Armored Clashes in Spain as Civil War Begins

Spanish workers destiny hung on militant action.

The Spanish revolution began in the spring of 1931 with a general strike. The workers seized control of the government and the constituent assembly elected a republic. The capitalists attempted to restore the old order by violence and political manipulation. The strikers, led by the Communist party, were arrested, tortured, and killed. The workers fought back and won the right to organize and strike. In May, 1934, the workers marched on the government palace and demanded the resignation of Prime Minister Salazar. The palace was stormed and the workers took control. The government clamped down on the workers and the revolution began. The workers were able to establish a workers' government in several provinces and to win strikes and occupations. The capitalists attempted to restore the old order by force, but the workers were victorious. The Spanish revolution was a Workers' government against Fascism.

March of Events

Phaneuf, batteries in the T.A.N.C. (Teachers' Association of New Canaan) and the I.W.W. (Industrial Workers of the World) were seized and their leaders arrested.

The phrase "socialist" is a word often used in political discourse, but its meaning can vary widely depending on the context and the political leaning of the speaker. In general, socialism is a political and economic ideology that advocates for the ownership and control of the means of production and distribution by the collective or state rather than the private sector. Socialism is often associated with the idea of promoting social equality and fairness by ensuring that resources are distributed more equitably among the population. Socialist movements have existed in various forms throughout history, from the early 19th century to the present day, and have been associated with different ideological orientations, such as marxism, anarcho-socialism, and social democracy.

A Discussion of the International Left Socialist Declaration

The Extraordinary International Left Socialist Congress, held in Paris, France, on November 12-14, 1974, condemned the split in the International Left Socialist Federation and called for a new international leftist party to be based on the principle of democratic centralism. The congress was attended by delegates from various countries, including the United States.

The congress was opened by a statement from the International Left Socialist Federation, which briefly outlined its history and goals. The delegates then proceeded to discuss the principles of democratic centralism and the need for a new international leftist party. The following is a summary of the discussion:

1. The need for a new international leftist party was widely supported by the delegates. It was agreed that the existing international leftist parties were not democratic enough and that they needed to be reformed or replaced.

2. The debate centered around the question of whether to form a new international leftist party or to reform the existing one. Some delegates argued for a new party, while others believed that the existing party could be reformed with the help of democratic centralism.

3. The delegates agreed that the new party should be based on democratic centralism, which means that all decisions would be made by a majority vote in a democratic process. This would ensure that the party was truly democratic and that all members had an equal voice.

4. The delegates also agreed that the new party should be international in scope, with members from all countries. This would ensure that the party was representative of the global left and that it could work together to achieve its goals.

5. The delegates voted to form a new international leftist party, which would be based on democratic centralism and would be international in scope.

The congress was a significant event in the history of the international left, as it marked the beginning of a new era in which the left would be united in the struggle for socialism.

Drug Dealers Union Calls for Strike

The deadline in the growing strike of Bronx drug dealers was extended to July 1 by the Board of Health and Board of Aldermen in New York City. The deadline was scheduled to expire on April 15, but the Board of Health and Board of Aldermen have extended it to July 1. The strike affects the entire drug trade in the city, including retail drug stores, wholesalers, and manufacturers.

The decision to extend the deadline was made after a meeting between the Board of Health and Board of Aldermen and representatives of the drug dealers. The representatives agreed to continue the strike until July 1, in order to give the authorities more time to negotiate a solution.

The strike began on April 15, and has affected a significant portion of the drug trade in New York City. The strike has caused shortages of certain medications, and has disrupted the supply chain for many businesses. The authorities have been negotiating with the drug dealers to reach a resolution, but so far no agreement has been reached.

Issues at the A.F. of L. Convention

The resolution begins by noting the importance of the A.F. of L. in providing a forum for discussion and debate on important issues. It highlights the role of the A.F. of L. in advancing the interests of working people, and in promoting social justice and economic progress.

The resolution goes on to call for the continued support of the A.F. of L. by all members of the union. It urges members to participate in the affairs of the union, to attend meetings and vote, and to work together to achieve the common goals of the organization.

The resolution concludes by expressing hope for the future of the A.F. of L. and its members, and by reaffirming the commitment to the principles of the union.

Paterson Silk Meet Huge Success

The show was a huge success, with attendance exceeding expectations. The organizers were pleased with the outcome, and are already planning for next year's show.

The success of the show is attributed to a variety of factors, including the quality of the exhibits, the interest of the visitors, and the effective promotion strategies used by the organizers.

The Paterson Silk Show is an annual event that attracts visitors from around the country. It is a popular event for silk producers, distributors, and consumers, who come to see the latest in silk products and trends.

The show is scheduled to take place at the Paterson Convention Center in September of this year. The organizers are expecting a similar level of success as this year, and are working to make the event even more exciting and enjoyable for attendees.

Anti Fascists to Rally on Oct. 19

The rally will be held on October 19, and is expected to draw a large crowd of anti-fascist activists and supporters. The organizers are calling on all who oppose fascism to attend the rally, and are urging them to bring signs and banners to display their message.

The rally is a response to recent events involving fascism, including the rise of far-right movements in Europe and the United States. The organizers hope that the rally will send a clear message that fascism will not be tolerated in any form.

The rally will be held at the site of the first anti-fascist rally held in the United States, which took place in New York City in 1933.
