A crowd of five hundred workers participated in an anti-Coplin strike on Thursday, March 15, at the Molson brewery in Toronto. The striking workers were joined by supporters from other unions, including the Canadian Auto Workers and the United Steelworkers of America.

The strike was sparked by the recent layoffs at the brewery, which has led to a significant reduction in wages and benefits for workers. The workers were also seeking improvements to workplace safety and the implementation of a minimum wage agreement.

The Molson brewery is one of the largest employers in the area and is known for its severe working conditions. The workers have been struggling for several years to improve their working conditions and the company has repeatedly refused to negotiate.

The strike has sparked a wave of solidarity among workers across the country and has led to a coordinated effort to support the Molson workers. This has been met with a strong response from the company, which has threatened to take legal action against the workers and their union.

The workers have vowed to continue their strike until their demands are met, and the situation remains tense as negotiations continue.

In the meantime, the community is coming together to support the workers and their families, holding vigils and rallies in solidarity. The workers are encouraged to continue their efforts and to stay united in their fight for justice.

The Molson brewery is located in the heart of the city, and the strike has caused significant disruption to the local economy. The workers are determined to fight for their rights and to ensure that their voices are heard.

The situation is expected to remain tense for some time, but the workers are hopeful that their efforts will eventually lead to a fair settlement. In the meantime, they are committed to continue their struggle for a better future.

The workers are encouraged to stay informed and to take part in the ongoing support efforts. They are invited to join the community in their solidarity and to stand together in the face of adversity. The workers are confident that their efforts will eventually lead to a positive outcome.
In the Labor Unions

By B. J. WIDICK

The workers who did not get stirred up about the Agwy case must not lose sight of the fact that the C.I.O. unites over one million workers into unions and that it is a fact of life that must be faced by this world.

There is no doubt that the weekly-wage unionists who have gathered in the present legal and court system are the true labor leaders of the present movement.

The impasse of the Republic Steel workers is a clear indication of the situation that has come to pass in the U.S. today.

These unionists know that the strike is the only way to protect the present gains and to ensure a better future for the working class.

The strike is the weapon that can be used to defend the present gains and to ensure a better future for the working class.

Goodyear Gall

Picketing is not a new phenomenon, it has been with us for many years. In fact, it was one of the first forms of direct action used by workers to demand better wages and working conditions.

Goodyear has always been on the front lines of the labor movement, and we know that it is not easy to picket a plant.

If we have to go through with this, we will do it, and we will not let anyone stop us. We are united and we are strong.
