The Danger of Thermidor

An Analysis of the Significance of Stalin's Latest Speech

The above recent speech of Stalin, which we succeed in giving to you, is of the utmost importance. It is the first serious signal encountered in the history of the Soviet Union that there is a policy of bourgeois counter-revolution in the political life of the country. The policy of the leadership of the party, which is now clear, is to pass through the Revolution to Thermidor. This means to destroy the gains of the Revolution, to liquidate the revolution in the social and political life of the country.

The Elections and Labor's Struggle

Note must be taken, now that detailed figures are available, of the extremely low part of the working class in the national elections in November. We have carried on a large canvass among the workers and have found that only a very small percentage of the workers voted or even thought about voting. It is found that the working party that led the election was not only Communism but also the Communist party, and the workers have been made to believe that the election was a question of whether they should support the workers or the bosses. But when one compares the electoral results with the previous elections, it is clear that there has been a decrease in the workers' participation in the political process. This is due to the workers' disillusionment with the established political parties and their lack of faith in the promises made by these parties. It is also due to the workers' struggle for economic and political rights, which is being suppressed by the capitalist system. The workers' struggle for power is the only way to secure their rights and to change the capitalist system. The workers must unite and organize to fight for their rights and to change the capitalist system. The workers must be united to change the capitalist system.

What the Presidential Vote Means for the Workers

The election results for the workers are not very encouraging. The workers have been victorious in some cities but have been defeated in many others. The workers must continue to struggle and to fight for their rights. The workers must be united and organize to change the capitalist system. The workers must fight for their rights and to change the capitalist system.

Oppositions Expelled from I.L.L.D.

Oppositions on the left are not to be taken lightly. They are a serious threat to the workers' struggle for power. They must be fought and defeated. The workers must be united to change the capitalist system. The workers must fight for their rights and to change the capitalist system.

The Danger of Thermidor:

The party was in a crisis. In the words of the party leader, the party had reached a point of no return. The party was in a state of disarray, and in general, a crisis ripped through the party, as in the case of the previous crises of 1922, 1926, 1932, and 1937. The crisis was not only a crisis of leadership, but also a crisis of the party's intellectual and political basis.

In the face of this crisis, the party leaders were divided. Some, like Stalin, advocated a hard line and called for a reign of terror, while others, like Trotsky, advocated a more moderate approach.

The crisis of 1939 was a turning point in the history of the party. It marked the beginning of the end of the party's democratic traditions and the rise of a totalitarian regime.

The crisis of 1939 was not only a crisis for the party, but also for the state. The crisis led to a series of repressive measures, including the arrest and execution of thousands of party members and intellectuals.

How Far Will The Stalinists Go?

The Swing to Opportunism in Chicago

The continuous struggle is undoubtedly the most important factor in the development of the international communist movement. This struggle is often expressed in the form of conflict between various tendencies within the movement, each of which represents a different viewpoint on how to achieve socialist revolution.

Some recent events seem to indicate that a significant shift towards opportunism is occurring in Chicago. This trend is marked by a growing acceptance of the idea that the workers' movement should involve itself in the defense of capitalist interests, rather than focusing solely on eliminating capitalist exploitation.

The Akhatskii Elephants

Having been subjected to continuous criticism, the Akhatskii Elephants seem to have undergone a significant transformation. Once known for their radical stance and strong opposition to capitalist domination, they now appear to be more interested in forming alliances with capitalist forces in order to achieve their goals.

The report on the Akhatskii Elephants, while acknowledging their past achievements, also notes that their current approach may be seen as a move towards opportunism. The report suggests that this shift could have serious implications for the future of the movement.

The Stalinists Against War

The report concludes by urging the Stalinists to remain steadfast in their opposition to war and to continue their fight against capitalist expansion. The Stalinists are urged to maintain their solidarity and unity in order to resist the growing tide of opportunism that threatens the international communist movement.
