New Attempt Made To Frame Leon Trotsky

Goldman Challenges Dies Agent On Slanderous Charge Alleging Trotsky's Soviet Link

A fresh attempt to frame Leon Trotsky came to light this week. This time it was at the Washington sessions of the hearing Dies Committee investigating an "American" activity. An investigator named John C. Merrill gave testimony purporting to link Trotsky with the Communist Party and the Fourth Front in Mexico, with the aid of a document containing an unsigned letter which allegedly shows Trotsky's name. Merrill charged that Trotsky "should have his name stricken from the rolls of the Socialist Labor Party," and added that a new demand for "reprisals against Trotsky and Comintern" is not a new demand but "an old one." Merrill also alleged that Trotsky has been "measured in Mexico," and that he was "on the same side" as Mussolini.

The story was presented in a way that suggested that the Dies Committee was investigating "Nazism," but the Committee's action was really directed against Trotsky. Merrill's testimony was based on a document which he claimed was in the possession of the American government. The document was a letter from Trotsky to a Russian government official, dated May 19, 1927. It was signed by Trotsky, and was sent to the Russian government in order to explain to them the situation in Mexico. The letter was never published, and was not made public by Merrill.

The attempt to frame Trotsky was made in order to weaken the influence of the Communist Party in the United States. The Dies Committee has been investigating the activities of the Communist Party in order to undermine its influence and prevent it from gaining power. This is part of a larger effort to weaken the influence of socialist and communist movements around the world.

Czech Parties Long Prepared For Authoritarian Regime

By W. KELLER

When the Poles turned the tables on the members of their Nazi-dominated government in Warsaw last week, they moved one step closer to the goal they had long sought: the establishment of a totalitarian state. The Polish government, which was overthrown in the coup, had been under the control of Marshal Konrad Adenauer, who had held power since 1933.

In view of the fact that the Poles are more than twice as numerous as the Germans, it is certain that a new government will soon be established in Poland. If the Poles are successful, they will be in a position to organize a new state, and the German government will be forced to recognize its existence.

The Poles have been preparing for this event for some time. They have been building up a strong army, and they have been arming themselves. They have also been organizing a new government, and they have been preparing for the day when they will be able to assert their independence.

The Poles are also prepared to use force if necessary. They have been building up a strong navy, and they have been developing their air force. They have also been preparing for the day when they will be able to assert their independence.
