Army Bill Voted by House Is
One More Step on Road

Last week, in an action unprecedented in the entire history of this country, the House of Representatives voted unanimously and, without even the proposal for a single amendment, the bill was reported, approved, and adopted in its entirety. The bill is the army bill, which provides for the appointment of officers and men for defense purposes.

By this victorious vote, the house forced the previous speaker's objection to the proposal of the president and the house agreed to the proposal for the appointment of officers and men for defense purposes.

Huge is the sum of this regular army appropriation, nevertheless, it is a big step for the total allotment budget for the army. But the bill is passed, and its provisions are enacted into law.

Gandhi Fast Is Forerunner of Major Indian Struggles

Gandhi’s fast is a forerunner of major Indian struggles, as it has inspired countless people to fight for their rights and freedom. His nonviolent approach to social change has been a source of inspiration for many, and his fasts have become a symbol of the resistance against oppression.

Gandhi's fasting is a way of expressing his commitment to the principles of nonviolence and civil disobedience. He believed that by demonstrating his readiness to suffer harm, he could inspire others to stand up for what is right.

The struggle for India's independence from British colonial rule was a long and arduous one, with many people losing their lives in the fight for freedom. Gandhi’s fasting was a part of this struggle, and his sacrifice and perseverance inspired others to continue the fight.

Gandhi’s fasting has also become a symbol of resistance for other oppressed communities around the world. It is a reminder of the power of nonviolent action and the importance of standing up for what is right, even in the face of adversity.

The fasts of Gandhi have been a significant influence on many other movements and leaders around the world. They continue to inspire people to fight for justice and equality, and his legacy will live on as a reminder of the power of nonviolence and the importance of standing up for what is right.

In the World of Labor

The Case of Peter Forder
Germans and Refugees

In June, 1959, two courageous anti-Nazi German workers, Peter Forder and Klaus Pux, founded a committee at Buerenach in West Germany. An anti-Nazi German worker, Forder was a former employee of a British .company. He had joined the British Red Cross as a nurse and later became an anti-Nazi politician. He was captured and imprisoned by the Nazis in 1933. After World War II, he was released from prison and emigrated to the United States. Forder then became involved in the anti-Nazi movement in the United States and founded the American Friends Service Committee (AFSC). The AFSC is a non-profit organization that works for social justice and peace. The AFSC has been involved in many peace and human rights campaigns, including the anti-Nazi movement. The AFSC works to promote international understanding and cooperation, and to end the use of violence as a means of solving conflicts. The AFSC works with local communities and organizations to address issues of social justice and peace, and to promote understanding and cooperation between people of different cultures and backgrounds. The AFSC also provides resources and support to individuals and organizations working to promote social justice and peace. The AFSC is committed to working for a world free from violence and oppression, and to promoting human rights and dignity for all people. The AFSC is a member of the International Council of the Red Cross, and works with other organizations to promote international law and to protect the rights of people affected by war and armed conflict.
Japanese Economy Strained To Meet Growing Burdens

Japanese exports now exceed by far the imports of any country other than the U.S. Japan's import trade is said to be more than triple that of the world's second largest importer, Great Britain. This is a very serious fact for the country's policy makers, as Japan's large export trade is its only means of paying for its food, raw materials, and industrial equipment. The trade balance should be in favor of Japan, but it is now becoming a serious problem for the country, as the imports are increasing faster than the exports.

The country's external trade has been deteriorating for more than a year. Imports increased by 13.3% in 1937, and by 29.5% in 1938. The country's foreign exchange reserves, which are expected to cover the country's imports for about six months, have been reduced to less than half the amount of previous years. This is a serious situation for Japan, as it is a country that is heavily dependent on foreign trade.

The country's export trade has also been decreasing. The country's exports, which were once the country's main source of income, have been decreasing due to the decrease in demand for Japanese goods in the rest of the world.
