For a New Party and a New International!

After the ignominious collapse of both the Social Democracy and the Communist International in Germany, and the subsequent liquidation of both (and most of the organizations drawing upon these lessons from their historic catastrophes, it is impossible any longer to conceal the fact that the perpetuity of this form of the proletariat capable of leading to victory does not exist. It must be created anew.

The National Committee of the Communist League of America (Opposition) is in complete agreement with the decision of the Comintern to dissolve the Comintern and to negotiate with the leaders of the various revolutionary parties and organizations in the world. This agreement is a necessary condition for the preservation of the struggle of the proletarians of the world, for it must be recognized that the struggle of the proletariat is the struggle of all the exploited and oppressed peoples of the world.

The national committee of the Communist League of America (Opposition) demands a new party and an international that is free from the sectarianism and manipulation of the world bourgeoisie, and that is composed of revolutionary workers and intellectuals who are committed to the struggle for the liberation of the working class.

For Revolutionary Internationalism — Against the Theory of Socialism in One Country

The theoretical source of the degeneration and final downfall of the Communist International and it's successor, the Comintern, is the theory of "Socialism in One Country". The Communist movement which has been destroyed by this theory cannot arise again without a clear and realistic rejection of its fundamental principles.

For the Defense of the Soviet Union

The successes of Stalinism have strengthened the party and the workers' organizations in the Soviet Union and have facilitated economic growth and a counter-revolutionary capitalist counterattack. The Stalinist regime has undermined the foundations of the state and is leading toward destruction. The social content of the October revolution, however, is still alive and, by its very nature, cannot be suppressed. The same theory cannot arise again without a clear and realistic rejection of its fundamental principles.

Trade Union Policy

The new party will find a road to the masses and gain influence over their movement only on the condition that it follows a Maximalist program, which includes the full participation of the workers' organizations as they exist in reality, regardless of the theoretical membership of the workers in any one particular organization. At the same time an immediate struggle against the capitalist agents within the mass organizations is necessary.

Against the Right Wing Agitators of Stalinism

The new party cannot represent a mechanical combination of "agitation" groups, but will be obliged to go through a process of growth and development. The new party must be a vehicle for the workers, and especially, with respect to the tasks of its fundamental organization, the Branch, the front of the new party, and the unity of the socialist movement which is the role of the Comintern part in the present situation is to be the task of the "little party" itself.

The new party must manifest itself in the international form in opposition to the "leaderism" of the Comintern.

We are calling upon the members of the new party to unite with the leadership of the new party and to work with us in the struggle for a new socialist world.

British Labor Skates Have Own Way at Congress

In London, on Wednesday, the British Trade Union Congress (TUC) met to discuss the state of the economy and the outlook for the labor movement. The TUC is the largest trade union organization in the United Kingdom, representing millions of workers in a variety of industries. The congress is a major event in the annual calendar of the trade union movement, and its decisions can have a significant impact on the labor market.

The TUC has been a powerful force in British politics, and its influence is felt both domestically and internationally. It is known for its progressive and socialist stance, and its members are often at the forefront of labor disputes and political struggles. The TUC has a long history of fighting for workers' rights and improving conditions for workers, and it has been a key player in the development of the British labor movement.

The TUC's stance on a number of issues, including the state of the economy and the outlook for the labor movement, is likely to be a major topic of discussion at the congress. The union will also be looking to assert its influence in the upcoming general election, and its role in shaping the political landscape is likely to be a key focus of the meeting.

Overall, the TUC is a crucial institution for workers in the United Kingdom, and its decisions and actions have a significant impact on the labor market and the wider political landscape. With the upcoming general election just around the corner, the TUC is likely to be a key player in shaping the direction of the country in the coming years.

The TUC is an example of the power of organized labor in the United Kingdom, and its influence is likely to continue to grow in the years to come. With the economy facing a number of challenges, and with the looming general election, the TUC is likely to be an important actor in shaping the future of the country.
The Stalin Program for the Cuban Revolution

The Stalinist program for the Cuban Revolution is centered on the promotion of industrial development, state control over key industries, and the establishment of a socialist economy. This program is aimed at transforming Cuba into a socialist state and ensuring the welfare of its people through collective ownership of the means of production. It targets the creation of a strong, centrally planned economy that can withstand capitalist pressures and ensure social justice.

The key aspects of the Stalinist program include:

1. Industrialization: Focusing on the rapid development of heavy industry, particularly in sectors like steel, energy, and machinery, to increase Cuba's self-sufficiency and economic independence.
2. Collectivization: Expanding the reach of state control over agriculture, aiming to collectivize farming and ensure food security and agricultural efficiency.
3. State Planning: Implementing a comprehensive state planning system to guide economic development, ensuring that resources are allocated effectively.
4. Social Welfare: Establishing social welfare programs to improve education, healthcare, and living standards for all Cubans.
5. International Relations: Strengthening Cuba's ties with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries, seeking economic and military support.

This program is driven by the ideology of Marxism-Leninism, emphasizing the importance of the class struggle and the need for a transitional period before the full establishment of a classless society.

More on the Paris Conference

The Paris Conference is a significant diplomatic event where nations gather to discuss global issues, negotiate treaties, and foster international cooperation. The conference typically involves representatives from various countries, each bringing their own strategies and goals. The outcome of such conferences can influence international relations, set precedents for future interactions, and may lead to the establishment of new alliances or the strengthening of existing ones.

A Step Forward or A Step Back?

The decision to support or oppose a conference like the Paris Conference depends on a variety of factors, including national interests, economic considerations, and geopolitical alignments. Governments may view such conferences as opportunities to achieve strategic gains, whereas others might see them as potential threats to sovereignty or economic independence.
