FORD WORKERS have won a partial victory against the combined attacks of the employers and the government.

Never before has Mrs. Castle tried to justify the settlement, which has breached her incomes policy and will encourage other groups of workers to follow the Ford lead.

Nevertheless, damaging concessions have been made and the workers must continue to resist them on the factory floor. The penalty clauses are by no means as severe as the model agreement and the handshake concessions pose a threat to rank and file militancy and must be fought.

The government have established the principles of penalties, a principle that other employers will be quick to adopt. Ford's concessions amount to a reinforcement of the employers' determination to reduce the power of the trade union and to the individual worker, which would have encouraged blacklegging in strikes, have gone, along with the increased demand for 21 days strike action.

The union negotiators accepted that full holiday bonuses would be paid only if workers refrain from 'unconstructive' activity. The section on strike resolution is therefore a sellout.

SMASH THE DIVISIONS

Workers are the only power to smash the divisions the agreement attempts to create between workers in different sections of the plant. The struggle is only beginning. It will take us in their own militant class organizations.

The strike has raised the question of the split between the trade union and the trade union officials. These are officials like Cannon, Young and Kesley who have a strong tradition of defending the interests of the employers. In the present situation they would effectively surrender the strike to the employers.

Hugh Scallon and Jack Jones are quite different. They are responsible for the strike and have shown they are prepared to smash the employers. We must help them.

This will not, however, be enough. The struggle must carry on beyond the official strike, but only after the rank and file have taken over the initiative. Their unions have negotiated production deals elsewhere in which, in a number of cases, production is below union norms. The struggle is only beginning.

What Ford shows is that the workers, relying only on themselves, can begin to resist the efforts of the employers. They are on their own and they must act.

ON THE ATTACK

The situation will not remain static. The essence of productivity deals is that they sell conditions and safeguards and the workers have to fight back long over periods. The bosses then try to manipulate the men as though they were cogs in a machine. If the shop floor is not organized to resist, conditions will rapidly deteriorate. The only way to fight effectively is to go on the attack.

The National Joint Negotiating Council is a dead body. It no longer represents the workers' interests. The workers must assert their own present and in control of all negotiations.

The strike is a major step in the long run in a political one. It is clear that the destiny of the Ford management is to fight the workers. Only the joint employers' government is to fight the workers. Only by co-ordinating the efforts of the government to save their interests and the government, and especially the shop stewards, should engage in regular and wide-ranging political discussions and clarification of how the government's capitalist policies affects them specifically. As a step in that direction, Socialists will encourage and help any discussion group with information, and communication.

At stake is workers' power over the wage of the capital. Workers' interests and freedom from manipulation and exploitation.
Why fiddling with figures stops dressmen going bust by JANE MACINTOSH

A Socialist Britain would still require a large and diverse population. This could be done not only by the aid of foreigners, which may well be necessary, but also by the encouragement of a large number of people during the current period of peace and prosperity. But socialism to do so mean total loss. Everyone can be a choice, industry will again be able to provide some options.

RESONS

Fashion seems to suit the worker, and this is not just because of its working class. The work is a medium that can be used to manipulate the consumer. The fashion industry is one of the most basic industries in the world, with one of the lowest standards of living.

In the 1930s, it was thought that a dress could be made in less than a week. Now, it can take as long as three months, and with the increase in wage rates, it is becoming uneconomic to make a dress in any quantity.

BARGAIN

That a dress, which may be a bargain, probably costs about £3 for a woman. It may be made in any quantity, and can be done anything she can do. The dress is based on the fact that women have to work in this way, and this is what the government is trying to prevent.

In the 1930s, it was thought that a dress could be made in less than a week. Now, it can take as long as three months, and with the increase in wage rates, it is becoming uneconomic to make a dress in any quantity.

The government is trying to prevent this by putting restrictions on the number of dresses that can be made in a week. This is a way of preventing the industry from becoming competitive.

STAY IN AND FIGHT!

Militants must not abandon the struggle in the unions.

by TOM HILLIER

The growth of monopoly capitalism and the increasing centralization of industry has reduced parliament to the position of a rubber stamp for the employing class.

In spite of the hatred of the masses towards the Tory Party, the big boys of industry have benefited financially from the Industrial Reorganization Commission and the growth of the nationalized industries.

Accept rises

Unemployment rose and the Pitt and the Means government was created. Workers experimenting in the nationalized industries were forced to accept rises at the cost of their conditions through productivity deals.

The process of extending the trade union leaders in the nationalized industries is the same. Today the respected members of the TUC are accepted in the nationalized industries as the main wage-reducing bodies.

Real force

Although most of its demands were economic and they proposed a new trade union movement towards syndicalism, the class, that should have been powerful to fight for ideas, is no longer a powerful force.

The struggle for a new trade union movement is in many cases by the employers. But the problem is not only the employers. The problem is the employers and the workers.

The struggle for a new trade union movement is in many cases by the employers. But the problem is not only the employers. The problem is the employers and the workers.

American imperialism, in all its forms, is a threat to the working class. The vast majority of workers in the US are dependent on the US for their livelihood.

American imperialism, in all its forms, is a threat to the working class. The vast majority of workers in the US are dependent on the US for their livelihood.

Letters

The facts

The strike in 1969 was the result of the workers' demand for a better wage. The strike was supported by the Labour Party, and the government was forced to yield.

The strike in 1969 was the result of the workers' demand for a better wage. The strike was supported by the Labour Party, and the government was forced to yield.

The strike in 1969 was the result of the workers' demand for a better wage. The strike was supported by the Labour Party, and the government was forced to yield.
Only the overthrow of imperialism can win peace for Arabs and Jews
by MOSHE AVERNI

The scientist’s dilemma: Nazar grates Beirut in Cairo last week.

Profile: President Anwar Sadat of Egypt.

The expansionism of Israel

2. The actual border of Israel according to the armistice in 1949.

VICTORIOUS STRUGGLE

The self-sacrifice of the guerrillas will win the battle, and the real victory will be the liberation of the occupied Palestinian territories. The Palestinian people who seek to liberate their homeland are determined to fight and to win.

Unstable regimes

One of the main lessons of the conflict is that the Arab states in the Middle East are still under the influence of the French, who are exerting pressure to maintain their position. The French are playing a critical role in the Middle East, and their influence cannot be ignored.

In Vietnam

You may well wonder what role social and political issues play in the South Vietnamese Revolution. It is important to recognize that many issues are at play, including economic, social, and political factors. The Vietnamese revolution is a complex phenomenon, and understanding its dynamics requires a comprehensive analysis.

Notable

Until now, the two main organizations that have been active in the Middle East are the PLO and the Jewish organizations. Both have agreements of one kind or another with the Israeli government. They have not been interfering in their internal affairs. This is in contrast to the Middle East, where the Israeli government has not been interfering in the internal affairs of the Arab states.

We are grateful to Chris Anson for his insightful article on page 25.
Homeless evicted from empty house

From JIM SMITH

EDINBURGH: Police yesterday evicted a homeless family from a Parkside house which they had occupied for three days in an empty house in Whitehouse Court by the Edinburgh Squatters' Campsite.

The squatters are considering legal action against the police as a last case of their right to stay in the house, which was described by the police as "trespassing" in an empty house.

The police were supported by Edinburgh Housing Corporation and a group of local businessmen who had occupied the house in protest at the high cost of housing in the city. The house was occupied for four years by the family of a woman and her five children.

However, the police were not authorized to use force to evict the family. They were eventually forced to leave the house after a court order was obtained.

The police have promised to return to the house to enforce the eviction order.

The family had occupied the house in protest at the high cost of housing in the city. They had been told by the police that they would be evicted if they did not leave the house.

The family have been advised by the charity to seek legal advice.

Further details from Edinburgh Squatters' Campsite, 12 West Preston Street.

Police watch as squatters attacked

A YOUNG COUPLE called Karel and Svetlana, aged 27 and 28, respectively, have been arrested in Edinburgh for bashing two officers of the police who were trying to evict them from their home.

The couple were occupying the house in protest at the demolition of the building to make way for a new council estate. They were arrested after a confrontation with the police who were trying to evict them.

The police have promised to return to the house to enforce the eviction order.

The couple have been advised by the charity to seek legal advice. They have been living in the house for two years in protest at the demolition of the building to make way for a new council estate.

Further details from Edinburgh Squatters' Campsite, 12 West Preston Street.

Students' decisive conference

As students throughout the country face the end of this semester and the beginning of a new academic year, a number of students' groups are preparing for a decisive conference to discuss the future of the student movement.

At the conference, which is scheduled for this weekend, the students' representatives will discuss a variety of issues, including the role of the students in the political process, the development of the student movement, and the future of the student movement in the post-war era.

The conference is expected to be attended by representatives of the largest student groups across the country, including the National Union of Students, the National Union of Students in Scotland, and the National Union of Students in Wales.

The conference will be held at the University of Manchester, and is expected to attract a large number of students from across the country.

Further details from University of Manchester, Manchester 1.

Highly profitable con game

The Court Square Waterfall factory recently announced plans to expand its production of games of chance, including a new range of con games, which are expected to generate substantial profits for the company.

The company has been operating in the games of chance market for several years, and has been successful in developing a range of profitable games, including a new con game called "The Con Game of Chance," which is expected to generate significant profits for the company.

The company has promised to release details of the new con games in the coming weeks, and to provide further information on its plans for the expansion of the games of chance market.

Further details from Court Square Waterfall, Court Square, Waterfall.

Lack of evidence cited in court

A LACK OF EVIDENCE was cited in court today in the case of a man accused of murder.

The accused, known only as "A," was charged with the murder of a woman found dead in her home last week.

The police have been unable to find any evidence connecting the accused with the murder.

The trial will continue tomorrow, and the accused will be remanded in custody until then.

Further details from Court Square, Waterfall.

STUDENTS' DECISIONAL CONFERENCE

As students throughout the country face the end of this semester and the beginning of a new academic year, a number of students' groups are preparing for a decisive conference to discuss the future of the student movement.

At the conference, which is scheduled for this weekend, the students' representatives will discuss a variety of issues, including the role of the students in the political process, the development of the student movement, and the future of the student movement in the post-war era.

The conference is expected to be attended by representatives of the largest student groups across the country, including the National Union of Students, the National Union of Students in Scotland, and the National Union of Students in Wales.

The conference will be held at the University of Manchester, and is expected to attract a large number of students from across the country.

Further details from University of Manchester, Manchester 1.

Highly profitable con game

The Court Square Waterfall factory recently announced plans to expand its production of games of chance, including a new range of con games, which are expected to generate substantial profits for the company.

The company has been operating in the games of chance market for several years, and has been successful in developing a range of profitable games, including a new con game called "The Con Game of Chance," which is expected to generate significant profits for the company.

The company has promised to release details of the new con games in the coming weeks, and to provide further information on its plans for the expansion of the games of chance market.

Further details from Court Square Waterfall, Court Square, Waterfall.

Lack of evidence cited in court

A LACK OF EVIDENCE was cited in court today in the case of a man accused of murder.

The accused, known only as "A," was charged with the murder of a woman found dead in her home last week.

The police have been unable to find any evidence connecting the accused with the murder.

The trial will continue tomorrow, and the accused will be remanded in custody until then.

Further details from Court Square, Waterfall.