On Monday, dockers marched for the second time into the walled area of Derry, defying a government ban. They clashed with steel-helmeted police and stone-throwing factory girls. On Tuesday, 200 dockers and 100 factory girls staged a token strike and also marched in the walled area.

13,000 city walls

DOCKERS and FACTORY GIRLS marched this week in support of the campaign for civil rights in the Northern Ireland police strike.

On Monday, dockers marched for the second time into the walled area of Derry, defying a government ban. They clashed with steel-helmeted police and stone-throwing factory girls. On Tuesday, 200 dockers and 100 factory girls staged a token strike and also marched in the walled area.

The girls chanted "RUC" and "You Nazidetails" and the RUC is the Royal Ulster Constabulary, the strong-armed police who beat marchers last October.

The women are preparing to march in the Derry traditional meeting place in the city.

At 11.45 this morning, 700 dockers stopped work and marched through the walled area to their union headquarters. They instructed union officials to tell Harold Wilson that they demand an end to police brutality in Derry.

Stones and bottles

Late on Monday night, as the girls on the Shift left the office, the workers' club, there were several bottles thrown by workers in the nearby factory.

Two girls who were hospitalised to stitches in wounds. A number of other girls suffered minor injuries.

Socialists moved into the Protestant working-class area and spoke to people about the campaign for civil rights and to end the occupation of the Catholic majority in Derry.

In fact, although Greenough himself specifically mentioned 378 houses by 1970 as the target, and the fantastic speed with which these fig-ur-e built blocks can be erected, and the large number of dwellings they incorporate is bound to give a great boost to house-building.

According to the GLC, the unsatisfactory system-built blocks, however, may be folded in other parts of the country.

Building resources previously devoted to house building will have to be diverted to the construction of large scale retail work.

The new building blocks are designed to have a large number of rooms in each block, thus increasing the size of the blocks as erected will take longer-see requirements of the new safety requirements.

In other words the "new" building site will be a never-ending process of new building blocks in ruins.

The workers are demanding that the government guarantee the provision of new houses for poor people in a government-aided scheme.

Severely disappointed by what has been achieved, they are now planning to take part in a nationwide campaign to force the government to guarantee the provision of new houses for poor people in a government-aided scheme.

That despite a steady increase in housing costs, the government has done little to help the workers.

The government has increased the rate of house building by 50% since 1970, but has not built enough houses to meet the demand.

new way of squeezing more profit

Labour supports mergers that cause heavy redundancy and losses of employees in the MHD. Pictures show Westland AEEC workers protesting at the factory. The strikes, which occurred last year, are still in progress. The unions, however, attempts to impose cuts to both management and union officials have been strenuously resisted by shop stewards. At the big Vickers-P�nningham Yorks those bitter dollar changes, which totalled S.8 million, have already been made. The management, which is the largest of all three companies, was able to withstand the threat to the workers. The package deal: 1.5% basic rate, 0.5% for each of the three years, keep all over-the-year changes, and for the final year an additional 1%.

The basic rate for the workers, however, will be increased, and the company will also provide a package of benefits, including an additional 1% for the last year.

RESISTED

A similar proposal has been made in two other companies, but the union members have been resisting it. In many engineering factories, the workers have been forced to accept these changes

After Czechoslovakia, will Russia crush the other heretics?

by TERRY BULL

AFTER Russia's brutal suppression of Czechoslovakia, the heretics of the Eastern Bloc are being smothered with the cold blast of Russia's displeasure.

While Sovietism, whose westward-pointing trade relations and general policies have been closely watched in foreign affairs, has earned the Kremlin's disfavor, it has been nothing more than a warm-up for the main event. Yugo-slavia has remained defiant as it continues to work with its traditional supporter in Europe, Belgium.

President Tito, whose acceptance by Khrushchev seems to have reassured Moscow, was allowed to fly into Belgrade from Moscow last week.

While the West has been predicting that Yugoslavia is about to fall, the reports from Moscow are that it is still in the hands of the faithful.

Yugoslavia, which has its own problems—slow growth rate and discontent among workers who are finding that the economic miracle of the Marshall Plan is not materializing—are again proof of the Kremlin's determination to crush the spread of liberal ideas.

The first link in the chain is the show trial of Vukovics and the other leaders of the pro-NATO group last week. The trial itself is proof that the Kremlin means business.

Finally, a letter to the Moscow daily Zavtra, which expresses sympathy for the cause of free speech, is reported to have been rejected by the Russian government.

Condemnation

Yugoslavia is in the most exposed position of all, followed by Bulgaria and the USSR, which is already in a political state of emergency.

While Bulgaria is the next to be hit, it is clear that the Yugoslav government has no intention of giving in.

An armed militia has been created in some districts and military units have been called up in readiness for any eventuality.

The Russians who were not representative in the Belgrade trials can now face the consequences of their actions.

Gears of war

The message to the world is clear: Russia will not tolerate dissent.

To understand the crisis in Eastern Europe, it is necessary to consider the structure of the economy and the political system.

The Eastern European economies are based on a centrally-planned system, with the state owning almost all the means of production.

The government controls the economy through a network of state enterprises and state farms.

The state also controls the distribution of goods and services, and the prices of most goods are fixed by the state.

The government also controls the media, with state-run television and radio networks providing the only sources of news.

The Eastern European countries are also members of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (Comecon), a political and economic organization established by the Soviet Union in 1949.

The main purpose of Comecon is to coordinate the economic activities of its member states, and to promote economic development.

The council is made up of representatives of the governments of the member states, and is chaired by the Soviet Union.

The council meets regularly to discuss economic matters, and to coordinate economic policies.

The council also has an executive committee, which is responsible for implementing the decisions of the council.

The council has been criticized by some economists for being too slow in implementing economic reforms.

The Eastern European countries are also members of the European Free Trade Association (EFTA), a political and economic organization established by the European Union in 1948.

The main purpose of EFTA is to promote free trade and economic cooperation among its member states.

CZECH STUDENTS OPPOSE SELL-OUT

As 50,000 students begin a three-day strike in Prague on Monday, the pattern of domination established since the Russian invasion of 1968 is clear. The last vestiges of resistance to the Russian demands are crumbling.

The liberation of students from the haphazardness within the ruling elite forced both sides to act quickly to realize their positions from the mass of the day-to-day students. The Czech student section, led by lieutenant Kupet, fought for freedom and reform.

The majority of the students are in support of the Communist Party, although the opposition to the right wing that dominates the government is strong.

The CP policy is not so much advocated as possible benefits in economic terms but possibly in the left wing of the GLC.

But current leaders like George Smith, George Lowden, Brian Dowler and Len O'Callaghan (of the GLC) have been turned into left-wing platforms.

The International Socialism programme is very powerful, not only by the usual, events. That this year

There will be official support for all students who ask for recognition. Payment in full of £17.11s. 8d for craftsmen and $9 for labourers must be demanded on the day and that fight demands a few.

The management withdrew recognition for eight weeks and on the last day of their first contract they said that if the recognition did not prove successful, they would withdraw recognition. The strike lasted a meeting on Saturday morning the highest proportion of management and 30% of the workers were involved. Their demand of £1 was unmet. Their response was that if the management had demanded they have the last day of the contract the day before the meeting met by an immediate increase of 20% in March.
