey of six London schools, three

Luton schools and two rural schools in mid-Bedfordshire showed that 40 per cent of children had some form of employment.

If this figure is applied nationally, then 2.5 million children could be working.

In that survey, 30 per cent of the sample had suffered accident, 10 per cent of them serious.

More than half the working children were earning £1 an hour or less, and one worked for 17p

BBC researchers found that in East Anglia children aged nine years and upwards are working on the evening shift, from 5p.m. to 8p.m., of a car-rot-topping factory.

The book also looks at child labour in Italy and America. It shows the connection between British fashion bosses and young exploited girl workers in Thailand.

ILEA drugs campaign

THE INNER London Education has announced plans to campaign against drug abuse by London teenagers.

Four health education co-ordinators are to advise schools on the growing problem and the authority is seeking to employ specialists who would concentrate on teenage drug abuse.

ILEA is to ask the Department of Education and Science to contribute £94,000 towards the cost of the appointments from its £2 million anti-drug education support scheme.

Winning Post

Brocade back on form

BROCADE (3.30) can march back to the kind of form that made her a top filly last autumn by beating Homo Sapien in the Harroways Stakes at GOODWOOD today.

She has run well on both her appearances this season and Guy Harwood's tender handling of the daughter of Habitat should reap rich reward before the close of the season.

If Brocade is anything like the filly who annihilated Prego by three lengths in last year's Biscuit Cognac Challenge Stakes after effortlessly winning her first three races, she will be very hard to beat.

She was in need of the race when finishing fourth behind Dafayna in Royal Ascot's Cork and Orrery Stakes back in June, and was beaten less than seven lengths

GOODWOOD:

2.30 Raffia Run, 3.00 Tension, 3.30 Brocade (nap), 4.00 High Tern (n.b.), 4.30 Light Bee, 5.00 Bishah, 5.30 Robro, 6.00 Husnah.

HAMILTON:

2.15 Sunwood, 2.45 Wave Goodbye, 3.15 Spring in my Step, 3.45 Sprowston Boy, 4.15 Glas Y Dorlan, 4.45 Regal Capistrano.

CARLISLE:

2.15 Bell Hop, 2.45 Leath-erstocking, 3.15 Tophams Tavern, 3.45 Rathcolman Lass, 4.15 Tingle Bell, 4.45 Giolla Way, 5.15 Laskin.

NOTTINGHAM:

2.30 Crowfoot's Couture, 3.00 Fishpond, 3.30 Fine Harmony, 4.00 Vida's Double, 4.30 Au Dessus, 5.00 Below Zero.

SELECTIONS

into sixth by Al Bahathi in Newmarket's Child Stakes the following month.

Brocade will strip a fresh horse today and if there are questions asked about her fitness, then there must be bigger ones posed over Homo Sapien.

Henry Cecil's colt beat nothing of merit on his two races at Nottingham and Leicester last summer, and has been on the easy list this term. But so many of the Warren Place horses make successful steps up in class that it is possible for Brocade to be given a race.

Harwood's Careo will be a strong fancy to complete a four-timer in the Stonehill Handicap but may have gone up just too far in the weights to be able to give 4lb to High Tern.

This promising stayer is admirably consistent and had some useful handicappers behind him when scoring at Thirsk earlier in the month.

That form was devalued with the disappointing effort of the third, Tresidder, at Beverley last week, but High Tern (4.00) is still worth siding with.

Harwood sends his lightly-raced colt Pleated to NOTTINGHAM for the Victoria Centre Handicap, but Fishpond

(3.00) looks better value.

Fishpond has been off the course for three months, but was beaten by two useful stayers when third behind Ober-tura and Agra Knight on her last effort.

Spring In My Step (3.15) is improving with every race and can complete a hat-trick in HAMILTON's Scottish Spina Bifida Association Handicap.

Mark Prescott's filly scored by a comfortable two lengths in a Goodwood amateur event earlier in the month and is on a handy mark.

VINCENT O'BRIEN's Woodman retained his unbeaten record in the Ferrans Futurity Stakes at the Curragh yesterday.

A 6-4 on favourite to complete the hat-trick, Woodman took control inside the final two furlongs and, although he had less than a length to spare over Hungry Giant, he won without Pat Eddery having to exert any serious pressure.

O'Brien said: 'Pat told me he is too good a mover for his ground and in the circumstances we are quite happy.'

Woodman is unlikely to run again this season, but O'Brien confirmed that Tate Gallery is on course for the Dewhurst Stakes at Newmarket.

BOXING

Strength sapper

BARRY McGUIGAN battered America's Bernard Taylor to exhaustion to retain the WBA world featherweight title in the deafening atmosphere of the King's Hall, Belfast, on Saturday night.

The 28-year-old Taylor from Knoxville, Tennessee, who came to the fight with a glowing reputation, quit on his stool at the end of the eighth round.

He was exhausted and could take no more of the searing body punches McGuigan managed to land in the latter rounds.

Questions will still be raised about the extra 20 ounces the challenger had to lose in a skipping session before the early morning weigh-in.

It must have been a major factor in his sudden loss of strength.

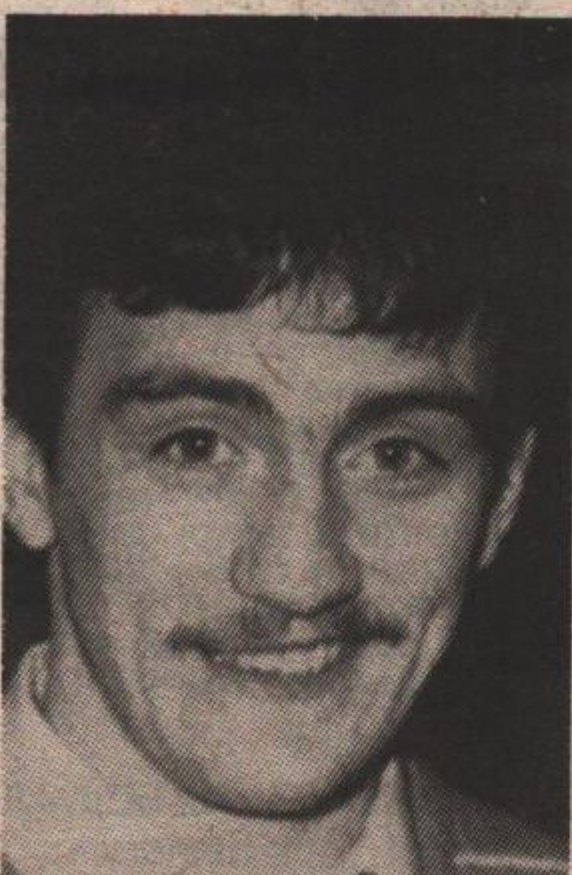

That is not to take anything away from the little 24-year-old from Clones, who overcame Taylor's strong start in the first three or four rounds, to clatter in his long reach to the head and body, and sap the American's strength.

Taylor, a boxer of consummate skill, who was unbeaten in 34 fights, discovered the classic old boxing adage that you can run, but you cannot hide.

He ran most effectively in the early stages, and counter-punched with extreme skill, but not enough strength to worry young Barry.

And when the champion

Demolition job in eight rounds began to cut him off at the corners and get closer in, there were only two possibilities — that he quit, or be knocked down for the first time in his professional career.

The drama of the fight didn't end with the raising of McGuigan's hand, however.

Fully five minutes after the fight had ended, Taylor, who had been walking around the ring amid the tumultuous celebrations, dousing himself with bottles of water, suddenly stumbled and collapsed by the ropes.

Seeing this, McGuigan burst into tears, but Taylor was soon on his feet again. Apparently he had been struck down by a combination of exhaustion, disappointment and the sheer relentless atmosphere of the occasion.

He was cheered like a hero by the 7,000 crowd as he put on his gown and left the ring.

It was a solid right to the chin by McGuigan at the end of round five that had signalled the wind of change.

Suddenly the American's strength began to sap, worsened by the body punches that took such a terrible toll in the seventh and eighth rounds.

He was shaking his head as he went to his stool after a one-way barrage in the eighth. His manager tried to entice him, but he would have none of it and the towel came in.

A most awkward opponent

BARRY McGUIGAN admitted after his successful defence of the world featherweight boxing title that challenger Bernard Taylor was the most awkward fighter he had ever met.

"I don't think I hit him with half the punches I threw. But then a right to the body almost broke him in two. It was just about the only one that was delivered properly and caught him properly. He was very slippery and hard to hit. Remember, he hasn't been beaten in 499 amateur fights and none as a professional.

Never at any stage did I feel he would get on top. I would have liked to have had one more minute with him and I guarantee he would have ended up horizontal. I was told to bang him in low and he was gone. It was an accumulation of punches which wore him down. I was only just beginning and I would have preferred to finish the fight in the middle of a round.

I said all along I didn't intend being a flash in the pan. I intend to be around for a while."

Asked if this was his last fight in Belfast, McGuigan, looking towards manager Barney Eastwood, was non-committal.

"If it's financially feasible to box here, then fair enough. But unfortunately the King's Hall only holds 6,400. When and where I fight next is up to Mr Eastwood. I would prefer never to fight anywhere but Belfast.

These people here have always supported me from the word go. I have fanatical support in these islands, but it looks as if I am going to have to travel."

QUALITY football missing from the TV screens is frustrating and infuriating Watford manager Graham Taylor.

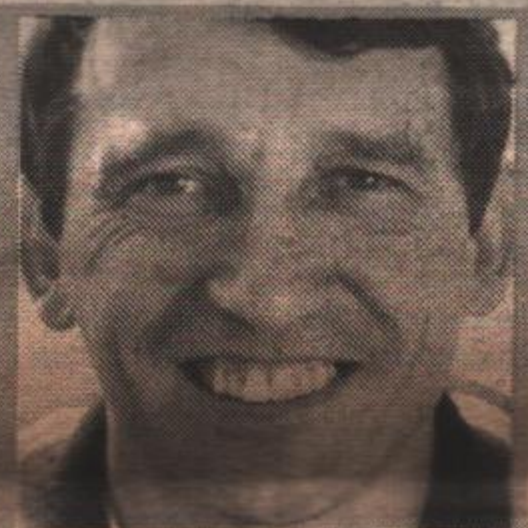

He only wishes that Saturday morning's 'very fierce and competitive game' against Chelsea could have been seen by fans up and down the country.

"I don't think people could have taken their eyes off the pitch once today," he said after the 3-1 win at Vicarage Road.

He is demanding a speedy reconciliation between the TV companies and football authorities over what matches go out live and those which are recorded for highlights.

"There were TV cameras here today, but only people

It's part of our soccer tradition says Taylor outside this country are watching our soccer," said Taylor.

"Soccer in this country is geared to traditions like 3p.m. kick-offs and football on TV. If there are any personality clashes amongst the negotiators, it's about time they recognised this fact. Someone should knock their heads together."

The brilliance of England winger John Barnes and the bravery of former England man Luther Blissett combined to give Watford their fifth straight home win. It knocked Chelsea out of second spot in the tables.

Watford should have been on top after ten minutes, but Nigel Callaghan's penalty chance was fired wide from the spot after a Colin Pates push on Barnes.

From that point on Chelsea ran the game, being denied only by Steve Sherwood's erratic goalkeeping in his first game since March.

Barnes produced the turning point — in the 48th minute of the first half!

Well into injury time, he exploited a slip by Darren Wood at full-back to curl a 20-yard shot into the top corner for his first goal in nine games.

Watford came under pressure again in the second half and were not helped when Blissett scooped a clear-cut chance over the bar in the 55th minute. But two minutes later he threw himself courageously into Colin West's centre to head his fourth goal of the season.

Eight minutes later Chelsea deservedly pulled themselves back into the game when Doug Rougvie came up to powerfully head home Mike Hazard's corner.

But in the 76th minute, Watford guaranteed a healthy jump in the table with one of their classic corners.

Callaghan's gently flighted cross was flicked on at the near post by Barnes for Steve Terry to convert his second goal of the season with a header.

FOREST FIGHTBACK

STRIKER Neil Webb became a goalkeeper on Saturday in an attempt to halt what looked like a West Ham wipe-out at Upton Park.

During two early goals in the first 12 minutes, Nottingham Forest's keeper Hans Segers damaged ligaments in his left knee and Webb stepped in.

It looked all over bar the shouting, but Brian Clough was doing some of that and his team responded magnificently in the second half to have the Hammers desperately hanging on to a 4-2 scoreline at the close.

Part of the strategy was Webb's decision to take the jersey and gloves. He said: 'I reckoned it was better if I went in rather than Johnny (Metgod) or our other volunteer Ian Bowyer.

Revival despite injury

'I've no real experience of goalkeeping, just one game as a schoolboy when we lost 6-4, but I figured it was easier for our system if the other two stayed out and I went in.

'I expected a lot more long distance shots than I got and in the end I was happy with the way it went. I didn't have to do too much, but never again. It's a different game when you're the last man.'

Segers was injured in the build-up to Tony Cottee's first goal, after seven minutes, and his leg injury led to a mis-hit goal kick which gave Frank McAvennie the second five minutes later, laid on by Cottee.

Webb was still adjusting to his new role when McAvennie turned in a 20th-minute cross from Ward for his tenth goal of the season.

It was Metgod and Bowyer, though, who led the splendid Forest fight-back, and though Alan Dickens made it 4-0 after 59 minutes, the second half belonged to the visitors.

Their reward was goals from Metgod (60 minutes) and Nigel Clough (70 minutes) and a rousing reception from the east London crowd at the final whistle.

Portsmouth plough on PORTSMOUTH, who missed out on promotion last year by goal difference, continue to make the running in the Second Division. They demolished nearest rivals Blackburn 3-0, with former England striker Mick Channon scoring his first goal for the club after seven minutes.

■ OLDHAM took over second place with a 1-0 win at Millwall, Ron Futchers goal giving them their first win in London for three years.

Rangers' double disgrace

RANGERS tumbled from the top of the Scottish Premier League amid disgrace on Saturday. Soccer chiefs are certain to launch a full-scale probe into incidents on and off the pitch.

The home side had two men sent off in a bad-tempered match at Ibrox, where Aberdeen won 3-0.

Rival fans also showed their tempers spilling onto the pitch and Edinburgh referee George Smith took both teams off for four minutes.

There were 19 arrests inside the ground and 29 after the game.

The upset allowed Celtic to take over the leadership with a 2-0 win against Dundee.

Rangers' Hugh Burns was ordered off in the 29th minute for a challenge on John Hewitt and seconds later Alex McLeish put the champions ahead with a header from Hewitt's free kick.

Captain Craig Patterson followed Burns into the tunnel after 35 minutes for a body check on Neale Cooper and Rangers were given another quick set-back when Billy Stark scored three minutes later.

In the 80th minute Hewitt cleverly lobbed keeper Nicky Walker.

Brian McClair and Maurice Johnston scored first half goals for Celtic who now top the League with 12 points, one ahead of Aberdeen and Rangers.

■ HIBERNIAN picked up the first points of the season by beating Motherwell 1-0 with a goal by Ally Brazil after 51 minutes, but they remain bottom of the league.

■ ST MIRREN defeated Dundee United with a last-minute penalty from Gardner Spiers.

■ HEARTS took a similar knock, David Lloyd scoring the only goal of the game for Clydebank after 88 minutes.

It's torture at Highbury

ARSENAL 0 NEWCASTLE 0

BY MATTHEW NUGENT

ARSENAL appear to have found a new way of torturing their long-suffering fans.

On Saturday they whetted their appetites for the opening ten minutes — and then left them waiting to have it sated for the rest of the afternoon. They were leaving well before the final whistle.

While other clubs are making an effort to entertain and thus hold onto their dwindling support, the Gunners seem hell bent on losing their fans by playing negative football.

The only bright light on the horizon after this latest fiasco was the performance of 18-year-old David Rocastle who made his debut in midfield for the injured Stewart Robson.

Rocastle impressed enough to suggest that he may force his way into the side on a permanent basis before long.

Indeed, there are several senior players who will be watching their backs over the next few months to see how the youngster progresses.

He provided the one moment of real excitement in the penalty area when he connected with a Paul Davis pass only to see his shot come back off the up-right.

Newcastle will have been happy with the point after their last two away games when they conceded eight goals and picked up no points.

'Our away form has let us down badly since we won promotion last year,' said centre-half Jeff Clarke.

'That has been down to our defence in most instances but we are beginning to tighten up at the back and that played a big part in picking up a point here,' Clarke added.

Newcastle seem equipped to stay in Division One for another season at least, despite being on almost everyone's list of relegation probabilities back in August.

Lack of ready cash has meant that manager Ian McFaul has been forced to blood youngsters. This policy has paid handsome dividends.

The most notable of these has been Paul Gascoigne, an 18-year-old midfielder from Gateshead with limitless amounts of talent.

On Saturday he showed enough touches to suggest that the World Cup 1990 could be the place where he will show off his skills.

■ IRELAND's Frank O'Mara surprised the star-studded field and won the 5th Avenue Mile in New York on Saturday.

United on ten-terhooks for record

MARK HUGHES kept the Manchester United bandwagon rolling with his seventh goal of the season to give Ron Atkinson's side their tenth successive win.

The Welsh international striker's 75th minute effort against Southampton, before a season's best 52,449 Old Trafford crowd, enabled United to equal a 77-year record.

Now they are just one short of equalling Tottenham's 11-game 100-per-cent start to the 1960-1961 season.

Hughes came to United's rescue at a time when they looked as if they would never break through a stubborn Southampton rear-guard. It could have been easier had not Peter Shilton thwarted them by saving a 62nd-minute penalty from England colleague Bryan Robson — the keeper's second such feat in successive games.

■ LIVERPOOL are looking over the leader's shoulders, though United are still nine points clear.

Player-manager Kenny Dalglish and his men were far too good for Tottenham as they took sweet revenge for Spurs' victory at Anfield last season, their first there since 1912.

Mark Lawrenson scored the only goal of the first half — a searing header — and even though John Chiedozie equalised just after the break, Ian Rush restored Liverpool's advantage and a brace of penalties by Danish international Jan Molby emphasised their superiority.

■ EVERTON, the champions, were held to a goalless draw by the much-improved Aston Villa.

■ BIRMINGHAM's bid to maintain the Midlands challenge faltered with yet another indifferent away display, beaten 3-1 at Queens Park Rangers. Leroy Rosenior scored on his first full game for the home team.

■ WEST BROMWICH and manager Johnny Giles are still facing their grimmest period. They slumped to their ninth successive defeat, beaten 3-0 by Coventry and had Steve Hunt sent off.

■ LEICESTER eased their worries thanks to a late winner by substitute Alan Smith against fellow strugglers Ipswich.

■ OXFORD achieved their second win of the season through a John Trewick penalty at home to Manchester City.

■ SHEFFIELD Wednesday's Brian Marwood scored twice and Mick Harford added another to pip Luton 3-2.

Strike me, who is the goalie?

West Brom play for manager's life

GILES ON THE RACK

BY A SOCCER CORRESPONDENT

WEST BROMWICH could be playing for the future of manager Johnny Giles in Wednesday's Full Members' Cup clash at Second Division Brighton.

Albion's 3-0 defeat at Coventry was their ninth successive League setback, the worst run in the club's history.

Giles has been unlucky with injuries, but that excuse did not hold up at Highfield Road where new signing Mickey Thomas gave away a penalty. Giles said yesterday: 'I can't put a time scale on it — we just have to keep working at it to attempt to get it right.'

Chairman Sid Lucas said: 'We are obviously seriously concerned at our situation.'

'But it would be unfair to judge the team on the one match. It was the first time we have fielded a full-strength side since the opening game.'

'Let's see what happens in the Full Members' Cup at Brighton.'

Asked whether defeat would mean the end of Giles' 20-month reign, Lucas replied: 'Not necessarily.'

But with one point from ten games — an opening day home draw against newcomers Oxford United — and a slender 1-0 Milk Cup first leg win over Division Four Port Vale, Giles needs a dramatic change in fortunes to survive.

It is vastly different from the former Republic of Ireland international's first spell at the Hawthorns.

Guided

As player-manager, he guided them to promotion from the Second Division in 1976 and the following year they qualified for a place in Europe.

He resigned in May 1977 when he was refused a greater say in the running of the club.

He returned in February 1984 and his opening game resulted in a shock FA Cup fifth round defeat by Third Division Plymouth.

Last season they finished 12th having at one stage gone eight games without a win.

■ BOBBY CAMPBELL, former Portsmouth manager and QPR coach, flies to Kuwait today to take charge of the Qadsia Sporting Club. He succeeds former Yugoslav team manager Miljan Miljanovic.

GOALMOUTH CONFERENCE . . . Injured Hans Segers stands forlornly on the left as Ian Bowyer, Neil Webb and Johnny Metgod decide who will replace him in goal after a 12th-minute injury. Eventually it was striker Webb, who left Bowyer and Metgod to inspire Nottingham Forest's revival at Upton Park on Saturday — see report, page 15.

Hull KR just keep record

CHAMPIONS Hull KR yesterday maintained their 100-per-cent start to the season — but only just. It took a super dropped goal by second row forward Andy Kelly a minute from time to edge them to a 19-18 win over Wigan.

Kelly's effort — his first for the club — came as a welcome relief to Rovers, who had Chris Burton sent off on the stroke of half time, then saw Wigan come back from 12-4 behind to lead 16-14.

Australian stand-off Cliff Lyons and centre Tony Currie scored vital tries as Leeds also maintained their 100-per-cent record with a 22-16 win at Salford. It also ended the home side's unbeaten run at The Willows.

KR's Humberside rivals Hull, who, inspired by James Leuluai, inflicted St Helens' first home defeat since February with a 35-22 beating.

Castleford maintained their challenge by beating Swinton 28-16, but there was a scare for Widnes, who lost a 26-10 lead over Bradford Northern before edging home 28-26.

Oldham scrum half Paddy Kirwan inspired his side to their first win of the season, as they came back from 12-0 down to beat Warrington 26-20, while player-coach Chris Anderson engineered Halifax's first win 34-17 at York.

Wakefield, the Second Division leaders, handed Workington their first defeat of the season 25-4, and lead by a point from Whitehaven, the Division's only 100-per-cent side.

That record stayed intact, but they were given a fright by bottom of the table Carlisle, who led 10-4 at one stage before tries by Tony Solari and Jeff Simpson enabled Whitehaven to come through 17-10.

TIRED END TO GOLF SUCCESS

TWO VERY tired players made for a lacklustre end to the world matchplay championship at Wentworth yesterday.

Severiano Ballesteros did not have to play well to retain the title when he scored a six and five victory over West German Bernhard Langer.

At best he was two under par for the 31 holes which gave him his fourth and the biggest final win in the history of the event stretching back to 1964.

The previous best was a six and four victory by Gary Player over Jack Nicklaus in 1966.

After suffering from 'flu for the past fortnight, Langer got out of his sick bed to play the tournament and did wonders to reach the final.

But it took its toll. 'I was tired all day, but then we both were,' he said. 'It was not bad luck; I just played badly. When you do not feel so good you cannot concentrate and I couldn't even see the line of the putts.'

Strong

'I am usually pretty strong, but 36 holes a day after the 'flu caught up with me. I was a lot over par and you cannot win doing that. But it was not an embarrassment for me because all the 7,000 crowd out there know you can shoot 65 one day and 75 the next. If we knew why, though, we would be perfect.'

Ballesteros commented: 'I don't feel as if I beat Langer, but someone else. I have played with him many times and that's the worst I have seen him play.'

'I wasn't all that great this week because I am tired too after giving everything in the Ryder Cup, winning in Barcelona and then coming straight here. But I played good when it was needed.'

It was Sevv's fifth victory of the season following successes in New Orleans, France, Ireland and Barcelona. The £50,000 first prize takes his world-wide winnings this season to £295,000 and he has amassed £205,000 from this tournament in the past ten years.

SEVERIANO BALLESTEROS . . . Exhausted by long season

'This is probably the best season there has ever been for European golf,' he said. 'We won the US Masters, the Open, the Ryder Cup and now the Matchplay.'

His aim is to equal Gary Player's record of five world matchplay titles and set a new best with this third successive victory next year.

Langer's consolation cheque of £25,000 takes his season's winnings to £475,000, more than any other player in the world after victories in the Australian Masters, US Masters, Heritage Classic, German Open and European Open.

Cricket effigy burned

ABOUT 100 Australian anti-apartheid demonstrators burned an effigy of a cricket player outside a Melbourne football club on Saturday where Kim Hughes was defending the 'rebel' tour of South Africa next month.

Speaking at a lunch attended for 700 sports enthusiasts, Hughes claimed the South African cricket authorities provided equal opportunities 'despite race, colour and creed'.

The protestors were led by trade union official John Halfpenny who said Hughes' trip 'aligns him with the bloodied hands of the Botha regime'.

Australian Test opener, the South African born Kepler Wessels, says he is considering legal action over repeated newspaper claims that he had helped to organise the tour.

'I am totally opposed to apartheid and have said so publicly many times — that's one of the main reasons why I left South Africa in the first place,' he said.
