The Militant

Volume 14, No. 22 [Whole No. 151]
New York, Saturday, November 21, 1953
Price 5 Cents

WORKERS
OF THE WORLD
UNITE

Weekly Organ of the Communist League of America [Opposition]

Japanese Imperialists Press On

Unite the Working Class Against the Capitalist War Plots

According to reports in the exploited press, it is said that the "conscription" is intended to be 200,000 new conscripts, and that the new conscripts will number 600,000 in the first year. The total number of new conscripts is estimated to be 3 million in the first year. Japan has increased its conscription by 200,000, in addition to the existing conscription of 3 million, or a total of 3.2 million. The conscription plan includes conscription of both men and women, and the conscription will be implemented in various parts of Japan. The conscription plan is part of the imperialist policy against China and Korea and is intended to strengthen the Japanese army. The conscription plan is intended to be implemented in various parts of Japan and will be extended to all parts of the country.

The Communist League of America [Opposition] has issued a statement condemning the Japanese imperialists for their imperialist policies against China and Korea. The statement condemns the conscription plan as a brutal act of aggression against the working class and people of Japan and calls for unity and solidarity of the workers of the world in the struggle against imperialism.

The Japanese imperialists are also increasing their military expenditure and building new military bases in various parts of the country. The statement calls for a boycott of Japanese goods and services and for economic sanctions against Japan.

The statement also calls for a united front of all workers and peoples of the world to oppose imperialism and colonialism and to build a world of peace and progress.

Opposition in Drive for Jewish Paper

The Communist League of America [Opposition] has called for a united front of all workers and peoples of the world to oppose imperialism and colonialism and to build a world of peace and progress.

No Changes in Policies

[...]

The movement will not change its policy, and no changes in the constitution of the body will be considered. The leadership of the organization is committed to maintaining the principles and policies that have guided the movement since its inception. Any changes in the constitution or bylaws will be presented for discussion at future meetings and will be subject to approval by the membership.

Soviet Celebration in Staunton, Ill.

The movement held a celebratory event in Staunton, Ill., to commemorate the 10th anniversary of the establishment of the Soviet Union. The event included speeches, performances, and a parade. The movement is proud of its contributions to the development of socialist societies around the world.

The Movement for Money in Boston

After the event, the movement held a meeting in Boston to discuss the implementation of the Soviet model in the United States. The movement is committed to working towards a socialist society in the United States and around the world.

Before the Party Control Commission

In my statement which I gave to the movement in New York on November 15, 1919, I emphasized the importance of the Party control commission. The statement was made in the context of the struggle for a democratic and socialist society. The movement is committed to the establishment of a democratic and socialist society.
IN THE INTERNATIONAL OF LABOR

Conservatives Press Attack on Labor

Consequences of the Elections in Great Britain and Prospects for the Communists

ENGLAND

The Political Situation

The Socialist-Republicans Support the Church

The Political sequence of the elections in Great Britain has been reversed. The Conservatives have been able to retain their majority in the House of Commons, but the Labour Party has gained control of the government. The Labour Party saw the outcome of the elections as a victory for Labour, and they took steps to ensure that the new government would be Labour-dominated.

In Spain, the situation is different. The elections in Spain were won by the Spanish Socialist Workers' Party (PSOE), which is a member of the Socialist International. The PSOE formed a government with the support of other left-wing parties, including the Communist Party. The new government has pledged to implement a series of social and economic reforms, including the nationalization of key industries and the reorganization of the state-owned enterprises.

The split in the Spanish political landscape has been significant, with the conservative Popular Party losing its majority in the House of Deputies. The Socialists have also gained ground, with their share of the vote increasing from 36% to 37%. The Workers' Party, which is part of the Communist bloc, has maintained its position, with 20% of the vote.

The new government has pledged to implement a series of social and economic reforms, including the nationalization of key industries and the reorganization of the state-owned enterprises. The government has also promised to increase social spending and to tackle the country's high unemployment rate.

In terms of foreign policy, the new government has indicated a desire to strengthen ties with other European Union countries and to work towards the creation of a united Europe. The government has also expressed a commitment to the promotion of human rights and democracy.

The split in the Spanish political landscape has been significant, with the conservative Popular Party losing its majority in the House of Deputies. The Socialists have also gained ground, with their share of the vote increasing from 36% to 37%. The Workers' Party, which is part of the Communist bloc, has maintained its position, with 20% of the vote.

In terms of foreign policy, the new government has indicated a desire to strengthen ties with other European Union countries and to work towards the creation of a united Europe. The government has also expressed a commitment to the promotion of human rights and democracy.
THE CASE OF DREESER — The entrance of a supervisor into class society is only a reflection, though a significant one, of the social structure. As Dreeser, the capitalist, goes against the bourgeoisie, he does not advance another class; he is on the side of the bourgeoisie. His work is not an attack on the bourgeoisie but a part of it. This is the decisive criterion with which to judge the character of the enemy in all the struggles that the workers face today.

We are not interested in Dreeser's personal characteristics, but in the historical role he plays. His speech is not something to be admired or condemned, but it is a part of the process of the development of class society.

SALVATION THROUGH THE WAGES — The workers who are struggling today are not doing so for the sake of Dreeser or for any other individual. They are fighting for their own liberation, for the liberation of all the working class.

The workers who are organizing and fighting are the future leaders of the working class. They are the vanguard of the revolution.

THE END OF THE LAW — The “law” is not a social institution, but a reflection of the social relations of the bourgeoisie. It is not something to be respected or obeyed, but something to be overthrown.

The bourgeoisie uses the law as a tool to maintain its power. It is a means of suppressing the working class and preventing them from organizing and fighting.

The workers must not be afraid of the law. They must organize and fight to change the social relations of class society.