MAGNIFICENT SOLIDARITY SHAKES STATE-RUN COMBINE

STEEL STRIKERS FIGHT BOSS UNION ALLIANCE

John Larke and Les Pick

PORT TALBOT: The solidarity of the blastfielmen at the Abbey Margam works of the British Steel Corporation, with their town firmly behind them after seven weeks on strike, has shown something of the power of workers' unity pitted against the bosses, the TUC and the men's own union.

The British Union of Blastfielmen has refused to make the strike official and along with the TUC has shown that it is not prepared to fight for the night of lower-paid workers to get £1 a week extra to bring their earnings up to the princely sum of £12.

Two hundred labourers who work hourly hours on very low wages in appalling conditions of heat have demanded the extra £1. They are backed magnificently by 1200 men who have fought without strike pay and who make the nationally-agreed increase.

They are determined to pay £20 a week to stop the strike. The TUC is determined to pay £55 a week plus free food, meals, minicars, and free legal aid. They are backed by all the trade unions who are keeping one hand in action.

WARNING

The hard-line attitude towards the workers and the warning of what all steel workers can expect is the result of a wholesale attack through productivity deals on the rights, conditions and wages of the blastfielmen in the industry.

The TUC is big business and the trade unions in the steel industry and 'public service' workers in the TUC is the interests of the men who work put in their pockets. The TUC's first move was to isolate the men from the strike and the demand from the strike and their demand.

As a trade unionist I have been pleased to see the men's reaction. The blastfielmen at the beginning. Our union is the Green Book and we have been doing as the law says. The TUC men are beginning to find out what they are fighting. But the blastfielmen have been forced to decide that the bureaucratic shackles of the TUC are too strong and that strike action is the only way to clear.

DEMAND

As a result of the TUC attack the demands of the blastfielmen have been cut to $5 a week for five years instead of the three years the blastfielmen are fighting for.

The blastfielmen have in the whole been refused to view the strike at the heart of the TUC. It will almost certainly come out firmly and will be the result of the union's entire colour which is supposed to be neutral. But the present trade union in efforts to make it a non-striking body, a 'solidarity' federation - plus to back page.

LAST WEEK's devaluation of the franc was a manoeuvre worthy of de Gaulle himself. France news was carefully timed and when most French exporters are emptying their newly-money into the francs to buy gold, the process has been used to buy gold. But de Gaulle's entry into the international financial system has broken the Goldilocks pact. He has handed over a devaluation which de Gaulle was unprepared to do last November.

The influence of French diplomacy, commercial, political and social, has been greatly increased by the new devaluation. Press reports claim that the French will have to be more careful in the future. The price freeze is in danger of collapse, due to cover only the holiday period. But France is already considering whether to go ahead with the short-term tactics of de Gaulle's support.

FASCIST EMBARGO THRUST

ALAN WOODWARD, a member of the Tottonian International Socialists, was thrown in jail on Friday, who threatened to shoot him. Woodward, who is married with two young sons, was the police who said there was nothing that they could do about it but suggested he let them know if he received any more threats.

The National Front are actively making contacts among the unemployed in the Tottonian area and are planning to send a candidate in the council election.
4000 Kentish miners’ jobs in jeopardy as old coal bosses bleed the industry dry

by FRED MILLSON

Three stages of attack

As Harry Martin of the National Union of Mineworkers put it, a very small number of miners at the Tilmanstone pit in Kent had a very early start on the struggle to save their jobs. They called a meeting on Thursday night at the Tilmanstone pit, to discuss the situation and to see what could be done. The meeting was well attended, with about 50-60 people present, and everyone was determined to fight to save their jobs. The pit is one of the oldest in the country, and has been in operation for over 150 years. It is owned by the Coal Board, and employs around 1500 workers. The miners are demanding a pay increase to keep pace with inflation, and they are also concerned about job security in the face of closure threats. The miners have already held several protests and strikes, but these have not been effective in securing their demands. The miners are now determined to take further action to save their jobs, and they are calling on other miners across the country to join them in this struggle.

TONY CLIFF’S argument is for a newly radicalised Labour Party, which has a chance to influence the outcomes of elections and to take part in government. He believes that the Communist Party is at one extreme and the Liberal Party at the other, with the Labour Party in the middle. He argues that the Labour Party is the only party that can change society for the better, and that it is the only party that can stand up to the powerful interests that are holding back the country.

Misses the point

CLIFF’S argument is for a newly radicalised Labour Party, which has a chance to influence the outcomes of elections and to take part in government. He believes that the Communist Party is at one extreme and the Liberal Party at the other, with the Labour Party in the middle. He argues that the Labour Party is the only party that can change society for the better, and that it is the only party that can stand up to the powerful interests that are holding back the country.

Russia: how the revolution was lost

by Chris Harman

The revolution was lost in the 1920s, not in the 1917 October revolution.

There is no single answer to the question of how the revolution was lost. It is a complex and multifaceted issue, with a variety of factors contributing to the defeat of the revolution. One of the key factors was the failure of the Communist Party to build a mass movement that could sustain the revolution in the face of opposition from the capitalist class and its allies. The Communist Party was too small and too isolated, and it failed to build a broad front of support for the revolution.

Another key factor was the failure of the Communist Party to build a strong and effective military organization. The Red Army was too small and too weak, and it was unable to defend the revolution against the counter-revolutionary forces that emerged after the revolution.

The revolution was lost because the Communist Party was unable to overcome the difficulties of building a mass movement and a strong military organization. It was also unable to overcome the difficulties of building a united front with the other socialist parties in Russia.

The revolution was lost because the Communist Party was unable to overcome the difficulties of building a mass movement and a strong military organization. It was also unable to overcome the difficulties of building a united front with the other socialist parties in Russia.

The revolution was lost because the Communist Party was unable to overcome the difficulties of building a mass movement and a strong military organization. It was also unable to overcome the difficulties of building a united front with the other socialist parties in Russia.
One year after the brutal Russian invasion, Czechoslovakia's Stalinist bosses are issuing grave warnings against any signs of opposition. But as our report shows, there is a growing ferment in the factories.

The standoff between the Communist Party and the Soviet Union has been escalating. The Communist Party's leader, Dr. Husak, has ordered a crackdown on any signs of opposition. The Soviet Union has responded by sending in troops to prevent any further protests.

However, thesituation in the factories is changing. Workers are becoming more assertive and are starting to organize. They are demanding better working conditions and greater political rights.

For example, in one factory, the workers have refused to work unless they receive a raise. They have occupied the factory and are holding meetings to discuss their demands. The police have tried to break up the meetings, but the workers have refused to move.

The workers' resistance is gaining momentum, and it is feared that it could lead to a wider movement. The Communist Party is under pressure to act, and it is not clear what will happen next.

In conclusion, the situation in Czechoslovakia is tense, and it is likely to get worse. The workers are fighting for their rights, and the Communist Party is fighting to maintain control. It remains to be seen what will happen next.

---

Czech workers' resistance ratters Husak leadership

By Peter Hitchens

The strike in Prague is a sign of the growing frustration among workers in Czechoslovakia. The strike was called by the Trade Union of Workers in the Chemical Industry and was supported by the Workers' Committee of the Chemical Industry.

The strike was called in response to the government's decision to close down the major chemical plant in Prague. The workers were demanding better working conditions and greater political rights.

The strike was met with a strong police response. The police used tear gas and water cannons to try to disperse the workers. However, the workers held their ground and continued to demonstrate.

The strike is a sign of the growing unrest among workers in Czechoslovakia. The government is under pressure to act, and it is not clear what will happen next.
Leeds: Left must mobilise against racism

Socialists in the Leeds area were the first to camp out on the monument, the site of the 1981 riot 20 years ago. The monument was a victims of an attack in 1981, when youths wrecked a Pakistani Estate. In the 1980s, the area saw a decrease in Victorian terraces. Children played on the streets, and houses were used as a base for the local police. The Leeds area was not immune to racism, with incidents of violence and harassment reported. The Leeds Socialist Federation was established in 1981 to fight against racism and for the rights of all citizens.

No roots

The area is a melting pot of politics, which people who live in such areas and have roots within the local community. The Leeds area has no roots in history, but the area is rich in culture and tradition. The Leeds area is a mixture of different cultures and languages. The Leeds area is not a place to be feared, it is a place to be respected and admired. The Leeds area is a place where people from different backgrounds can come together and live together in peace.

Italian Left hammers out factory policy

Ferruccio Gambino

The Italian Left has recently announced its policy on working conditions. The Left is committed to improving working conditions and creating a more equitable society. The Left is determined to ensure that workers have the right to a decent wage and the right to be protected from exploitation. The Left is determined to ensure that workers have the right to a voice in the workplace and the right to be heard. The Left is determined to ensure that workers have the right to a safe and healthy working environment.

THREATEN

In other words, there is a lot of pressure on workers and employees to accept new changes. The Left is committed to ensuring that workers have the right to a decent wage and the right to be protected from exploitation. The Left is determined to ensure that workers have the right to a voice in the workplace and the right to be heard. The Left is determined to ensure that workers have the right to a safe and healthy working environment.

NOTICES

The Leeds Socialist Federation is organizing a public meeting at the Leeds Town Hall on Saturday, 24th June, at 7pm. The meeting will be open to all members of the public. The meeting will be a chance for people to come together and discuss the importance of the Left and its role in the community. The meeting will be a chance for people to come together and discuss the importance of the Left and its role in the community. The meeting will be a chance for people to come together and discuss the importance of the Left and its role in the community.