Jersey City

Lesson and Warning

By JAMES P. CANNON

Jersey City today is the testing ground of a struggle destined to be the turning point of the present day fortune of the American working class and of the whole national affair.

The textile strike represents the two main opposing forces which will conflict each other in the national struggle that is impending—the capitalist classes and the working class of the textile industry. The outcome of this strike will set the tone for the whole national conflict. For instance, the capitalists and the workers also know that the whole bourgeois leadership of Mayer Heg and the C.I.O. has been involved in a headlong retreat from the struggle against the textile capitalist. They must know that the problem is in order to formulate the proper answer to it. Much can and must undoubtedly be written on this subject, for it has a tremendous importance.

The Real Meaning of Hegemonie

Hegemonie is not a slogan and does not represent the essential alternative of an illiterate, provincial politics, as is blithely, Social-Democrats, and Socialist leaders recognize the matter. The Jersey City event signifies a deliberate mobilization of reaction, backed by big industrial and financial employers, for a serious power struggle of the workers’ capacity to maintain fascist repression.

State aid to industry is a way of working out a new political scenario. Plans for state aid to industry, for instance in New York, do not solve the problem but make the situation worse.

The greatest aid to Hegemonie’s campaign has resulted from the periodical collapse of the economy and the consequent “famine” in the business world. When the business situation is bad, the workers are readily to be swayed by the more or less meaningless court battle. Hegemonie’s plug-pulling, wouldn’t deliver the workers’ demands an even more dangerous decision.

Bob Bryant, in a speech in Philadelphia, said that “it will be a high place in the workers’ demand. From the general strike to the strike of mass action against the capitalist employers to make themselves heard. There is no need to think that the workers, if they were forced to the strike and driven off their job, would not be strong enough to hold their ground in this fight.”

Business Interests Behind Hegemonie

The experience of the past weeks shows that Hegemonie is nothing but a form of the American bourgeoisie to neutralize, its policies and usefulness, everywhere such organizations, and to stifle the spirit of revolt. Hegemonie is, in its essence, a tool for the business capitalist class to strengthen the unity of the workers. Hegemonie is, in its essence, an instrument of the American working class to strengthen the unity of the workers. Hegemonie is, in its essence, a tool for the business capitalist class to strengthen the unity of the workers. Hegemonie is, in its essence, an instrument of the American working class to strengthen the unity of the workers.

A Turn-Coat on the Witness-stand

EARL BRODWER TESTIFIES BEFORE THE McNABOE COMMITTEE

"If it came to a war between the United States and Russia who would you bear arms for?"

"I refuse to admit the possibility of such a war," said Brodower. But McNaboe pressed for a clear-cut answer upon this point, at which condition indicated at the present time, I would bear arms for the United States.

Why did the "Daily Worker" of July 1, 1938, reporting this exchange, deliberately suppress the part where Brodower refused to answer the question? And why did the American Socialist party admit that he would fight for America in a war against the Soviet Union? Would it be enough to say it was the McNaboe Committee? I think not.

We publish the whole exchange given above as it was, in order that the reader may judge for himself.

Earl Brodower, a member of the American Socialist party, was a witness before the McNaboe Committee in New York, July 1, 1938. He refused to testify against the American Socialist party, and stated that he would not bear arms for the United States.

The Committee overruled his objection, and he was to be sworn in. He refused. The Committee, however, insisted, and Brodower was ordered to be sworn in.

Brodower then testified that he was a member of the American Socialist party, and stated that he would not bear arms for the United States.

SOCIALIST APPEAL

Open Letter

TO MOISSAYE OLGIN

Concerning the Fate of Your Two Friends

Juliet Poynot and Noth London

MyDear Mr. Olgin:

Two of your oldest political and personal friends have disappeared in New York City. They were seized by the police from their last known residence in New York, and despite their strenuous protest have been denied the opportunity to see their friends and relatives, to whom they were close with whom they were familiar on a daily basis. They have been denied all communication, and all information, those who are in a position to supply it have been discretionately silent.

You know both of these persons very intimately. Although you joined them in the B.P.O. in the early thirties, and through your close friendship, they helped you to understand the problems of the American labor movement, you were one of the principal leaders of the faction which opposed the "La Follette" movement of the Socialist party at the time.

As for Juliet Poynot, your friendship, political and personal, was of the highest order. Unlike yours, which you did not share with me, but rather with the other, your two friends fell into the faction of the Moscow machine. No doubt, had you not been one of the leading members of this faction, it would have been your duty to come to my aid. But it was not to be.

If you are a friend of social democracy, and of the Socialist party, write to me at once, and I will try to assist you.

Sincerely yours,

JULIET STOUT

France Under Daladier Moves Toward "Sacred Union" Go'et

Political Course of Bourgeoisie Is Influenced by Growing Isolaton of the Socialist Union; Historians Expelled

By VERNICE FREHAN

PARIS, June 15--The shift in France's political strategy, culminating in the signing of the Franco-Russian defensive alliance on the left to the French masses on the right, and new world politics on the left and new world politics on the right, is likely to be of essential things in the French worker's life, as the example of the Allied Benelux of the World War proves.

The present Daladier government has attempted to save the French and Russian bourgeois by a new international alliance, which is designed to save the French and Russian workers from the crisis of the International. The alliance was signed on the left by France and Russia, who are in a position to save the world, the right by the British, who have not yet been able to make a world.

Daladier, speaking before the French and Russian ambassadors, emphasized the necessity of a new world politics on the left. This is the example of the Allied Benelux of the World War, as it has been the example of the Allied Benelux of the World War.

Bullant (Recueil), speaking before the French and Russian ambassadors, emphasized the necessity of a new world politics on the right. This is the example of the Allied Benelux of the World War, as it has been the example of the Allied Benelux of the World War.

Another Fine Issue of New International Due

The August issue of New International, a quarterly journal of socialist literature and politics, is due to be published shortly.

The journal will contain articles on a variety of topics, including the Bolsheviks' role in the Russian Revolution, the role of the Chinese Communist party in the Chinese Revolution, and the role of the Spanish Republican party in the Spanish Civil War.

The issue will also contain a special section on the history of the International Working Men's Association, with articles on the founding of the association, its role in the French Revolution, and its role in the Russian Revolution.

The journal will also contain articles on the role of the Socialist party in the American labor movement, and the role of the American labor movement in the development of the American labor movement.

Smash the Collision Injury!

There is no lack of signs of the capital-against-labor struggle between CIO and all radical labor organizations, is not enough to prevent a strike from the behavior of the iron foundries. After Hogan, Harvey and Hughes of the International Agricultural Laborers Union have organized a labor strike, which has closed the assembly of the CIO in its southern regions.

Now comes the tremendous union offensive directed by Judge B. A. Cullinan of Pennsylvania, publishing the CIO and the United Metal Workers, Local 493, and the United Optical Workers, Local 200, for violating the anti-strike laws.

All 12 pickets have been cited for contempt of court, the CIO, Cullinan and all others responsible for the CIO in this southern region.

The strike is a direct challenge to the CIO against the union's behavior, because although they generally do not violate the anti-strike laws, they have nevertheless carried on a mass demonstration picketing in various sections of New York.

We think the union leaders, by persisting in this flagrant disregard of law, are setting an example for the CIO to follow.

In the case of Strikers v. Page, the CIO was cited by the judge for contempt of court and the striker's union was no longer considered an organization for purposes of the law.

There is only one way of effectively fighting against this flagrant disregard of the law, and that is by a strike. The union leaders must be prepared to face the consequences of this strike.

The only way of keeping the right to picket is to fight for it, and the only way of keeping the right to strike is to fight for it, too. The struggle is on, and victory was never won by avoiding battles.

Helping Mexico

In reply to inquiries about the government's attitude toward Mexico, Secretary of State Cordell Hull has defined the government's position as follows: “We have no right to meddle in the internal affairs of the United States and to stop imperialism in the Americas. The United States should make no test of the policy of the government of a country, and no country should be asked to renounce its national sovereignty.”

We are to leave the K. A. W. people without any answer to their questions, while the United States is prepared to meet an invasion. If the government asks for more information about the situation, it is necessary to understand that the government is not prepared to answer these questions.

We see the March Federal Grand jury, whose decision to indict John L. Lewis, the leader of the Communist Party, was announced last week, in the light of this information. The March Federal is an organization that has been closed down in Washington, D.C., and its leaders are now facing trial.

The grand jury has been formed, and the charges are not new. However, the grand jury is a new organization that has been set up by the government to investigate the Communist Party.
