Roosevelt's Program
For «Social Insurance»

As Congress nears the close of its present session, a bill to enact a workmen's compensation insurance law for states and the District of Colum bia will again be introduced in both houses. The bill will be the third in succession introduced in Congress. Last year's attempt in the Senate failed when the Senate went out of session without even a single vote being recorded on the bill. The previous bill passed the Senate but was defeated in the House. But this year the bill has been introduced in both houses and several members are expressing the hope that it will become a law.

The bill is based on the principle of providing a compensation for workmen injured on the job. It is an attempt to provide a form of social in surance to protect the working class from the ravages of unemployment and injury. It is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. We need something more than compensation for workmen injured on the job. We need a program of social insurance that will provide for the needs of all workers, both on and off the job.

The bill has been introduced in both houses and several members are expressing the hope that it will become a law. We should support this bill and work for its passage into law. But this is not enough. We need a pro gram of social insurance that will provide for the needs of all workers, both on and off the job.

Steel Workers Union In Meeting to Decide Action

Steel Workers United are holding a meeting today in New York to discuss their strategy in the strike. The union has been on strike for three weeks and the company has been demanding a settlement.

The union is divided over whether to accept the company's offers or continue the strike. Some members believe that the union should accept the company's offers and end the strike. Others believe that the union should continue the strike until the company makes a better offer.

Mr. G. T. Bremer, of the Steel Workers Union, said today that the union would accept the company's offers if the company agreed to accept the union's demands.

Browder Exposures Strike 'Sell-Out' in Minneapolis

F. D. Roosevelt's New Deal program is not being accepted by all workers. The Steel Workers Union is planning to continue the strike and pressure the company to make a better offer.

Stalinist Record in the Cuban Revolution

In Cuba in the summer of 1935, the leaders of the Communist Party embarked on a policy of open and armed resistance to the government of the U.S. government. In this context, the Bolshikovite Left, under the leadership of Leon Trotsky, emerged as the dominant force in the Cuban Communist movement. Trotsky and his followers, known as the Bolshikovites, advocated for a strategy of armed rebellion against the Cuban government. They believed that the Cuban Revolution would be a model for a broader revolutionary struggle against capitalism in Latin America.

The Bolshikovite movement in Cuba was ultimately unsuccessful, and the leaders of the Cuban Communist Party were forced to abandon their strategy of armed resistance. However, the Bolshikovite Left's strategic mistakes and organizational weaknesses were exposed, leading to a split within the Cuban Communist Party. The Bolshikovites were eventually expelled from the Cuban Communist Party, and their leaders were imprisoned or exiled.

New York Teachers Union Fights Red-Baiting

New York City has been the site of violent anti-communist repression in recent months. The Red-baiting campaign is a dark reflection of the prevailing atmosphere of fear and paranoia that has characterized American politics in recent years. The New York Teachers Union has been a target of this campaign, with members of the union being subjected to harassment and persecution.

The union has responded with bravery and defiance, standing up for its members and demanding an end to the anti-communist witch-hunts. The union's leadership has been under threat, and many of its members have faced discrimination and dismissal. However, the union has continued to stand strong, and its members remain committed to their cause.

The Foreign Policy of The Soviet Union

The foreign policy of the Soviet Union has taken a turn for the worse in recent months. The Soviet Union has been accused of aggressive and expansionist behavior, with many countries in the region expressing concern about the direction of Soviet foreign policy.

The recent invasion of Afghanistan by the Soviet Union has been met with widespread condemnation. The Soviet Union has been accused of acting unilaterally and without regard for the wishes of the Afghan people.

The Soviet Union is a member of a number of international organizations, including the United Nations and the Council of Europe. The Soviet Union is also a member of the non-aligned movement, which includes a number of countries that are not aligned with any of the major power blocs.

The Soviet Union has been a leader in the fight against colonialism and has been a strong advocate for the rights of developing countries.

After the Socialist Party Convention

The Socialist Party Convention was a key event in the history of the socialist movement. The convention was held in New York City in 1901, and it marked the beginning of a new era in the socialist movement.

The convention was attended by a large number of delegates from across the United States, and it was decided at the convention that the Socialist Party should pursue a policy of electoral politics. This decision was a significant departure from the previous strategy of the socialist movement, which had been focused on mass protests and revolutionary action.

The decision to pursue a policy of electoral politics was a controversial one, and it was met with resistance from some members of the socialist movement. However, the decision was ultimately successful, and the Socialist Party went on to become one of the most significant political parties in the United States.
