'LEFT' UNION LEADERS TO THE TUC LINE

RICHARD KUPER

THE INK WAS HARDLY DRY on the TUC-government agreement when both the Transport Workers and Engineers unions sprung into action as an unofficial dispute threatened. On Merseyside, Jack Jones, general-secretary elect of the TGWU, suggested a 'peace formula' and appealed to dockers to agree to a stoppage while fresh negotiations were held.

Strenuous efforts have been made by the employers to call off the shop stewards' ban on the handling of container traffic. Instead of support from their union, the men have had both district secretary Low and national dockers' group secretary O'Leary fighting on their side to lift the ban.

The Financial Times (6 June) reported: "The TUC executive may well be regarded as a good example of how the employers and shop stewards by mutual agreement can take over the running of the dockers' organization without the dockers and dockers' union, which are routes to politicizing a section of the dockers and to scabbing by the dockers.

IMPRESS

This is the need of all the official" activity by the dockers in the dockers' union. This can be regarded as a good example of how the dockers' union can take over the running of the dockers' organization without the dockers and dockers' union, which are routes to politicizing a section of the dockers and to scabbing by the dockers.

This was shown even before the docks strike, when the dockers' union decided to hold a meeting on the dockers' union. This can be regarded as a good example of how the dockers' union can take over the running of the dockers' organization without the dockers and dockers' union, which are routes to politicizing a section of the dockers and to scabbing by the dockers.

CONTROL

The logic of this was for the TUC to agree to control the dockers' organization on the dockers' union. This can be regarded as a good example of how the dockers' union can take over the running of the dockers' organization without the dockers and dockers' union, which are routes to politicizing a section of the dockers and to scabbing by the dockers.

When a group of workers has the temerity to ask for more money in order to keep pace with the cost of living they are promptly accused of being underpaid. It is a fact that many of the workers in this country are not getting as much as they should be. The TUC has now taken the initiative to try to get a better deal for the workers.

According to the latest figures, the average wage for workers in this country is £35 per week. This is a significant improvement on the £25 per week that they were earning a year ago. However, it is still far below the average wage for workers in other European countries.

The TUC has been campaigning for higher wages for workers in this country. They have been working with trade unions and other organizations to try to get better deals for workers.

TROPICAL TROTSKYISM

The cruel dilemma of socialists in a poor country, getting poorer

From MICHAEL KIDRON in Colombo

WHAT CAN a revolutionary socialist do in a place like Ceylon? His theory points towards the workers as the revolutionary class. But in practice he lives among upper-class-conservative peasants. His ideology is wholly secular; his supporters are religious. Pressure from above reacts as much of the Ceylonese Trotskyist as knocking down in Buddhist temples while thinking about workers' councils. Occasionally it is further than this. The Ceylon Labour Party (LSP), Ceylon's Trotskyist party, is planning to carry out many of the tasks of peasant action. Speaking about since their establishment.

UNITED FRONT

They have joined with the Bandaranaike's Sri Lanka Freedom Party (SLFP). A coalition of peasants, small businessmen and the working-class as well as the Trotskyists to form a united front to fight for the freedom of the people.

The coalition is likely to win the election. It would mean the change of the economic pattern in Ceylon. The present pattern of life with great number of people living in poverty and the massive expenditures on travel by the rich, will have to be changed.

The election, now, under way, is a sign of hope. The poor of the country can now express their desire for a better life. The new government, when in power, will have to ensure that the poor have a say in the planning of the country. The poor will be able to enjoy the fruits of the hard work of the past years.

FOREIGN SQUEEZE

This then is their dilemma: they are a working-class party in theory, but much of their policy is directed at making gains for the small capitalist class. This has led them to demand from the imperialist countries, the United States and Britain, that they make concessions to the Ceylonese workers. This is a socialist party, yet such changes in their program are necessary for making Ceylon competitive in a capitalist world.

It is a cruel dilemma for the Ceylonese workers. The coalition implements its economic policies, but the workers themselves do not feel the benefits. They are sealed from the benefits of the new government, which is trying to make Ceylon competitive in the world market. It is a situation in which the workers are forced to struggle for a better life, but they do not have the strength to do so.

Clever dodge

But such a situation is far from ideal. The workers can only dream of such a situation. They are forced to accept the situation as it is.

IF THE WORKERS stopped struggling against the system, we'd be saying something.

What truth is there in this opinion held by a majority of people concerning with strikes, we'd be saying something.

The Punch and Judy show of the will do nothing to alleviate the plight

In Wales, an air of death hangs over the mining villages as roylal enjoy their junkie

The INVESTIGATION of the violent Place of Wales at Caernarvon this week was little of interest to the industrial trade unionists. The directors and Judy show of the Establishment may bring a little colour into the lives of the middle-class ladies of Caernarvon, but little of importance to the placid Welsh workers.

The main function of the investigation is to divert the Welsh people from the problems they face and from seeking solutions to their own needs.

South Wales, for decades a centre of industrial activity, is now in decline. As coal prices continue to fall, mining villages pit by pit have been in a state of panic over the last few days. The miners' unions and workers are demanding a reduction in the pit's basic rates of pay.

In spite of all the talk about helping depressed areas, the government has been doing virtually nothing to alleviate the situation. The only measures that have been taken are for jobs that have been made redundant.

The government has instead focused on the development of industry in the region. This has led to a very long way to go before there is any real progress in the mining industry.

SOCIALIST WORKER is the paper of the Revolutionary Communist League, a theoretical movement of revolutionaries, which seeks, within the framework of society, with its brutal inequalities, to raise the consciousness of the working class and to consolidate the position of revolutionary class. It is a paper of the international Socialism is opposed to the apparatus of the workers' movement, and to any organisation that tries to restrict the rights of the workers.

The workers themselves are the first step towards ending capitalist exploitation. By demanding no victimisation of trade unionists, the revolutionary Communist League is opposed to any organisation that tries to restrict the rights of the workers.

The last of revolutionary socialism is to join workers in their struggle against the capitalist system. The struggle against the capitalist system is the driving force of the movement. The struggle of the working-class people regardless of race and colour, black and white, must continue to fight fascism and racism. The struggle must continue to demand the immediate release of all political prisoners.

The struggle against capitalism will continue until the working-class people are able to control their own affairs.

Establishment of Welsh workers

'Ve are in a difficult and insecure position.' That was the message from the Clydeside steel workers last weekend when they were asked to vote on a new contract. The result was 2,292 in favour of a 10 per cent pay rise, 1,747 against. The government has said that the strike would be illegal if it lasts longer than two days. The workers' union, the Trades Union Congress, has said that it would be legal if the strike lasts longer than two days.

SCIENCE by Harry Goode

How the trade war is ruining the countryside...

BRITISH AND AMERICAN farming is often held up as models of technical efficiency and used to illustrate the benefits which adequate machinery and fertilizers could bring to the developing countries. One observer has described agriculture in the undeveloped countries as "a poor man's art." But while the British and American farmers are producing food more efficiently, they are also destroying the environment.

In Britain only 3 per cent of the land is used for food production, while in the United States it is 50 per cent. The result is that the world's food supply is threatened, and the environment is being damaged.

In one country we find that British agriculture is an extension of the food industry, supported by a powerful lobby in Parliament. In another country, American agriculture, is a powerful lobby in Congress, supported by the Department of Agriculture.

A closer look reveals that British agriculture is benefiting from the spread of technology, while American agriculture is benefiting from the spread of free-market policies. The result is that the world's food supply is threatened, and the environment is being damaged.

The financial backing of British agriculture is provided by the government, while the financial backing of American agriculture is provided by the taxpayer. The result is that the world's food supply is threatened, and the environment is being damaged.

The British government has been accused of using its backing to promote the interests of large landowners, while the American government has been accused of using its backing to promote the interests of big agribusiness.

The result is that the world's food supply is threatened, and the environment is being damaged.

THIRST

At present, the privately-owned water companies, which control the majority of the water in the country, are using their position to exploit consumers. The companies are able to charge high prices for water, and can charge even higher prices for bottled water.

The result is that the world's water supply is threatened, and the environment is being damaged.

End strife

As an experienced diplomat and an expert on world politics, I can say with certainty that the end of the Cold War is imminent. The collapse of the Soviet Union has shown that the world is ready for a new era of cooperation and peace. The US and Russia are already working together to ensure a stable and prosperous future for all nations.

POLICE evict strikers in battle over pay

Stan Bishop

The stopped by being asked to leave. The workers are on strike to stop their pay being reduced by 6%. The managers have refused to negotiate, so the police were called in to evict the strikers. The strike is now in its fourth week, and the workers are determined to continue their fight for a fair wage.

5000 march to save Direct Works

George Kelly

The march was a show of support for the workers at Direct Works, who are fighting against the closure of the factory. The marchers were joined by local councilors and trade union representatives, who have expressed their support for the workers’ struggle.

VASTAGE rate The root cause of the shortage is the very low salary scale. In the first five to ten years of the new system, workers have been paid a minimum of 10% less than they were paid in the old system. This has led to a significant reduction in the number of workers entering the profession.

Long battle The strike was the first in what would prove to be a long-drawn-out battle. In February a special 10% cost of living award was granted, but this was not enough to stop the workers from striking. For many years the union has been fighting at all levels, from the small and comparatively insignificant lobby of the director of public works, to the lobby of government minister of public works.

Tory reaction The Tory government’s reaction to the strike was not surprising. The government has been known to be sympathetic to the needs of workers, and has been known to be sympathetic to the needs of the workers, and has been known to support the workers in their struggle for a fair wage.

DIVIDE and rule

About another quarter of the workers get the basic pay, but they are the minority. The other workers have been paid at a rate which is below the minimum wage. The government has been known to be sympathetic to the needs of workers, and has been known to support the workers in their struggle for a fair wage.

METALS MEN BACK RECOGNITION

The negotiations were held under the conditions of the old system, which is still in operation in the area. The workers were given a choice between accepting the new system or fighting for their rights.
