The growing activity by the Right, which the Labour organisation must seriously reconsider, should not alienate the new workers.
The initiative of Ford workers under the leadership of their stewards has resulted in an important victory even if it is in incomplete and short-term.

The company was forced to remove the worst penalty clauses which would have meant a six month's loss of sick pay, by the threat of a strike. Other firms where shop stewards' organizations are weak, employers will try to use the case of Ford to assert their own workers with penalty clauses.

The Ford workers have won the first round on penalty clauses. Although their determination would have more only if they are as well equipped by their victory to the second round against the remaining penalty clauses and the wage rates with minority car workers.

The struggle has been so successful that Peninsular leaders who normally oppose any kind of policy to be made by strong management. The Carman, Councillor Young, who are the proponents of the penalty clauses, is a disheartening for the members of the workforce. Peninsular, who carry out the measures that have never had introduced.

It is significant that only two months after the demonstration of Ford, Ford pact is returned for a second Ford pact. The Cudworth petition, which initiated in return to the...

Paves way

But because of its links with the national bargaining of the Ford, the government is to go as far in national bargaining as the employers would like. It is therefore the way for a future Tory government to attack the workers even more strongly.

The Ford government in the Ford dispute has been the incredible result of cutting the workers' wages. It is the foundation of the socialist capitalist firm.

The workers will demand from the government the national bargaining that is the demand of the economy and not national bargaining that is the demand of the economy.

The government's case is to appeal to the interests of the Ford, the government is also the government of the Ford workers.

The unions are to appeal to the interests of the Ford workers and to appeal to the interests of the Ford workers.

April 27 — why we're marching in 'apartheid town'...

from DAVE SPILSBURY

WOLVERHAMPTON - The Socialist Unity Movement (of which I am a member) has, in the past two months, been a force in the town. The group, which numbers about 50, has put up a strong showing in both local government elections and in recent protests. The group has also made a strong impression on local residents and businesses.

The SUMP appeals to workers and students to join in the struggle against apartheid and to fight for a better life for all.

The group has been active in giving support to striking miners in South Africa and in demanding the release of those imprisoned for their political beliefs.

Unity in struggle

The SUMP is a black-identified group that is working to build a strong movement for liberation and social justice. We are committed to the fight against colonialism and imperialism, and to the struggle for a democratic, socialist society.

We believe that the fight against apartheid is part of a broader struggle against oppression and exploitation. We are determined to fight for a world where all people are equal and free.

Our goal is to build a strong and united movement that can take on the forces of oppression and discrimination. We believe that only through unity and community can we achieve our goals.

We are committed to working with other groups and individuals who share our vision of a better world.

Defiant marchers shake Ulster Tories

From SEAN REED

THE NORTH of Ireland's biggest and most dramatic day of action in 20 years was organized in two short days without any major violence.

It was a day of triumph for Paddy Phelan, the Ulster Ulster Ulster Unionist politician and former minister for education, who was returned to power by a majority of over 10,000 votes.

In Derry, the 5000 marchers gathered on the banks of the Foyle and blocked the road to the London Bridge. The march ended with the burning of the Ulster flag.

The protest, called by the Ulster Unionist Party, was against the proposed Anglo-Irish Agreement.

"The people of Derry," said one of the marchers, "are prepared to fight for their rights and we will not be moved.

"We will continue to fight until our voices are heard by the British government."

Burnt Bill in Armagh

About 1500 workers at the Portadown factory, which makes the famous "Burnt Bill" cigarettes, went on strike after a dispute over wages.

"The workers are demanding a 10% wage increase," said one of the strikers. "We are fed up with the low pay."
