Hungarian Workers Fight to Bitter End

By George Lencz

November 7 - Against the whole world, including their own party, the workers of Hungary resist their government's imposition of Soviet-style 'transitional democracy.' The elections in Hungary, held in November 1956, were a thinly disguised attempt by the Soviet Union to establish a puppet regime in Hungary. The Hungarian workers overwhelmingly rejected this attempt, demonstrating their determination to fight for their freedom.

The Hungarian Revolution of 1956 was a struggle against Soviet domination and for freedom and democracy. It was sparked by a combination of factors, including economic hardship, political repression, and Soviet invasion. The workers played a central role in the revolution, working together with the students and peasants to overthrow the regime.

The Hungarian Workers' Councils, which emerged spontaneously throughout the country, became the main form of popular resistance. These councils organized workers and their families, and fought against the Soviet occupation forces. They demanded freedom, democracy, and national sovereignty.

The Hungarian Revolution ended with the invasion of Soviet forces, which crushed the uprising and reimposed Soviet control. The Hungarian government was overthrown, and a new regime was established under Sándor Szakáll, a communist who had previously served as the head of the Hungarian Communist Party. The new government continued to implement Soviet policies, and Hungary was forced to submit to Soviet domination.

The Hungarian Revolution of 1956 was a significant event in the history of Hungary, and it remains a symbol of the struggle against oppression and for freedom.

British Workers Stage Huge Protest Against Suez Attack

By Fred Haliday

The attempt of British and French imperialism to intervene in the Middle East again was thwarted by the British people and their workers. After the defeat of the British and French military invasion of the Suez Canal zone, the workers of the United Kingdom embarked on a massive protest against the attack.

The workers responded with a massive demonstration, and fought against the capitalist class's attempt to profit from the Suez Crisis. The British workers staged a general strike, and the workers of other countries joined in solidarity. The workers' movement was a significant factor in the defeat of the British and French military attack on Egypt.

The British workers' resistance to the Suez attack was a powerful expression of their determination to defend their country and their democracy. The workers' movement played a crucial role in the defeat of the British and French military intervention, and the workers' resistance was a model for other workers' movements around the world.

More Responses to SWP Broadcasts

More responses to our SWP broadcasts have been received by the SWP and SP. The letters have been published in a series of articles in the "Socialist Standard." The following are some of the letters.

The Arab Nation Will Appreciate Stand

by C. B. C. (New Jersey)

I have been very impressed with the fact that the Arab Nation has been increasingly friendly towards the SWP, as a result of our broadcasts. I would like to see more such programs in the future.

More support from the Arab Nation will be forthcoming, I am sure. The SWP has done a great service in bringing to the attention of the world the plight of the Arab people.

THE MILITANT

Comments on Hallinan Letter

By GEORGE BREITMAN

In the Oct. 22 issue of THE MILITANT we published a letter from Vincent Hallinan, the former leader of the Communist Party and the Militant toward other radical organizations. At the time that letter was written, Hallinan was a close colleague of the Militant in organizing a new political party, the Democratic Socialist Party, a new political organization that we are pleased to support.

However, we have since learned that Hallinan has not been able to continue with this work and has been forced to withdraw from his party. It is a sad day for us to see this happen, but we respect Hallinan's decision and wish him well.

DUTY TO DEFEND RIGHTS

Every day, people are forced to struggle for their rights. This struggle is not easy, but it is necessary if we are to defend our freedoms. We support the workers' movement and the struggle for social justice.

In the case of Vincent Hallinan, he has shown that he understands this duty. His letter is a valuable contribution to the struggle for democratic rights.

VINCENT HALLINAN

In his letter, Hallinan has written that the SWP welcomed him back, but it is clear that this was not the case.

As Hallinan has pointed out, the SWP has a long history of trying to control and manipulate its members, and this is something that we cannot accept.

In conclusion, we support Hallinan's right to participate in the democratic process, and we hope that his letter will help to bring about a change in the way that the SWP operates.
