by MICHAEL KIDRON

IT'S NOT THE END, nor is it anywhere near the end. But the system did lurk noticeably last week, and it looks as if this time it was a lurk to be reckoned with.

Political Europe was wracked into line with economic realities. German Chancellor Chancellor Churchill-ovala has been firmly tossed under the Russian ice-pack.

But so has the working-class map of Europe changed. From now on, despite the clash to be expected and inevitable, the future of Europe is far more in the hands of the Germans and the French than it was in the hands of the Russians.

The crisis of confidence goes deep. Even in the French working class, there is a sense that the system is in trouble. The working class is not the only one to be affected. The crisis of confidence is also evident in the system itself. The French have come to realize that they are not as secure as they once believed. The system is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the economy. Despite the boom in recent years, the economy is not as strong as it once appeared. The boom has been accompanied by a rise in inflation and a decrease in productivity. The economy is not as healthy as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the political scene. The governments of the European countries are not as strong as they once were. The political parties are not as strong as they once were. The political system is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the social scene. The working class is not as secure as it once believed. The middle class is not as secure as it once believed. The whole society is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the international scene. The European countries are not as powerful as they once were. The European Union is not as strong as it once seemed. The world is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the economic scene. The European countries are not as prosperous as they once were. The European economy is not as healthy as it once seemed. The world economy is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the political scene. The governments of the European countries are not as strong as they once were. The political parties are not as strong as they once were. The political system is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the social scene. The working class is not as secure as it once believed. The middle class is not as secure as it once believed. The whole society is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the international scene. The European countries are not as powerful as they once were. The European Union is not as strong as it once seemed. The world is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the economic scene. The European countries are not as prosperous as they once were. The European economy is not as healthy as it once seemed. The world economy is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the political scene. The governments of the European countries are not as strong as they once were. The political parties are not as strong as they once were. The political system is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the social scene. The working class is not as secure as it once believed. The middle class is not as secure as it once believed. The whole society is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the international scene. The European countries are not as powerful as they once were. The European Union is not as strong as it once seemed. The world is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the economic scene. The European countries are not as prosperous as they once were. The European economy is not as healthy as it once seemed. The world economy is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the political scene. The governments of the European countries are not as strong as they once were. The political parties are not as strong as they once were. The political system is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the social scene. The working class is not as secure as it once believed. The middle class is not as secure as it once believed. The whole society is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the international scene. The European countries are not as powerful as they once were. The European Union is not as strong as it once seemed. The world is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the economic scene. The European countries are not as prosperous as they once were. The European economy is not as healthy as it once seemed. The world economy is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the political scene. The governments of the European countries are not as strong as they once were. The political parties are not as strong as they once were. The political system is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the social scene. The working class is not as secure as it once believed. The middle class is not as secure as it once believed. The whole society is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the international scene. The European countries are not as powerful as they once were. The European Union is not as strong as it once seemed. The world is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the economic scene. The European countries are not as prosperous as they once were. The European economy is not as healthy as it once seemed. The world economy is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the political scene. The governments of the European countries are not as strong as they once were. The political parties are not as strong as they once were. The political system is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the social scene. The working class is not as secure as it once believed. The middle class is not as secure as it once believed. The whole society is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the international scene. The European countries are not as powerful as they once were. The European Union is not as strong as it once seemed. The world is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the economic scene. The European countries are not as prosperous as they once were. The European economy is not as healthy as it once seemed. The world economy is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the political scene. The governments of the European countries are not as strong as they once were. The political parties are not as strong as they once were. The political system is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the social scene. The working class is not as secure as it once believed. The middle class is not as secure as it once believed. The whole society is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the international scene. The European countries are not as powerful as they once were. The European Union is not as strong as it once seemed. The world is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the economic scene. The European countries are not as prosperous as they once were. The European economy is not as healthy as it once seemed. The world economy is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the political scene. The governments of the European countries are not as strong as they once were. The political parties are not as strong as they once were. The political system is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the social scene. The working class is not as secure as it once believed. The middle class is not as secure as it once believed. The whole society is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the international scene. The European countries are not as powerful as they once were. The European Union is not as strong as it once seemed. The world is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the economic scene. The European countries are not as prosperous as they once were. The European economy is not as healthy as it once seemed. The world economy is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the political scene. The governments of the European countries are not as strong as they once were. The political parties are not as strong as they once were. The political system is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the social scene. The working class is not as secure as it once believed. The middle class is not as secure as it once believed. The whole society is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the international scene. The European countries are not as powerful as they once were. The European Union is not as strong as it once seemed. The world is not as stable as it once seemed.

The crisis of confidence is also evident in the economic scene. The European countries are not as prosperous as they once were. The European economy is not as healthy as it once seemed. The world economy is not as stable as it once seemed.
Wilson’s emphasis on growth as a bigger rake-off for the family over £500,000, paid by the company, and 10 percent, while family paid only 10 percent.

OBSTINA

Finally, the welfare policies, which have not been split personally, are the result of a broader family. The family allows the spread of welfare services to the least cost of living, and the state has the obstacles to the benefits of the welfare services.

Prescription is often recommended to control medicine and to prevent the use of medicines that are effective in workers.

EFFICIENCY

Labour has required the greater efficiency of the workers by cutting the costs of production. In some cases, this has been done to the detriment of the workers, and in other cases, it has been done by the state. However, the result is that the workers have been exploited and the benefits of their work are not being shared.

Wilson has directed his efforts towards reducing the costs of production and increasing the profits of his companies. This has been done in order to reduce the costs of living and to increase the profits of the companies. The result has been that the workers have been exploited and the benefits of their work are not being shared.

SUITABLE FOR THE JOB

Said TRN

The situation is not so good for the workers. The government is not doing enough to protect the workers. The workers are losing their jobs and their wages are not being increased.

Men were not recruited for this kind of work. "We want more control over the workers." The workers are working for free and the government is not doing enough to protect them.

COMM CHRI, in crisis, the traditional way of working in a capitalist economy is being challenged. The government is trying to do something about it, but it is not enough. The workers are being exploited and the benefits of their work are not being shared.

Another victim of the class war

CMM CHRI, in crisis, the traditional way of working in a capitalist economy is being challenged. The government is trying to do something about it, but it is not enough. The workers are being exploited and the benefits of their work are not being shared.

Where there’s life there’s hope

END POLITICAL for the left reforms of the House of Commons, the future of the country and the future of the workers. The Labour government is trying to do something about it, but it is not enough. The workers are being exploited and the benefits of their work are not being shared.

In the current climate of uncertainty, the role of the House of Commons is critical. The Labour government is trying to do something about it, but it is not enough. The workers are being exploited and the benefits of their work are not being shared.

In the current climate of uncertainty, the role of the House of Commons is critical. The Labour government is trying to do something about it, but it is not enough. The workers are being exploited and the benefits of their work are not being shared.
In London's slumland, where class not colour draws the battle lines...

by CONSTANCE LEVER

ENOCHE POWELL and his friends have given us the picture of a strange battleground.

On one side stand the ordinary, decent, patriotic, British working men, who know about the ballet from their own experience; on the other are a weird gathering of long-haired students, Hampstead intellectuals and archbishops, who have never had to live with them and who preach revolutionism from their comfortable ivory towers.

The writers can never have been near Kilburn or Islington or Lambeth, with their shops windows full of cards saying, "Reasons: No colour, no children, no blacks, no government only."

That dear old persecuted landlady should have looked so happy she was singing for the last time, and if a black man was there, to know that he was being told to leave her home, to be banished from the land.

The papers have reported two landladies who turned white man in labour on to the road in order to cause a public disturbance. What they were saying is a mystery.

The landlady's family, that she did not live in a fine flat provided by her employer for whom she had worked over six hours a week to pay the rent. When the black child was born they were never seen again.

The child's father had kept the country, but a West Indian family, former friends of his, were so ashamed of his behaviour that they invited her to spend weekends with them, tried to help her and supported her search for another flat.

Not so sure

People like Mrs. James.

Her father was killed in the British army and she was brought up in Jamaica to be a patriotic Britsher.

But when she got to London, she brings up her five small children to a two-room flat.

They are intelligent, polite, but have all been brought up to live in a flat.

Her year old girl was found choking to death from an umbrella in her bed in a similar room.

Her husband is a skilled carpenter. Her name has been down for years as willing to go to any town, and testify for her.

The police and council officials refused to interfere months after the death, and the family were forced to fight for their rights themselves, and no one would take any steps to deal with the case.

The case is not an isolated one, but a typical example of the way in which the authorities ignore the complaints of coloured people.

Join the International Socialists

Fracne: the struggle goes on by Tony Cliff and Ian Birchall 365d

Revolutionary socialist manifesto from a Polish prison by Kuron and Modzelewski 456d

all prices include postage

IS BOOK SERVICE 90 Mountview Road London N4

Please send further details of the meetings and activities of the international socialists to

Name

Address

L.D.T.
AEP LEADERS GIVE UP THE FIGHT

BY PAUL FOOT

IF you are glad they have accepted and the new Confederation will adopt the same attitude.

Mr. Mark's hopes were fulfilled. On Monday November 23, the Confederation Engineering Committee busily fell into line with the NET, the Transport and General Workers representatives.

Now, however, some reports that the government, who strongly supported the employers' demands during the agreement, is threatening to refer the agreement to the Prices and Incomes Board.

A mass meeting in the town hall tenants decided unanimously that the increase should not be paid. Some tenants said they would refuse the whole rent.

I finally agreed that a total rent strike should be held in the area in case of any further threats by the council. The meeting was called for next week. And the final time for action has arrived. The agreement is due to be carried out as the rent payment is due the following week.

DAUBED

Walls and public buildings have been daubed with the slogan "Not a penny more!" in protest at the decision of the council that "we can't pay!"

TENANTS are picketing rent offices on Tewkesbury and report that the local police have arrested the organisers of the tenants. A group of tenants have refused to pay the rent and are continuing their protest.

ROAD PROTEST

STUDENTS are fined

BY JOHN LAMBE

SWANSEA University students are waging a militant campaign to oppose the local authorities in an attempt to stop the Swansea Mumbles Road works.

As students daily picket the entrance to the main road (several times), they have blocked off the Mumbles Road for several hours. The police have been called in to stop the strike.

The students have formed a non-violent blocking of the road. The students are very angry and are determined to continue their protest for the road to remain unblocked.

Police threat to pickets

BY PAUL SMITH

COVENTRY - Police threatened to arrest student pickets who were blocking the road last night.

A hundred police have been out on the road for the past 24 hours, causing considerable traffic disruption.

Last Thursday, 20 students from the University of Birmingham mobilised by the Coventry University Union and the National Students Association joined the picket line.

No right

None of the pickets were refused entry to the university. The police threatened to arrest students who are阻成的.

Police threaten to arrest students who are blocking the road.

The police have warned the students that they will be arrested if they continue to block the road.

The students have decided to continue their protest until the road is unblocked.

The police have been called in to stop the strike.

ROAD PROTEST

STUDENTS are fined

BY JOHN LAMBE

SWANSEA University students are waging a militant campaign to oppose the local authorities in an attempt to stop the Swansea Mumbles Road works.

As students daily picket the entrance to the main road (several times), they have blocked off the Mumbles Road for several hours. The police have been called in to stop the strike.

The students have formed a non-violent blocking of the road. The students are very angry and are determined to continue their protest for the road to remain unblocked.

Police threat to pickets

BY PAUL SMITH

COVENTRY - Police threatened to arrest student pickets who were blocking the road last night.

A hundred police have been out on the road for the past 24 hours, causing considerable traffic disruption.

Last Thursday, 20 students from the University of Birmingham mobilised by the Coventry University Union and the National Students Association joined the picket line.

No right

None of the pickets were refused entry to the university. The police threatened to arrest students who are阻成的.

Police threaten to arrest students who are blocking the road.

The police have warned the students that they will be arrested if they continue to block the road.

The students have decided to continue their protest until the road is unblocked.

The police have been called in to stop the strike.

ROAD PROTEST

STUDENTS are fined

BY JOHN LAMBE

SWANSEA University students are waging a militant campaign to oppose the local authorities in an attempt to stop the Swansea Mumbles Road works.

As students daily picket the entrance to the main road (several times), they have blocked off the Mumbles Road for several hours. The police have been called in to stop the strike.

The students have formed a non-violent blocking of the road. The students are very angry and are determined to continue their protest for the road to remain unblocked.