French Labor Parties Ignore Storm Signals

French labor parties are ignoring storm signals and, despite differences on key issues such as the role of the unions, are coalescing around a new strategy of confrontation with the government. The French Communist Party (PCF) and the French Socialist Party (PS) are now working together closely, and this is reflected in their recent joint statement on the need for a "general strike" to protest the government's austerity measures.

The statement calls for a "massive mobilization" on the part of workers, students, and other groups to "defend our rights and our future." It also pledges to continue fighting against the "anti-labor policies" of the Socialist government, which has pursued a series of austerity measures, including the introduction of a new labor law that critics say weakens workers' rights.

The statement comes as tensions have risen between the government and labor unions over issues such as the government's plans to reform the pension system and the labor law. The government has faced widespread protests and strikes in recent months, but has so far refused to back down in the face of pressure.

The French Communist Party has long been a key player in the French labor movement, and has a strong tradition of working with other left-wing parties. The French Socialist Party, on the other hand, has been more reluctant to engage in sustained opposition to the government, and has often struggled to maintain a clear ideological position.

But in recent months, the two parties have begun to work more closely together, and this has been reflected in their joint statement. The statement marks a significant shift in the French labor movement, and is likely to have a major impact on the country's political landscape in the coming months.

Role of the Stalinists in Minneapolis Strike

The Stalinists have two ways of getting votes. First, in an election, where of course they have no choice other than to vote for their candidate. This is the case in Minneapolis, where the Communist candidate was chosen without a proper ballot and without any secret ballot or other similar measures. The Communists' candidate was elected by a majority of one vote. In the second case, the Stalinists get votes by trickery and violence. They resort to such methods as voter intimidation, vote buying, and even armed force.

Saturday Events

A thousand special police had been employed to guard against any disorders in the election this week. The large crowd of supporters of the General Negro Protection League was present, and they were kept quiet by the police. The chief purpose of the police was to prevent any disturbances that might occur if the blacks were allowed to vote freely.

During the five months prior to the election, the Negro community was divided into two groups. The first group was led by the Communist Party, which had gained control of the local government. The second group was led by the National Negro Defense League, which was opposed to the Communist Party and to the Negro community's demands for equal rights.

The fate of the candidates depended on the outcome of the election. The Communist candidate, with the support of the Negro community, had a good chance of winning. The National Negro Defense League candidate, with the support of the white community, was likely to lose.

On the Eve of the Strike

One thousand, two hundred, and ten thousand dollars were turned over to the strikers by the Communist Party. The money was to be used to support the strikers and to help them in their struggle. The Communist Party also promised to supply the strikers with food and clothing.

The Communist Party has always been active in supporting the workers. They are the only political party that has been consistent in this respect. The other parties have been more interested in their own political goals and have not been concerned with the welfare of the workers.

The Strike

The strike was ordered by the Communist Party. The strikers demanded higher wages and better working conditions. The company refused to meet these demands.

The strike was peaceful at first. The workers marched to the company's headquarters and told the management that they would not return to work until their demands were met. The management refused to negotiate.

The following day, the strikers took over the company's property and set up their own workshops. The strikers worked hard to supply the city with the necessary goods.

The strike continued for three weeks. The strikers were reinforced by other workers from different parts of the country. The company tried to break the strike by offering higher wages and better working conditions, but the strikers refused to accept these offers.

In the end, the strikers won the strike. The company was forced to meet their demands. The workers were able to improve their working conditions and secure higher wages.

Stalinist Record in the Cuban Revolution

To the Workers Class of America:

The wave of revolutionary protests which have been rising under the banner of the Worker Solidarity in Poland, both at home and abroad, has been the greatest outburst of the working class in the struggle for freedom and against the dictatorial rule of capitalist exploiters. The movement is now spreading throughout the world, and it has united the workers of all countries in a common struggle for the overthrow of the capitalist system.

In the Cuban Revolution, the working class has shown a great deal of initiative and courage in the face of the capitalist oppressors. The workers have taken the lead in the struggle against the government, which has been supporting the reactionaries and exploiting the workers.

We, the workers of the world, stand in solidarity with our Cuban brothers and sisters who are fighting for their freedom.

After the Bulgarian Fascist Coup d'Etat

If the three and a half million Jews in Europe were comprised of a quarter of a million people of German-American descent, the little change in the number of Jews in the world would have been marked by a loss of hope for the future of the Jewish people.

The Bulgarian coup has marked a new chapter in the history of the Bulgarian people. It is a tragedy that the Bulgarian government should have taken such a step, but it is a lesson that the Bulgarian people must not forget.

The Bulgarian coup has shown that the Bulgarian government is not as strong as it appears to be. It has also shown that the Bulgarian people are capable of fighting for their freedom.

We, the workers of the world, stand in solidarity with the Bulgarian workers who are fighting against the Bulgarian government.
