Disease Germs - A New Weapon

BY EUGENE VARIN

Among the most heinous weapons that are being shrewdly put to work as a threat to the World War II is the dangerous germ of disease. There is no doubt that the germ of disease will be used as an effective weapon of war. There is no question that the germ of disease will be used as an effective weapon of war.

Stimson Statement Confirms Marxist Analysis of Roosevelt’s War Plans

American Imperialists Garrison the World

In response to the increasing threat posed by the Soviet Union to American interests, President Franklin D. Roosevelt has ordered the deployment of additional troops to the Soviet Union. This move is in line with the Marxist analysis of American foreign policy, which sees the United States as a colonial power seeking to maintain its global dominance.

Dutch Reader Praises "Militant" For Realism

I believe a news man should have an open eye and not just see what is written in his papers. I think you are doing a fine job of writing for the people. You are trying to give them a picture of what is going on in the world and I appreciate it.

How Factories Were Born

By A. C. Green

When you look at the old factories and mills of the industrial west, it's easy to believe that the industrial revolution was an epoch of progress. But the truth is, many of these factories were built on the backs of the working class. The exploited workers of the factories were forced to work long hours in hazardous conditions for low wages, often under the threat of violence and harassment.

Stalinist Record Shows Who Served Shipowners Throughout The War

By Art Sharon

A recent series of articles on the history of the Stalinist movement in the U.S. reveals the role of the Soviet Union's shipowners and the influence of their policies on the shipping industry. The series was published by the American Communist Party (TCP) and is based on a report issued by the Soviet government in 1943.

One of the key figures in the Stalinist movement was the Soviet shipowner Ivanov, who played a significant role in the shipping industry during the war. Ivanov was a leading member of the Stalinist party and was involved in the shipping industry from an early age.

In addition to Ivanov, several other Soviet shipowners played important roles in the shipping industry during the war. These shipowners were known for their strong support of the Stalinist movement and their willingness to do whatever it took to ensure the success of their shipping operations.

The series of articles highlights the significant contributions made by the Soviet shipowners to the shipping industry during the war. It also raises important questions about the role of the Stalinist movement in the shipping industry and its impact on the global economy.

The TCP's series of articles is an important contribution to the understanding of the role of the Soviet government in the shipping industry during the war. It provides valuable insights into the complex relationships between the Stalinist movement and the shipping industry, and it raises important questions about the role of the Soviet government in the global economy.

Diary Of A Steelworker

By J. Korosecki

I wonder what our homes would be like if we didn't work so hard. I dream of a day when I could work less and have more time to enjoy the things I love. But I know that many people in the steel industry face the same challenges, working long hours in difficult conditions.

Nuts And Bolts

A man has a right to his opinions, but I don't agree with some of the things he said. He said that the steel industry was in decline and that we needed to make changes. I think that we can improve things without completely restructuring the industry. We just need to work together to find solutions.
