TRUMAN URGES MILITARIST POLICY

Seekes Extension Of Draft, Universal Training For War

By Art Prez

President Truman's Army Day speech in Capi corn, Ohio, April 6, was a one-sided effort to impress the middle class and most ruthless militarists with the idea that the armed forces are needed for universal military training.

At the back of the thin screen of Truman's diplomatic phrases could be heard the rattle of the saber.

"The speech and program of the Truman administra tion is a policy of militarism.

TRUCK TROUBLE

Several weeks ago, the com pany had to lay off 50 in the night shift because of a strike that was called for 11-1/2 cents an hour. That was the first time in the company's history.

On examination, this claim of an 11.5-cent an hour increase was proved to be false. The director of the industry, a representative of the machinery associa tion, and the company agreed to a 10-cent an hour rise. The strike was called off and the company reluctantly raised the rates to 11.5 cents an hour.

It is in fact, as the union showed in detail, an offer of 30 cents an hour.

The truck drivers, who are mostly mixed race veterans, are concerned over the loss of new businesses in the city. They are not as con cerned over the loss of new business as the older veterans, who are mostly white.

The strike was settled by an agreement reached on November 12. Proposed el see of the strike, which had meant a loss of 15 cents an hour

Detroit Veterans Seek Homes In Vain

By Jim Ross

DETROIT, Mich., Apr. 3 — The veterans in Detroit are seeking no relief for their housing woes. They have been trying to buy homes, but the prices are too high. They have been trying to rent homes, but the rents are too high. They have been trying to find homes, but they cannot.

The Detroit veterans are not alone in their plight. Veterans throughout the country are facing the same problems. The shortage of housing is a nationwide problem. The government has tried to solve the problem by building public housing, but this has not been enough. The veterans are still being left out in the cold.

In the meantime, the veterans are Left without homes. They are Left without a place to live. They are Left without a place to call home. They are Left without a place to raise their families. They are Left without a place to retire. They are Left without a place to age gracefully. They are Left without a place to die.

The veterans are Left without a place to be. They are Left without a place to breathe. They are Left without a place to sleep. They are Left without a place to eat. They are Left without a place to drink. They are Left without a place to play. They are Left without a place to pray. They are Left without a place to dream. They are Left without a place to hope.

The veterans are Left without a place to be human. They are Left without a place to be free. They are Left without a place to be equal. They are Left without a place to be respected. They are Left without a place to be valued. They are Left without a place to be loved. They are Left without a place to be cherished. They are Left without a place to be celebrated.

The Miners Will Not Forget Their Dead!

Diary of A Steelworker by T. Kovalesky

We had a rooster crow at the crack of dawn. In a few minutes the bright eastern sky had flooded the cement factory with a soft golden light. The sun was just rising over the steel mill. The most striking feature of the scene was the black smoke pouring from the smokestacks. The smell of the smoke was strong and pungent. It was a smell that could only be associated with the steel industry.

I thought of the fevered soul of the steel worker during the long hours spent in the furnaces. The smell of the smoke brought back memories of the days spent in the furnaces. The smell of the smoke was an integral part of the working conditions.

I decided to talk to one of the workers about the conditions. I asked, "What's your name?""

"My name is John," he replied.

"What do you do here?"

"I'm a steelworker," he said.

"How long have you been working here?"

"I've been working here for five years."

"What do you like about working here?"

"The atmosphere is good. The workers are friendly and the wages are decent."

"What do you dislike about working here?"

"The long hours and the smoke."

"Do you have any complaints?"

"Yes, I do. The management doesn't care about the workers. They just want to make money."

"What would you change if you had the chance?"

"I would change the management and the working conditions."

"What do you think of the union?"

"We need a union. The management is too powerful."

"What do you think of the strike?"

"We need to strike to make a change."

I left the conversation with a newfound respect for the steelworker. The conditions they endured were harsh, but they were determined to make a change. Their resolve was admirable.

Success Story

Among the most familiar of capitol-building exercises is the story of the first black to win a seat in Congress. While the story is often told, the details are frequently overlooked. The story of John Lewis, a member of the Democratic party, is an example of the struggle for equality that continues to this day.

By William F. Warren

The story of John Lewis is a testament to the determination and perseverance of the black community. It is a story of triumph over adversity, of hope in the face of despair.
